Week of Prayer Observed Here

The Annual Religious Emphasis Week better known as The Week of Prayer, proved of great benefit to the student body and visitors who attended.

Rev. J. Raymond Henderson of the Wheat Street Baptist Church, Atlanta, Georgia, very ably conducted the services. Through his contact and interest in young people he showed a profound understanding of the problems that confront the student body and his advice and counsel was very enthusiastic. To say that his audiences were very appreciative is putting it mildly, however, those who attended the assemblies received much food for thought.

The theme of the week was “To ward a Christian Philosophy of Life.” The subjects of his messages were Wednesday, March 16, “The Trust of Being;” Thursday, March 17, “The Trust of Hardship;” Friday, March 18, “The Trust of Happiness;” and Sunday, March 19, “The Trust of Reconciliation.”

Open forums were conducted each afternoon in the band room at 5:00, and it was here that the students were given enlightenment and advice upon their various problems.

Music was furnished for the occasion by the Choral Society and other groups under the direction of Mr. Lawson.

A. & T. Annexes The Championship After Many Years of Court Tills

The buildings copped their first CIAA basketball crown in grand style by whipping the Morgan College Bears in their first tilt 37-26. It was a thrilling contest with breathtaking plays on both sides. From the Monumental City held A. & T. at a 6-1 advantage for ten minutes. Then with the CIAA crown as an aim the Bulldogs started the battle that carried them through the season victorious.

The bulldogs lost only three games out of twenty-three starts. It was a tough grind, for the A. & T. quintette found all the conference teams having hard opponents. Throughout the season competition has been first class. Players have come to the conference from the best prep school court centers. The Bulldogs made an enviable record throughout the season by showing good sportsmanship and a superior brand of ball.

Three years ago two lads reported at court practice and upon being asked if they could play basketball said in a rather modest way, “Well, we don’t know much.” It was typical of freshmen athletes.

Feb. 26—Dr. W. J. McNally, of High Point, N. C., the youngest number of our trustees board, gave very timely advice especially for those who are about to venture out in life. Said he, “We achieve our own successes or permit our failures. This problem of life is up to you. Nobody can do it for you. You don’t need money, no hope, faith, courage and a willingness to work.” And finally “justify yourselves as to what man and God expect of you.”

Gives Preview Of Spring Activities

The Athletic Department, believing in the philosophy that “all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy,” is providing adequate opportunity for the student body to participate in wholesome recreation from now on. Some of the activity will, of course, be CIAA competition, and after activity will be provided solely for the benefit of those who do not wish to participate in the intercollegiate sports, but who wish to preserve merely for the personal and physical benefits derived therefrom.

Track and tennis will be the main CIAA events of the Spring.

Public Pulse

"Napkin"

It seems as though we will end our improved dining room and kitchen officials waited until one student was chosen over another before they entered anymore. We are college students and should be able to serve our own needs. The teachers and students of the special table have been getting napkins at every meal. Aren’t we college people as well as they are?—A STUDENT.

Presumably, the purpose of the Register is to serve the needs of the students, a means by which the students may convey and express the opinions they advocate. Similarly we hope that such is the case with the Register. For the editorial and feature sections of the Register are poor sections indeed. It is a sad thing to see the comments of students...
In Memory of Joseph Wells
A young man smiled one day.
It seemed that we could hear him say:
"Oh! God! our father who dost
And hold the reign over every man.
Come, wilt thou walk with me, as thou didst walk with Galliée?
And walk with me, as I am to be done
That I no more may see the sun.
Then I will go the whole day thus
Thinking and praying only you.
Now this young man's days are done.
No more can he behold the sun.
Ah! but this young man doth stand.
He holds a place at God's right hand.

Ode To Hazle
I never knew there was rhythm in the rain,
I never felt the songs that the wind so sweetly sang.
I never notice the sky of blue, or the red
And the sun going through.
I never know the feelings of the people.
The shipping of the cricket as the day departs.
I never notice that everything seems
To be in rhythm with my heart.
I'm in a world of happiness and a world that's new.
Since the day I met you.
I found in the stories of you,
You put something in my heart: that only you could do.
I've cast my lot on the storied path of fate.
I want to be the one, but you are the mate.
Do you always do the things that bring joy and happiness,
And never do the things that bring you sadness.
When the rhythm is good and the song is hard to find,
When you look around and tell, I will answer your call.
And when the sea is calm and all in peace,
I will take off my hat and salute, Captain Hazel.

POETS CORNER

The Poem I Dedicated To You
The curtain of life was falling fast,
As the tumultuous storm world passed,
North and South, I've blazed the trail.
Until I found my immortal grail.
Her melody has the splendor of the sunset,
There's a heavenly dream in her eyes.
Her rare Southern beauty with her history,
I've found my love to the world.
And once more in the midst of our search.
These are the last of my thoughts.
There is nothing left to live for.
As I clean this heavenly dream to see my bent,
In the passion of her immortal gaze.
Life blazed to its zenith of best.
-Robert F. Holden

Jaki's Questions
Do you think you are a real man?
Do you like Hershey's Chocolate bars?
Jaki, Jaki darling, mother knows you're only three,
But you can make yourself such a little bee.
In my eyes, you're a champion, and he doesn't have a car.
And he always was his spinach and carrots.
Now, Wally goes to bed at night and is never, never late,
And she is so strapping that I thought you'd be tuckered out.

What Are You Reading? by W. MILLER
You like reading, don't you?
Then, now is the time to continue to cultivate that fine and excellent habit of reading. In reading, a man has so little besides him for pleasure, but what can he do but to get a book and read it or to go to the library and read the book of interest to him?

ERRATA

In the previous issue, there was an error in the article about the recent fraternity formal. The article should have read:

1st Clown—Do you know what the scale is for?—No."
2nd Clown—Sure, it's a simple on a fish's back."
1st Clown—No! Not a scale goes on for 'til we get a fish."
2nd Clown—Well, a fish's go from Sea to Sea.

HUMOR

Naomi: I'm a freshman girl with little experience. I was contemplating on coming to A. and T., some one said to me "There are many girls here." Another person, "I don't think you will like the place," I have heard so and so (undesirable remarks). I did not pay much attention to what they said, but as most of the A. and T. girls graduated that I knew we were so saturated that what I heard didn't really matter I came on.

But when I went home last Xmas, I was confronted with questions such as this, "To those boys up there respect the girls?" "If you are going are you allowed to be out of the dormitory?" "What are the girls taught?" "Is it true that the A. and T. men run off to see other girls in the city and to other campuses?"

I answered the questions as well as I could. But many of these things never happened, said that they too. In spite of the fact that the five hundred could not be expected to remember the names of all the freshmen they just can't get a break and consider the college as one. As for dormitory rules, those inquirers would be surprised to know that they are stricter than those of a number of other colleges. The girls are given more freedom, but in spite of this, there is another group of men who respect those who want to be respected, and still another who are. "What have you heard so and so (undesirable remarks). I did not pay much attention to what they said, but because I told them so and so (undesirable remarks). I did not pay much attention to what they said, but because I told them that they would like that college because I will like that college."

And so, the girls do in the same way about A. and T. originally, and still is, the name of Clarence O. We are very busy preparing for our Annual May Week program, which will begin May 3, at which time we will present our Regional Director, Rev. Mary J. Nightengale, Washington, D. C., along with other interesting programs in chapel.

Although even we few in number, we sincerely hope that you will attend our various activities and programs in the Delta society. Your presence will be appreciated.

You will be hearing and seeing more from us throughout the remaining year. We will be keeping you posted as to our progress at the end of the school term.

Theatre and Tea! That is how Greensboro Delta Sigma Theta Beta Theta Beta Theta cookie entertainers were honored on the evening of February 16, by the affiliate members in Jazz and Blues gala.

The guests began to arrive at North Dormitory at 6:45 p.m. The evening air felt so hot coming in from the outside but were not only beautiful to look at, but quite fitting to the occasion. In the midst of a few moments of socializing, the doors opened, and at 6:45 the group was off to the Civic Arena (special seats reserved for the entertainers). Among the Jonestown-Mayo's Golden Gala production "Champaigne Waltz," starring Beauty and Fred MacMurray.

The first part of the evening having been thoroughly enjoyed, another one again on the campus in the band "Under the Bridge." The soft hit table later took a temporary,_di known as jazz and blues gala, of course, evoked a very home-like atmosphere that was most pleasing. NAOMI OF A. & T.

Little Boy: Papa, when they install a preacher in a church, do they put him in a stall and feed him.

Pa: No, Son, they hire him to a church and expect him to pull it.

Billy: Your little bank is empty. Why?

Pa: Because the little boy, "yesterday was a rainy day so I spent it.

Instructor: Who is Lesty Baker?

Pa: I am the man who acts in "The House of Mirth."

Daddy: I don't think Mother knows much about raising children, but she's mighty good at it.

Who makes what you think so?

Billy: Well, said the little girl, "She makes me go to bed when I'm wide awake, but now I'm awfully sleepy."

The Trend Of Modern Youth

J O H N  H. M I L L E R, '40

For quite some time I have been a raving and passing comment on the modern manner in which our younger people are conducting themselves, whether in school or in the community, and more particularly in the matter of the subject.

One observation made here and there and in an uncomplimentary manner in an actual participant, I can say it is with the notion that the modern youth, as a group, is neglecting what was considered of importance in the social and physical development.

I feel that the trend of the modern youth is none too serious, that he should wake up and be going about his father's business.

One of the problems that faces the youth today is that of self-control of the stage of action and that was meant. I mean the ability to govern and conduct one's self, at all times, in a desirable and intelligent manner.

More now than ever, the younger people are becoming tired of the good things God has given to the world, and are inclined to turn their backs, and if not to turn, yet not to do anything.

I have seen many of our people who have passed all of their everyday actions without a feeling of regret. It is not human nature, yet cannot help it. His associates are his enemies and not to be trusted, they are doing good or evil, no one can be sure.

The modern youth is also in a position of being of great importance in both social and political manners. When one makes unattainable expectations and wishes, he does not go out to try and keep his word. He is neither good nor bad, only in proportion as he earnestly seeks. We are hurrying like mad to choose you as a pattern.

Have your ambitions as your goal and there as an onlooker and at the manner in which our younger people are conducting themselves, and continue to observe the ways we have been called on to look after. We love and supply and the crowd is still not tiring for their fine play. We are paying tribute to true bearers of Blue and Gold.

We Need Aspirations

Do you not know that your generation has more to offer than the good things our forefathers have been placed on the throne of perfection? Therefore God is going to move on and where he will move, they have no idea. It is no use to hope for the impossible.

This is one of the greatest accomplishments of our time. It will help us to be true to our best ideals and inspire us to do greater things, for their creation is bound to have an important part in making our nation right in today. Without intelligent people working to wisely the various things we want, we shall not have a perfect civilization.

We need intelligent Negro citizens in social and economic fields to help us advance our civilization. In this way, we see college students should work. When a person makes his mind to do it, he is inclined to cooperate in upholding this ideal, for we are anxious for all our people to be come intelligent. Then let us be reminder that all the great and noble things that we want, and that to obtain the positions in life which we wish to hold depend on our continuous desire to reach our aspirations.

—DORIS NEICHOLSON, '40

DURING THE GLEE CLUB'S

Elliott Pettiford, our erstwhile, stand-by tenor, recently left for a while to thrill the crowds at Shaw University, and has since returned with a certain young lady that she ever took her vocal ability away from the world. He is a loyal to a fraternity. He replied, "Yes, I belong to the Delta. I have been initiated into that fraternity, I am going to join the Pledge Club."

Another young man sang off as he mumbled his words. Mr. Law-rence. "Do you have any idea what I am talking about?"

He replied, "I was singing so fast that I don't have any time left. I can't even look at my eye tooth and I couldn't tell what I was singing."
