Student Council Sends Delegation To N.Y.C. Conlab

The Student Council sent a delegation of the members of the proposed Youth Corps, at American University, to Washington, D. C., last week. The delegation consisted of Cecil Butler and Steve Robinson.

The National Youth Service Corps, which was established by President Kennedy early in February, will be closely patterned after the overseas Peace Corps. It will be open to men and women who are at least 18 years of age—youthful people as well as retired individuals.

People who volunteer to serve in the N. Y. C. must be college students or graduates, or have some college work in hand, and must have some social conscience and problems.

A volunteer who is accepted for the Youth Corps, will have several weeks of training, during which time he will be taught about people and their problems.

It is hoped that 500 volunteers will form the nucleus of the project, with an eventual strength of up to 5,000 men and women, in five countries. Volunteers will be sent to areas throughout the world, and projects undertaken will be under the control of local authorities.

The N. Y. C., if established, will mean a long-term commitment of a volunteer's abilities and talents.

Regular students who have not pre-registered will register in the gymnasium during regular registration. Winter quarters will be open by March 16.
Conduct, Our Responsibility

Often it becomes necessary to take upon oneself the unpleasant task of discussing things that need discussing but yet need no discussion, or to dare doing what is considered horrible, but we find that the conduct of the students around the campus needs some discussion.

There has been the cry that we need more recreation, longer classes, greener grass, and better food, but I wonder if the students around this campus are really ready for the above amendments. We need to know whether we are ready for them. We must make an effort to study in the library or try to watch a movie on Friday night instead of coming to class on Monday morning and wonder what happened the past weekend. We must be more ready for such new demands. Now for the most part the rules around the campus are not that bad, but I think that we should try to improve them. If we students were to improve, it would provide a way for better rules.

I am suggesting to you to start an overall personality improvement, and development plan. This may sound somewhat silly to you, but let me start it. No one likes to be around people who are responsible for their conduct. Try evoking the art of being respectable and pleasing. The power to please is a tremendous asset. If you develop a personality which always attracts, then the feeling of pleasing is in being pleasant youself, in being interesting. People shrink from such a character. In the cordially, there must be hearing, to the clients to the lawyer, and to the patients to the doctor.

Secretiveness repels as much as it attracts. No oneThickness is SLEEP. In this article some natural phenomena have been discussed and not the library hours. If there is a personnel problem, I would be glad to help.

No doubt it is common knowledge that sleep is a restorative state of the organism, characterized by inactivity of not merely the brain, but the entire body. Understanding of the chemical and physiological processes that cause a sense of sleep may be not as common as it should be. It is essential in order to understand why the college students are in the minds of the public, and most important of all, in our minds.

Why Do We Sleep?

Moses Kamara

Cerebral natural phenomena have been taken place from time immemorial; yet the reason, we hardly stop to investigate the cause of such occurrences.

One of these natural phenomena is sleep, which is a state of unconsciousness. This state will be shed on this common, this routine is not a normal state of the human body that is 24 hours out of any of the natural races. This is a period of quiescence where the body is completely passive, and the brain has entered a state of lethargy.

There is a need for provisions to be made concerning conduct in the dormitories. These places are usually so crowded that one is unable to use the library at his/ her convenience. If there is a personnel problem, I would be glad to help.

The A&T College REGISTER

By BRADLEY G. SMITH

Hey! YOU! ... YES, YOU! ... NO, you haven't done anything. You've just got to ask yourself one question... "Why do we walk up to the library hours?"

I am writing this letter in regard to the library hours. I feel that the library hours at A&T are quite short. It is really a shame to have to leave a good book after a few hours. There is nothing to do, so we leave and go home. I don't think that the library hours are fair to the students. The library hours are too limited on the male side of the campus, for students don't consider others as they may enter at any time. It is true that the library hours are too limited on the female side of the campus for the students were to improve, it would pave a way for even better rules.

Eventually, in many times many things have been advanced including:

1. The influence of cosmic forces.
2. The influence of the sympathetic nervous system.
3. The existence of an hypothetical central nervous system, and the exhaustion of a probable substance which is the reason of sleep.

The generally accepted idea is that there is a “wakefulness center” located in the brain, which is constantly being stimulated to maintain the brain condition which results in wakefulness. If we are to suppose that the brain condition which results in wakefulness is a function of the brain in that manner, it is necessary to be brought to such a state, but not by proper several nerves chains.

One may ask if the body is sleep and a large blood and brain should keep pace with the blood stream. A client should be ready to use the ability of his condition to be able to rest for a certain period of time. In any case, it is very important whether on campus or off, whether the body is asleep or awake. Therefore, it is necessary to have a restful sleep.

As we walk, our thighs and knees should be tucked in and under. The knees should be kept straight; that is, the knee should be kept straight; that is, the knee should be kept straight; that is poor, to the well-developed. The narrow, stingy soul is not agreeable and pleasing. The power to please is a tremendous asset. If you develop a personality which always attracts, then the feeling of pleasing is in being pleasant youself, in being interesting. People shrink from such a character.

Dean J. I. Barber Speaks To Coeds In Morrison Hall

By MARY JONES

James B. Barber, president of Omega Psi Phi fraternity, was the speaker Sunday, February 17. Speaking to a group of young ladies in section 2A of Morrison Hall, the student president of the university's chapter of the fraternity, he is a 1958 graduate of North Carolina A&T College.

According to the speaker, the philosophy of the Omega Psi Phi fraternity is a code of ethics, and the way of life is a code of conduct. He indicated that the code of ethics is simply a code of conduct, and that the goal of the organization is to help members lead a better life.

Barber said, "Keeping yourself first class rate you, and try to stand on your own two feet emotionally." He continued, "three quarters of all unions are carried on some of the brides in England signed the marriage register, but their signatures are carried on some of the best high school graduates and technical graduates.

Dean Barber challenged the young ladies on this campus and encouraged them to keep high marks and to keep their standards elsewhere to keep their standards. "The need is imperative; the moral is clear. This is a time for action." He urged them to provide scholarship funds for study in this country, Europe, and Africa; transportation costs out of Bulgaria; and residence costs during study here or abroad.

The Association has directed a general appeal to its members; and organizations to meet the pressing needs of the student refugees. It seeks donations from students, interested individuals, and organizations to provide scholarship funds for study in this country, Europe, and Africa; transportation costs out of Bulgaria; and residence costs during study here or abroad.

Air Force And Army ROTC Cadets Are Used In College Recruiting

Cadets of the Air Force ROTC and the Army ROTC, co-operating with Lt. Col. Orville White, are helping to represent A&T College at various high school career days. The chosen cadets re advanced officers who are working towards a commission.

The purpose of the visits is to encourage students to come to A&T College. Cadets talk to interested students, asking what benefits A&T can offer, both while in school and after graduation. They tell the boys about the ROTC program, the field of study, and the opportunity to work for pay during the summer. Pamphlets are distributed to supplement the information.

They also set up a display and answer questions that may arise in the discussion.

Several cadets have already visited schools. They include R. C. Johnson, who went to A. H. Anderson High School in Winston-Salem; William Smith Consolidated School, Gooch; Willie E. Rodgers, Highgate high School, Varna; Willie Brown Prime High School, Salisbury; Carles Williams; F. E. Belt, W. L. Gordon, and Luther Parker, E. J. Hayes High School, Wilmington; R. J. Short, Fintney High School, Cartersville and Upchurch High School in Ralsei were also visited.

Among the schools they plan to visit are Williams High School, Wilmington; Stephen Lee High School, Asheville; E. P. Hamrick High School, Wilson; Braysville High School, Scotland Neck, William Penn High School, High Point; Green Street High School, Reidsville; R. O'Keeley High School, Mebane; Central High School, Winston-Salem, and Church High School, Thomasville.

The Army ROTC sends a representative with each Air Force representative.

National Student Association Begins African Freedom Fund

The U. S. National Student Association, an organization of students from four hundred colleges and universities, announced today the creation of an African Freedom Fund to meet the pressing needs of the three hundred African students who dramatically announced their decision to and their study at Bulgarian universities.

This decision by the African students, which has been received internationally as a heavy blow to racism in the communist bloc, was also the result of building resentment against the Bulgarian government's attempts to indoctrinate them and to control their efforts to meet the present and future needs of the student refugees.

The Association has directed a general appeal to its members; and organizations to meet the pressing needs of the student refugees. It seeks donations from students, interested individuals, and organizations to provide scholarship funds for study in this country, Europe, and Africa; transportation costs out of Bulgaria; and residence costs during study here or abroad.

The USNSA, through the Coordinating Secretariat of National Unions, is in touch with the African students and the Chana officials who are assisting them. Some individuals are already committed to providing financial aid to the students for travel and for language study.

ROTC Unit Makes Ready For Competition

"To foster a spirit of leadership among the students, the ROTC unit is one of the many groups whose purpose is to maintain a high efficient drill company" says an officer in the campus ROTC Unit. The unit is composed of basic and advanced Army and Air Force ROTC cadets who manifest a high degree of discipline and cooperation.

The organization is of national fame, and is part of the Fourth Regiment of the nation's largest ROTC program, which is composed of Pershing Rifles during this school year.

The army ROTC Drill Team, which is composed of Pershing Rifles, is now getting ready for Drill Meet in the annual Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D. C. and the Pershing Rifles drill meet in Greenville, South Carolina. Both events will be held in April.

This is one occasion when I shall not try to tell the reader the text of the film since it is extremely Fantasy.

Rather, what I shall try to do is convey a sense of the victory and triumph of the motion picture industry in bringing "Raisin" to the screen. This example should serve as a demonstration of the knuckles of those reactionary individuals who degrade the medium as being inferior to the printed word.

The difficulties facing the producer, director, and writer in translating a production designed for the stage into a quality film are very hazardous. On stage, space is at a minimum; therefore, movement must be kept somewhat to a minimum. Space is compensated for by well-written dialogue and active and well-constructed plot (although plot is not indispensable).

On the other hand, the motion picture is movement. Characterization, action, and plot are enhanced by the scope the camera can achieve. This is the aim of what one expects when one goes to a motion picture, to direct the picture as they would direct the play very often fail in their effort, for some unknown reason, they will not recognize the difference between the two MEDIA. Although "Raisin" suffers slightly from this fact, it can achieve. This enhancement is gained was a thoroughly moving and memorable experience. Taken in its entirety, what emerged was a film which held the kind of brilliance seldom seen since the Robert Alda of the George C. Scott's performance. But I think the director of "Raisin" might have sensed the need of having the film "make sense" to the audience. The movie take place outside of the apartment, the film to show some of the exterior environment with Walter Lee's job as childhood which produced the protagonist's recognizable frustration. The result of this effort was good, but it could have been much better, simply by showing more of this environment. This would have given extra credibility to the realism of Walter's predicament and without taking away from the focal point of the story which was centered around his interior environment (this family).

As close as I can remember from the Harrison Player's production of the play, "Raisin" came to the screen practically intact. If there was anything deleted, I could not detect it; but this may or may not be due to faulty memory on my part.

In portraying Walter Lee Younger, a man frustrated and thwarted to terrific prophecies by his environment, Sidney Poitier coups across the screen second only, in my opinion, to Marlon Brando. Poitier makes one not only feel for him, but his intenseness excites such a powerful force on the viewer that one feels with him. This is the highest attainment any actor can accomplish. This, it is truly said, is the object of drama; three others of what you have felt.

The scene in which Mrs. Younger gives Walter the money in order that he may have the dignity and pride so obviously lacking in, but not try to tell the reader the text of the film since it is extremely without a doubt the most significant and emotionally pathetic, powerful, and beautiful. The final scene where he sagaciously changes his mind and takes the money, while the white housing representatives that he and his family will move into all-white neighborhood is one of the most moving sights of acting ever to be etched on the screen.

As If In A Dream

The wall between us is thin,
I have cried with you in the night,
My pillow this morning was wet.
For I cried with you,
I did not do it knowingly.
I heard you crying in the night.
I was resolved into one and time has ceased to flow,
I am the beginning and I am the END.

By Ossie Davis could hardly do more than lend extra truth to Poitier's performance. Whatever he is on the screen, even when he has little or no dialogue to express himself (as in the scene where Mrs. Younger tells him that his wife is pregnant), he commands the viewer's attention like a hypnotist. But I would not be entirely honest in this praise of Poitier's acting if I did not mention a fact that is almost completely overlooked by the rest of his electric performance.

This is the one scene specifically where his friend comes to tell him Walter has slipped town with the money). Poitier's emotion got the best of him, causing him to turn and walk away as though he were doing the cha-cha. But what he did was truly this; his great grief that he had harmed someone by his own actions is something less than his magnificent performance.

Finally, the Library Staff Association deserves high commendation for its work in showing an entertaining film of importance, integrity, and strength. On behalf of the student body, the literary editor offers our sincere thanks.

I

The moment of moments is now approaching.
All the events of a lifetime have it led towards this one point in the space-time continuous.

The infinite forces of destiny are now beginning to invade my innebating.
I feel all the forces of nature uniting against me.

II

The air is polluted with the odorless smell of quiescent chaos.
As the material world is slowly evaporating in to a swirling sea of nothingness,

The chaotic splendor of this turbulent void enchants me,
And I am completely subdued by the intoxicating magnanimity of this barren infinity.

III

A soft phosphorescent glow begins to invade this abyssal void, and I feel the entire, barren world condensing into my very being.
I am now possessed with a wondrous, intoxicating feeling of omnipotence,

For although I am devoid of substance I am everything;
And I have become the world.

I am the sum of all the aspirations and endeavors of myriads of epochs,
I am God; I am space; I am time, and since all events have been resolved into one and time has ceased to flow,
I am the beginning and I am the END.

Organizations Begin Summing Up Activities For Quarter

By JAMES WILDER

Since the quarter is about to end, the various organizations on campus have begun to sum up their activities for the quarter.

The Stylus, a club dedicated to the arts, has recently been featured in several articles in the newspaper. The club, under the leadership ofEleanor Harris, has been active in the campus community.

Other plans include a weekend for activities. These plans have been discussed by the committee and have been scheduled for the upcoming weeks.

The Stylus has also discussed various ways to increase membership and encourage participation.

TIDEWATER AREA CLUB

The Tidecaster Club has renewed its activities for the quarter. This year, it has been under the leadership of Eleanor Harris.

The club recently sponsored a basketball game and has planned several other activities for the month of December.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

During a recent meeting of the student government, the students and Esude Hanoman were elected co-chairmen of the Student Senate.

A proposal to establish a scholarship foundation for students was also discussed. The students agreed that detailed discussion of Hanoman’s proposal be held at the next meeting.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS ASSOCIATION

The organization that has been dedicated to the promotion of international students is now in full swing. The leadership of the organization is being handled by a group of students led by the foreign student representative.

The association has been working hard to ensure that all international students are treated fairly and given the opportunity to participate in all campus activities.

A Faculty Member Gets Invitation From President

By ALLOA Y. PEYTON

One afternoon a couple of weeks ago, I received an assignment to cover a story that was expected to attract much attention. The story concerned the activities of the Alpha Phi Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Psi Fraternity.

The Alpha Phi chapter is a well-known fraternity on campus, and the activities include speeches, panel discussions, and discussions of various topics.

This week, the fraternity has invited a guest speaker to discuss the importance of leadership and effective communication.

The fraternity has also planned a series of activities to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Alpha Kappa Psi Fraternity.

The activities will include a panel discussion on the history of the fraternity, a performance by a local band, and a reception where members can socialize and share their experiences.

The Alpha Phi chapter is looking forward to a successful year and is planning a series of events to celebrate the 50th anniversary.

For more information, interested students can visit the Alpha Phi chapter’s website or contact the chapter’s president.
