Secretarial Training, Its Program And Possibilities

By L. A. WISE

One of the necessary qualifications of a secretarial student is the right attitude. Why is this so? To be efficient in any field one must be interested in that field. First, the type of subject matter must be interesting to the student, and second, the employment that one will find after graduation must be of interest. It is not possible to become efficient in the field of shorthand unless one is interested in it. It is desirable that one to become an efficient secretary have a rate of not less than 100 words a minute. The shorthand and other office work must be able to use that training to good account. Practically all the typewriting, filing, and other office work in commercial work require accuracy and personality in business and other usages that promote accuracy. It can be generally agreed that a business office is a place of notoriety and a secretary must have the best qualifications. For instance, the principles of modesty and kindness should be practiced while in the office. A secretary should possess a thorough knowledge of English and other languages as well as a good knowledge of history. There are other subjects that a secretary must study, such as typing, shorthand, and other usages that promote accuracy.
