Election Time . . .

There seems to be growing concern around the campus about the upcoming elections. This we are forced to admit that this concern concerning the important issue of the candidates for the presidency of the student body. No doubt the entire student body is interested in the outcome of this race; for it is from what we can see in the candidates, there is not much to be expected in the way of a student government next year.

For, if anything, Mr. Bell, who is running for re-election, has taken his job very seriously. He is quite capable of handling any of the difficult problems that come up, and he will make the best president of the student government.

The next candidate for the presidency is Gary Bell. Bell lists as his qualifications his academic achievements, his active participation in the student government, the College Council, The Register, and leadership and activity in other organizations.

Mr. Bell thinks that his past affiliation with the organization which determines the policy of the college and his active participation in the student government, his academic achievements, and his leadership in other organizations will make him the best president of the student government.

The third candidate is Jesse Jackson. Mr. Jackson says that he believes he has the qualifications to fill the job. He is a member of the student government, playing both football and basketball, and he has been superintendent of the College School Sunday School. He lists his other qualifications as his logical thinking, his ability to work with people, and his ability to help with the proposals now facing these bodies.

In addition, there are two other qualifications for the president of the student body.

There are as many tastes in beauty as there are types. Visual beauty follows the rules of proportion and color while physical beauty is a quality which is available to all women who seek it.

Harry Lee Burrus Is Named "Best Typist Of The Year"

Harry Lee Burrus has been named the Best Typist of the Year in a contest sponsored by the Department of Business.

Provided by the Underwood Typewriter Company, the award is annually presented to a business education, secretarial science, or business administration major. Selection for the best typist is based on the total number of points made on a test which consists of a ten-minute timed writing, typing letters, and a general knowledge of the typewriter and the boon fundamentals of typing.

Burrus, a sophomore business administration major, scored a total of 112 points to win the honor. His total beat those of his closest competitor, Louise E. Green, a sophomore business administration major.

A graduate of Belhaven High School, Belhaven attributed his speed and accuracy with the typewriter to steady practice. "Practice," he says, "is the most important step towards becoming a good typist." He typed as fast as 112 words a minute.

Kissing

(A.C.P.—You can put him, kiss him and say goodbye, but please don't use his tail for an ashtray. The NoDine, Northeastern University, Boston.

That, in a nutshell, is the administration's attitude toward Northeastern's new mascot. Students have been putting the stern-looking statue's nose into strange places lately, and officials fear they'll be offended if they are offered the beloved Husky statue.

The University has no objection to kissing the dog, but it is less than enthusiastic about the hayseed who has kissed the statue and then accused students who use him for a convenient ashtray or for cigarette ashes in his tail.

The beginning of new fad, with coeds planting kissing plants on the dog's nose, is the fault of senior G. MacDonald, dean of students.

"It was only a few months ago when I gave to the students the privilege to control who Northeastern students kiss," he said.

Dean MacDonald did feel, however, that coeds who want to kiss the Husky should kiss Mr. Husky.

Dave O'Donnell, the reigning dean of students, did feel, however, that coeds who want to kiss the Husky should kiss Mr. Husky.

CARY BELL

When a farmer plants his crop in the spring of the year, he takes extreme precaution in order to ensure that the crop will be the best possible. Only the best fertilizer is used, and only the best care available is given to the plant in order to get the best results. So it should be with A&T. We are all members of the same crop, and as such we should treat the crop with the same care and diligence as we would a plant. It is important that the student body of A&T College, the future leaders of the new year, be taken care of. The student body of A&T College should be our first priority. With this in mind, I ask for your vote in the coming election. Vote for the Winner A&T, President of the Student Government for the year 1965-66.
