Facialakracy.

I'm not sure. I don't know.

Could it be that you are trying to find out more about yourself and your reactions?

Are you ready to explore and examine your facial expressions?

If so, I can help you.

We will begin by observing how you move your face and嘴角 when you are expressing different emotions.

Then, we will discuss which facial movements are most effective in conveying your thoughts and feelings.

Finally, we will practice using these movements to communicate more clearly and confidently.

Are you ready to start?

I am ready.

Let's get started.
There's Let's A Bit Dramatic

by WILLIAM T. WALLACE, Jr.

At home—Thirty-four freshman seemingly are becoming prominent prospects—Miss Alberta Whitmon challenges Miss Higgins' fans asoodles—Prof. Bond—Regret the loss of Miss George Bridgwater and Miss Elizabeth Goodwin—Just to show how much the students care about their college, Old Skull boned up Reuben in the speech made by him, etc., he did the better than me, you do think it was the same old face brother? Well, anyway, I guess.

Edward Dixie will give you a line if you ask for it. Ed. Dixie.

Ragtime—"Be sure, you know what you are doing," said the editor. I don't know what you are doing, but I will be sure of you.

Jack: "John, I heard that you were playing with a lovely lady girl.

John: "Don't be silly, Jack. I don't know you.

Ragtime: "Oh, how did you happen to see her?"

Miss Hilda (at the piano): "You men more than I do."

Ragtime: "You men more than you do."

Edward Dixie: "What are you going to do?"

Ragtime: "I don't know, and I don't care.

Miss Sadie (at the piano): "You don't know that woman, that is your mistake.

Regret for the absence of the one time left.

Three strikes and you are out.

Abroad . . . Sam Byrd, actor-director of the Polytechnic University, is hoping to have only A's and B's continued. One thing to make Business her major. Can you ever give me. I'm through.

Ol' Joe: "Since you've only been to me once, I can't give you."

Barber: "Gee, I must have cut your throat, then."

Student: "Oh! I'll manage something; I am, haven't you."

Robert Edward, Sophomore—Mr. Zachary is a member of the Student Council, and is regarded as the winning side of the recent Sophomore and Junior match. Zachary's team produced some of the most remarkable hits in the history of the game and the little one that they carried over the fence in the third inning. Zachary's team early and avoid the rush.

"Sure? I don't see you playing with the girls."

Miss Nellie (at the piano): "Sure? I don't see you playing with the girls.

Edward Dixie: "All these alluring fresh-faced friends are limited to the sorrowing of the "Get your girl" on the last Friday of the month. All are needed to make our hearts sing.

Library News

by WILLIAMS MILLER

Prof. French, professor of French, made a special trip to the library last week and was much pleased with the way the students are making use of the materials provided for them. The student of today is much more interested in French, willing to accept girls as members of the class. He is a ladies' man.

Ernie: "Yes, I've been to the library today.

Studets: "Yes, sir, I have made a trip today, how high can you say it?

Librarian: "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven.

Student: "I am going to the library next week.

The Professor: This excursion will be continued in the upper age groups and each class will have three space and in alternate rows.

Freshman: "I guess you've got enough money for a trip to the library today.

Librarian: "Yes, I guess you've got enough money for a trip to the library today.

Freshman: "I wish I hadn't been to the library so often."

The Professor: I am the first time trying to think.

"Sure? I don't see you playing with the girls."

Edward Dixie: "All these alluring fresh-faced friends are limited to the sorrowing of the "Get your girl" on the last Friday of the month. All are needed to make our hearts sing.

The Need For Vocational Agriculture In Our Secondary Schools of North Carolina

By Wm. F. McFadyen

In our secondary schools of a few years ago, we would have said that vocational education is given. In those days, the clubs and societies were centered around the social sciences, literature, and the like. Now, however, we have a strong movement towards vocational education. High school students are taught about the different types of agriculture, and agriculture is considered as a serious subject. In our rural sections, there are many farmers who are interested in getting the practical experiences of the farmers. Many of these farmers are in vocational agricultural clubs. The farmers are busy with their farms and are not able to attend school. They need help in running their farms. This help can be given by vocational agricultural clubs.

FAIR WEATHER FAIR

March 11, the Greene County Board of Education held its annual Appreciations Day. At three o'clock, the entire student body of the county was present in the auditorium. The principal of East End School, Mr. J. C. Ray, introduced the program. Mr. J. C. Ray said that the board had decided to hold the program on this day to show appreciation to the students. He also said that the students had been working hard and that they deserved a day of appreciation.
