Women's Weekend Is Observed At College

Women's weekend was observed March 29-31.

The activities began at 6:30 Friday night with each woman residing in a dormitory or being entertained in an informal fireside chat. The groups discussed various topics related to women in the changing society today. Each theme group was served after the discussion.

Mrs. James E. Petty, the guest speaker at the banquet on Saturday evening, addressed the audience at the Vegetable Garden. She stressed the importance of good qualities and the development of character.

Southall, freshman, Portsmouth, Va.; Jamesville, N. C.; Annie Jacobs, N. J.; Catherine Ramey, president of the College women to strive for the high leadership award, Jackson, N. C. She urged support among his people and the Raiders who only two weeks ago had been defeated by the Panthers, will be members of the Raiders team advisor.

The A&T ROTC Drill team is scheduled to participate in the Cherry Blossom Festival.

Our Student Council...

A short time ago, we attended a conference where it was pointed out that a student council should be interested in representing the students just as well as educating them. Now, taking this statement for the truth that it is in, we look seriously at our own student council — the student council at A&T College of North Carolina and ask ourselves what we have.

Without denial, we have a small scale fraternal organization that has been set up by any particular organization (although this may be true), but because of the social-club method by which it conducts its business.

It has been contended that the student council has been run as if it is being run because of lack of cooperation on the part of the students. Well, this may or may not be true. We urge our readers to make their own conclusions.

Until today there have been very few educational programs laid in by our student council. We have been familiar with the student council of the A&T College as a representative body. This, it would be, ours not, and ours will not be until the officers of the council elected are willing to use some inside and look about the world and find out some of the things that they should concern themselves with.

How many times have there been polls taken to see what position a class representative should take on any issue before the council in order to have the opinion of the entire student body present through the representatives? How many times has the student body, for that matter, been questioned about their likes and dislikes about a particular student or faculty issue?

Our student council has never concerned itself with any issue that offered very much educational opportunity for the student body. Instead, it has been quite concerned with its social affairs. Social affairs are good, and the people working in this area have done a splendid job about the Academic Affairs committee. One does not exist. What about the committees working on the bill of rights? One does not exist here either. What about the student body members of the Academic Affairs committee? Where is it? Is the committee concerned with and working with the administration of faculty and student recruitment? Where is the student committee working on curriculum changes and evaluation? Where is the student committee concerned with the campus building program?

It has been contended by the student council that things are not too bad, and the student council's position is that the situation is not.

Our student council has never tried to imply that these areas should be taken over completely by students, but we do see the need for student participation in these areas. We are grading that the student body members see the importance of having these community at large and more important in the educational system of the state, the nation, and even the world; and we have very few in the group capable of presenting a decent idea in a discussion of Higher Education, simply because at their college they have never heard the term, although they may not have been taught about it. They had no student council that was willing to stand up and say that we (the students) want to participate in these things, we want to know how we would do it. The student body is not concerned with this; but, alas, it may be the duty of the student council to stir up interest in these areas.

Can we get a candidate for student council president who will give us the chance of a lifetime to represent the opportunity for the students of this college? Can we find a man or woman who is willing to ask that the student body members give us a chance to learn some of the things they have not been taught about? They had no student council that was willing to stand up and say that we (the students) want to participate in these things, we want to know how we would do it. The student body is not concerned with this; but, alas, it may be the duty of the student council to stir up interest in these areas.

Becoming a young woman does not mean that you cannot have a head of hair. There are many different ways to wear your hair, and it is important to be aware of the current fashion trends. One option is to have your hair cut in a grown-out bob, which can be both stylish and convenient. Another option is to style your hair in a French twist, which can add a touch of elegance and sophistication to your look. Additionally, you can consider incorporating accessories such as headbands or hair clips to enhance your hairstyle.

In conclusion, becoming a young woman means embracing the beauty and confidence that comes with it. By exploring different hairstyles and styles, you can find what works best for you and express your individuality. The most important thing is to be comfortable and happy with your appearance. Remember, beauty is not just skin deep — it is about feeling confident and attractive inside and out.

"Nigeria Is Headed For Progress", Says Professor

By BERNARD ROBINSON

Dr. L. C. Dowdy, Acting President of The Agricultural and Technical College, recently returned from Africa, and said this week that the new nation of Nigeria is headed for solid and rapid progress.

Giving the opinion was Dr. Vernon C. Johnson, who was chairman of the department of Agricultural Economics at A&T from 1954 through 1957 and since that time has been engaged in foreign service for the federal government.

He arrived in Greensboro, on Sunday, on rotation from his assignment as agricultural economist with the U. S. State Department's Agency for International Development (AID). For the past three years he has worked in Nigeria, with headquarters at Lagos, the federal capital.

Dr. Johnson said several factors stand out, in bold relief, to point to the nation's progress.

"In the first place," he said, "the country is making fervent, almost fanatical, efforts in the development of its educational institutions and facilities, its agricultural programs and industrial resources... and the results are showing up." He mentioned that oil has been newly discovered in the eastern region of the country and since that time an American firm, among others, has moved in for further exploration in other areas of Nigeria.

Dr. Johnson said the fact which has impressed him most is that the people of Nigeria exemplify responsibility, with the help they are receiving, to understand that they have the biggest market potential for goods and services... and the results are showing up.

He added that Nigerians welcome Americans in the highest degree.

While in Nigeria, he had the opportunity to speak to several classes of A&T faculty members who have been doing outstanding jobs in that country. Among those he mentioned were Dr. W. F. Reed, former dean of the College of Agriculture at A&T; Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, president of the college, who was serving as director of the Peace Corps Program; Charles Davis, poultry specialist with the A&T Extension service, and the project director at the Peace Corps Program; Paul M. Sonnichsen, newly appointed president of the University of Nigeria; and Hipolito C. Vorrier, economic specialist with the A&T Extension service in Nigeria.

"Main political influence in the country, and Communist influences appear to be non-existent."

Dr. Johnson said the Nigerian democratic government parallels that of the United States more than most others with which he has had contact. The people believe in free speech, freedom of the press and other fundamental, democratic principles which we adhere to in America.

In speaking of its people, he said Nigerians are open-minded, will listen, and will readily adopt new ideas which they feel will benefit the country and its people.
The Voter Education Project released today a chronological listing of 64 acts of violence and intimidation against Negroes in Mississippi since January 1961. Almost all of the incidents are directly related to efforts by Negroes to register to vote.

The last item on the list is the March 27 dispersal by Greenwood policemen and Sheriff's deputies of Negro registration applicants, and the listing of registration workers' names.

"We are sure this is not a complete list," said Wiley A. Branton, director of the Voter Education Project. "It does demonstrate conclusively beyond the boundaries of discrimination and violence which exists in Mississippi, and makes Constitutional rights virtually impossible in that state."

The listing, he pointed out, does not include the riot at the University of Mississippi last fall, nor subsequent harassment of James Meredith. "All the world knows that story, as it does the earlier story of Emmett Till and Mack Parker. This latest, nearly all of which has been compiled from the daily press, shows what happened at the University should have been expected by anyone familiar with the Mississippi record."

Because of the near-fatal gun attack at Oxford on February 28, just against three hundred white workers, a concerted, state-wide registration campaign was announced on March 1, 1963, in Lee County, and Mississippi, with Greenwood being the county seat.

The LeFlore campaign represents the combined efforts of the Mississippi Council of Negro Organizations, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Congress of Racial Equality, and the local NAACP Youth Council.

The announced objective of the campaign is to get every qualified Negro in LeFlore County registered to vote, if he so desires to do so.

The unprecedented concentration of resources in LeFlore County has led, said Branton, to unprecedented results. "For the first time in Mississippi county, there has been a breakthrough of the fear, which has held Negroes back since March 1, over 500 have walked determinedly to the Greenwood court house, trying to register. Because of the long drawnout process in Mississippi, less many will be passed by the registrars."

from one class to another, they would probably make the walk larger and less beautiful, which would finally make it necessary to plant grass over these express routes and then the job of making newer ones would be left to the upper classrooms. I agreed with him and at one beginning tried to prevent these freshmen from messing up a good thing. I immediately spotted a student and continued student with a unified English Composition. I pitched under his arm about to embark, without provocation, one of our better express routes across campus. To, with good intention, called him to him and explained the situation. I told him the trouble his kind would cause if permitted to use the paths. Surprisingly he agreed and said that I had made an unforgettable mistake. It seems that he was not a freshman but a senior (he finished English). I apologized and told him of his privilege, and he was on his way, probably over ever ace our lovely campus "via express.""}

"What Your Appearance Will Do"

By KENNETH SMITH

Many young men and women make the mistake of thinking that "well dressed" means being excessively dressed; and, with this silly idea in mind, they encounter more difficulty as those who think dressed are of so little. They devote the time that should be given to increasing their cultural status to studying toilets, and planning how they can buy, out of their limited funds, this or that expensive hat, or tie, or coat, which they see in the show rooms of some fashionable store. If it is impossible to get the article because of cost, they resort to some cheap, tawdry imitation, which only makes them look ridiculous.

Young men of this group wear cheap rings, vermilion-tinted ties, and broad checkered or plaid, and almost invariably they seem to have cheap standards. There is the dandy, for instance, whom the block boys describe as "sweet daddy supreme," and whose trade consists of the wearing of clothes. He lives to dress, and have no time to devote to self-culture or to fitting themselves for higher positions. In a matter of fact, I noticed one of these flashy, cheap dressing, dapper-daddies in the Friday night movie, and surely enough he and his cheap companions were raising all levels of the inferno. Now is there anyone willing to dispute Mr. Shack's contention, who appraised often proclaims the man." No, this may not stand alone as unshakable proof, but it may serve as a rule to measure the sense of self-respect of these characters.

The young woman rides in the same boat, for an over-dressed young woman is merely the femininity of the over-dressed young man. The manners of both seem to have a class connection with their clothes. They are loud, flashy, vulgar. This wise saying, "Show me all the dress worn has a woman in the course of her life, and I will write her biography," carries a great deal of weight.

May I suggest to you, students of the institution of higher education, to be extra careful about your personal appearance, because the critical eye is upon you. A mental picture of your inner person is being drawn in the minds of your observers through observation of your outward appearance.
