423 Pints Spell Civic Pride

A couple of years ago the idea that 423 pints of blood could be collected from the A&T community was considered one of the most innovative and exciting projects. This year, however, it further indicates that the program is increasing rather than losing any of its early appeal.

When one considers the length of time required to even reach this point, one would do well to consider:

The Philosophy Of The Stylus

BY BECYL BROWN

By definition, a creative writer is one who controls himself at the center of the universe. He is the center, and everything else revolves around him. He may not tell you this. He may not believe it himself. But whenever he turns out a poem, short story, or novel, he is supplying evidence that his stand is firm. Creative writing is a stand that takes a stand. From this stand he sweeps the world around him and examines it.

This examination is quite simple. For the reader, it involves the determination of the writer's intentions, the ideals of love. He examines it by reflecting upon it, by expressing his attitude toward it. Showing how he feels about it, and to what lengths he is willing to go to have it turn out note for note, a good solo on "Get Out of Town." Jeru, the baritone saxophonist has a solo on "Get Out of Town" that moves you so that you almost forget the story line or even the story line as you start living a dream on the record. The Jeru L.P. confirms my feeling about music. It is good.

Not unlike other artists, creative writers work in the atmosphere for people interested in music. Without these virgins, they would have no audiences. And without audiences, they would have no reason to write. Even more important, those members of the community who are interested in listening to a creative writer are the people who will be the critics of the work of a creative writer. The Jeru L.P. is a credit to any jazz artist. A very fine record with a great deal of information in it.

Coming to Virginia State College in 1949, Mathews had just completed his 12th season as head basketball coach. His team last year posted its best record in his ning and was runnerup in the 1963 CIAA Tournament. Only in three seasons did his teams lose more than seven games.

The Trojans, under the leadership of Mathews, had played in the tournament finals or semi-finals six times.
Mathews was named CIAA

Don Holt’s career is off to a fast start not be enough to affect the outcome. Elizabeth City is out of the tournament and will have nothing to do except the game.

Both teams could develop into interesting

Aggie shooting accuracy, rebounding power, speed, and re­ too potent for all comers. The CIAA tournament should find the home team top-seeded.

The Winston contest is clearly the greatest obstacle between Aggie and the Rams. The Aggies are seasons did his teams lose more seven times.

A capacity crowd of roaring NCC fans watched the Eagles outperform the Aggies in a contest performed before a full capacity house of partisan NCC attack.

The score was 45-22 in favor of the Eagles in the first half. The Eagles held a commanding 47-30 head at the half. The Eagles made a valiant attempt to pull the game out of the fire, but the Eagles scored first on an outside shot by Red Manning. From this point on, the Durham team steadily increased their lead.

James Jackson was high scorer for the night with 24 points. We­ Hartley, the Aggie’s other high score, was limited to 15. Manand Berger led NCC scoring with 15 points each. Jones contributed 17.

Coach Floyd Brown’s Eagles out­ rebounded the Aggies 30 to 20. Another important factor in the win was the performance of the Agagile, electricians, and electrical and mechanical engineers. For more detailed information, get your
