College Bids The Proctors Farewell

Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, fifth president of A&T College, is to be honored by the faculty and staff at a special luncheon in Brown Hall today, the day his resignation becomes effective.

Dowdy Becomes Sixth President

Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, first president of A&T College, is to be honored by the faculty and staff at a special luncheon in Brown Hall today, the day his resignation becomes effective. The presentation will be given by Mr. E. E. Waddell, vice chairman of the Board of Trustees; Mr. Howard C. Bancroft, president, General Alumni Association; and Dr. Glenn F. Rankin, dean of students. Jesse Jackson, president of the student government, presented Dr. Proctor a watch on behalf of the students at the Honors Day Convocation March 17.

Dr. L. G. Dowdy, president-elect, will preside and will issue the following statement:

"Today, I face the greatest challenge of my life, and together, you and I have a confrontation with demands, expectations and opportunities. The magnitude of which has not been seen before in the history of A&T. Our immediate task here is to provide an educational program strong enough in quality to meet the challenge, and with dignity in any academic community which we desire. The future of our College and its programs depends upon the faculty; therefore, one of my primary functions will be to release the hidden talents of our faculty and utilize them in developing an educational program second to none."

"This is a tremendous task, but I face it with complete optimism because you will share this responsibility with me. The history of our College and its programs can become one of ascension, one of high aspirations, devotion, loyalty, dedication, interest, new ideas, standards, and intellectual achievements of the faculty and staff. You are the public embodiment of the highest aspirations of A&T College. YOU lead the way in demonstrating truth, courage, and honor because you will be the symbols of knowledge that is NOW, and quicken to the world the beauty that is TO BE. Our College can be no greater than the ideas of the faculty; therefore, one of my primary functions will be to release the hidden talents of our faculty and utilize them in developing an educational program second to none."

"John Gardner has said, 'A society decays when its institutions lose their vitality. For a society to escape from rigidness, sterility and ultimate decay, it retains the capacity for continuing expression in appreciation and through institutions which are open'" (CONTINUED ON PAGE 4)

Top award winners last week at the annual Capping Exercises for sophomore students in the A&T College School of Nursing try a cap for size.

Winter Quarter Honor Roll

The size of the A&T honor roll is beginning to look more as though the college is trying to corner its image of excellence. An amazing small percentage of the college's total enrollment was again listed on the winter quarter honor list. After the fall quarter was reviewed and more students had voted for the roll, many more students would have gotten the message and would have enhanced the college's image of excellence; yet, with only 151 students earning better than 6.00 average, it appears, that many did not make that extra effort.

No one may argue that too much emphasis is being placed on better grades. Perhaps they are correct, but until the present trend has been reversed, no one can dispute that the marking system has been just a fair indicator of success.

Much has been said recently about the efforts of industry to attract students. Much has been said about the lucrative offers being made to students at A&T and other institutions. Even more glamorous have been the promotional trips to desiring industrial centers for job interviews.

What is just as evident, however, along with industry's efforts, is that those students who are receiving the offers for jobs are not necessarily the students who are maintaining the high A&T standards. As a result, even teaching, the marking system has been judged a fair indicator of success. The size of the A&T honor roll is beginning to look more like something out of Ripley's "Believe It or Not." If "$7,000 plus" jobs are those who have maintained good averages, averages based on a letter grading system. Facts and figures are more glamorous have been the promotional trips to desiring industrial centers for job interviews. As a result, the present trend has been reversed, no one can dispute that the marking system has been just a fair indicator of success.

On Student Elections

By Mohs Kamara

In a short time the students of A&T College will go to the polls to elect the Student Government for the next school year. Very soon aspirants will begin campaigning for the various offices in the government. It is agreed that the student government is an important institution of learning, including A&T College. In fact, its influence is greater than any other administrative force in the college community and is the student administration of the college. The student government is a very important part of any institution of learning, including A&T College. In fact, its influence is greater than any other administrative force in the college community and is the student administration of the college.

In so far as unknown, however, many institutions some people, both students and others, have ignored this indutiable fact and have either assumed a nonchalant attitude toward the student government, or they have overly or covertly subverted the student government. What makes the student government so important as to deserve the importance it deserves in the college community? First, it is elected by the students to represent their legitimate interests and to act as liaison between them and other administrative forces.

Whether or not one has been a member of the government, they have some influence on the campus, and are directly responsible to the students.

Moreover, the members of the government, being themselves the students of the college, can make recommendations and can work for the betterment of the college. As for other state, court, and Federal elections, they are going to continue having people who are only interested in exalting their ego instead of leading. It's the heart that she gives with love, not everything. It's the many times you ask, "Why?"

This year, vote wisely for your leaders.

What's In A Cap

YMCA Honors Two Local Teams
McHartley, Gilmer Get Awards

The basketball teams of A&T College and Dudley High School, and their coaches, were honored last week with a dinner at the Hayes-Taylor YMCA.

Two of their team members were set to receive special awards. Maurice McCarty, star forward with the Aggies, was selected to the All-star teams in each of the four tournaments in which he participated, and William Gilmer, star center for the Dudley Panthers, received "most valuable player" trophies.

"In many ways," he told the young athletes, "you are something special; and because of it, more is expected of you."

He urged the players to stick to the code which their coaches had emphasized "more than anything else, high moral character will always be expected in you." The event, sponsored by the Greensboro Athletic Boosters Club, an affiliate of the "Y", featured a panel discussion session at the Register, April 10, 1964.

The event, sponsored by the local Alpha Nu Chapter of the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity through the cooperation of the San Francisco Giants Baseball Club, will feature four clinicians, all former professional ball players.

Alex Cordis, a professional player for 11 years and who managed a pennant winning club in Baltimore, will deliver the main address, April 17. He will be assisted by Willie Drake, Raleigh, president of the Baltimore National Hot Stee League; Bob Leving, formerly of Burlington, N. C., who has been a baseball coach at Columb High School, Columbus, S. C., and Ed Brown, athletic director of the Middlesex High School.

Bill Piggott, head football coach at A&T and chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, said the clinic will be limited to 250 youngsters.

There is no charge for the clinic, and participants must register on, or before Friday, April 17. Piggott said that empty blanks are available through Little League teams and at local schools.

The course of instruction will include pitching, batting, infield and outfield play, base running and hitting.
