English Assoc. Of N. C. And Va. Meets Tomorrow

The North Carolina-Virginia College English Association, composed of instructors in English and related fields from leading colleges and universities in the two states, will hold its annual meeting at A&T College tomorrow.

The sessions are to be conducted at Carver Hall.

The morning session with a discussion on, "The Responsibilities of the Undergraduate English Department," will have as lecturers: Dr. Richard A. Meade of the University of Virginia, Dr. Walter C. Daniel of A&T College, and Dr. Francis E. Bowman of Duke University. Dr. Robert L. Kellogg, University of Virginia, and vice president of the organization, will preside.

The afternoon session is to be devoted to discussion of "The Future of the North Carolina-Virginia College English Association," and will feature as panelists: Dr. C. Hugh Holman of the University of North Carolina, and Dr. Fraser Neiman of the College of William and Mary.

Dr. Darwin T. Turner, professor and chairman of the Department of English at A&T, now on a one-year leave, is president of the organization and will preside at the business session.

Hometown Names Bell Bros. To Sports Hall Of Fame

Dr. William M. Bell, athletic director at A&T College was honored by his hometown, Akron, Ohio, Monday.

He was inducted into the Summit County Sports Hall of Fame at its annual Induction Dinner at Akron-Sheraton Hotel.

Bell's brother, Dr. Horace D. Bell, a physician and surgeon at South Bend, Ind., also a football hero at the University of Minnesota, received the same honor, making it a big night for the Bell clan. He was the first of his race to play in the now famed College All-Star Classic at Chicago. He played guard with the national championship Minnesota football team in

Lounge Available To Students

Mr. J. E. McCoy, assistant professor of fine arts here at A&T College, has established THE COLLEGE LOUNGE for college students. Its purpose is not to make a profit, but to provide a place where college students can engage in recreation and seminars. Areas for viewing television, lounging, cooking, studying, playing records, dancing, and playing games are provided. Students can pre-order a meal of any type for fifty cents. They can also have parties at special rates and purchase items a fraction above cost or at discount prices.

One side of the lounge is open to members only, and one side to both members and non-members. THE COLLEGE LOUNGE is relatively new to A&T students, so why not patronize it? Let us remember that Mr. McCoy is not doing this for his benefit, but solely for our benefit. Let us not let a good thing "go down the drain" because of our lack of participation. Why not go today? THE COLLEGE LOUNGE is located at the corner of Daniel and Market Streets and is open daily from four to eleven.

A&T To Honor Founders

Founders' Day Observance Tuesday, November 2, at 9:00 A.M. in Moore Gymnasium will mark the seventy-fourth year of A&T's existence.

Guest speaker for the occasion will be Dr. Morris Tynes, an A&T alumnus and pastor of the Chicago Monumental Baptist Church.

Dr. Tynes is an outstanding leader and a dynamic speaker, having excelled in public speaking at Yale where he received the Bachelor of Divinity degree. He has served as Dean of Theology at Virginia Seminary and College, Lynchburg, Va.; and he was the first Negro to head the Bi-Racial Staunton-Augusta County Ministerial Association.

Dr. Tynes conducted Religious Emphasis at A&T in 1960, where, in addition to appearing before public assemblies, he met with small groups and participated in individual counseling.

Founders' Day has an unusual significance on this campus, for a landgrant college has no founders. The term Founders' Day to name this occasion was first used in 1940.

Prior to 1940 and beginning in 1925, the first Friday in November was set aside by Dr. F. D. Bluford to commemorate the life of Dr. James Benson Dudley (b. November 2, 1859; d. April 4, 1925) and was known as Dudley Day.

Since the initiation of Dudley Day and more recently Founders' Day, the college has continued to commemorate the lives of its presidents. On some occasions additional flourishes have been added.

Eight new buildings were dedicated in 1955. Dr. Warmoth T. Gibbs chose the occasion in 1956 for his inauguration as president. Three buildings were dedicated in 1957—Campbell Hall, Reid Nurseries, and Cooper Hall.

The bronze bust of the late Dr. F. D. Bluford was unveiled as a main feature of the 1958 Founders' Day.

A special feature of this Founders' Day will be a Retirement Review in honor of Lt. Colonel William Goode. Colonel Goode will be presented the Army Commendation Medal by Colonel Huffacre of the Third United States Army.

Upon his retirement from the army, Colonel Goode will assume the duties of the dean of men at A&T College.

He will be succeeded as professor of military science by Lt. Colonel Harold L. Lanier, an A&T College alumnus.

Ground breaking ceremonies for the student union building will follow the Founders' Day exercises.

Staffers Attend ACP In California

Two REGISTER staff members and their adviser joined approximately 7,000 delegates who attended the Forty-First Annual Associated Collegiate Press Conference in San Francisco, California October 21-23.

This marked the first time that ACP had met on the west coast and the "Golden Gate" swung wide to welcome the group.

Representatives from A&T included Eula M. Battle, associate editor and a junior major from Whitakers; Stanley W. Johnson, managing editor and a sophomore engineering physics major from Graham; and Mrs. Loreno M. Marrow, adviser.

Most of the sessions covered by REGISTER staff members were listed under the "Basic Newspaper Course," a series of sessions conducted by Fred Bauries, St. Cloud (Minnesota) State College. The course was intended for staff members on publications with limited assistance from advisers, or in schools without formal instruction in journalism, or just inexperienced staffers who had not had a chance to get basic journalism courses.

Because Mr. Bauries has a background as a practical printer and a typographer, has worked in advertising, and has taught photo journalism, he was able to give the group many helpful suggestions for improving the quality of their newspapers.

An added attraction for the conferees was the appearance of Charles Schulz, creator of "Peanuts." Mr. Schulz started the conference ball rolling on Thursday night by introducing Peanuts and his cartoon pals.

To add a bit of spice to the trip, the A&T delegation toured Chinatown by night, visited Jack London's hideout, Muir Woods, Fisherman's Wharf, and a few other historical places.

ACP was held at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel in conjunction with the National Council of College Publications Advisers.

W. T. Johnson Is Honored At Two Nat'l Conventions

A staff member at A&T College was honored by two national conventions conducted at widely separated points in the country.

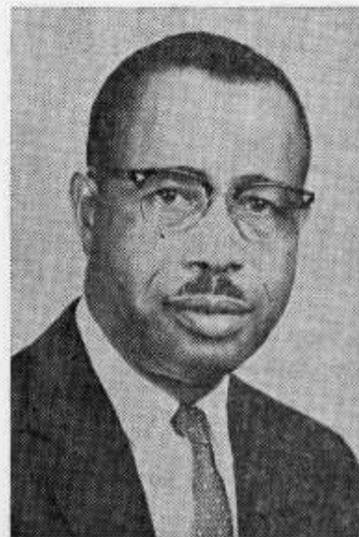

Mr. W. T. Johnson, Sr., assistant State supervisor of Vocational Agriculture, who maintains headquarters at the college, was awarded the Honorary American Farmer Degree by the Future Farmers of America at the organization's national convention held at Kansas City, Missouri. The degree was given in commendation for contributions he gave to the New Farmers of America over a long period of years and for services rendered in perfecting procedures leading to the recent merger of the two organizations.

Earlier this month, Mr. Johnson was presented an engraved watch at the final convention of the New Farmers of America at Atlanta, Georgia, in commendation for services he had given to the organization, as one of its original members and as national treasurer since 1955.

During the past summer he was honored by the North Carolina Teachers of Vocational Agriculture with the presentation of a life membership in the American Vocational Agricultural Association. He was also the recipient of the Alumni Service Award, presented by the A&T College General Alumni Association in 1962.

A graduate of A&T, from which he holds the master of science degree, Mr. Johnson served as vocational agricultural teacher at Spring Hope. He returned to A&T first as teacher-trainer in farm mechanics and later as assistant supervisor of vocational agriculture, and after an interruption of four years as an itinerant teacher trainer in West Virginia, returned in 1952 to his present position here.

MR. W. T. JOHNSON

James Farmer, Jr. Wins Two Awards At Atlanta Meet

James Farmer, Jr., sophomore majoring in agricultural education, was the recipient of two FFA awards.

James Farmer traveled to Atlanta, Georgia where he was to receive the Superior Farmer's Degree award on October 7; however, after arriving there, he learned that he had also won the Star Superior Farmer's Degree award also. The two awards came to a total of $350.

James Farmer is a native of Elm City, and he is a 1964 graduate of Frederick Douglass High School.

Farmer was in charge of his father's farm for two years while in high school, at which time he used an improved supervised farming program which led him to win these awards.

Two other A&T students also won the Superior Farmer's Degree award of $100. They were Clifton Fulton, graduate of Carver High School, Winston-Salem, and Luther H. Lowery, graduate of Carver High School, Winston-Salem.

On Giving Thanks

November is the month we celebrate Thanksgiving and Founders' Day. Although these days are approximately three weeks apart, they have something in common and that is the giving of thanks.

On Thanksgiving Day we give thanks for the many blessings the Lord as bestowed upon us. On Founders' Day we should all give thanks for our college and the opportunity it gives us to receive a higher education.

A&T College didn't just spring up over night. It was derived from the planning of many dedicated men, eager for the advancement of the Negro race.

The A&M College for White People was established in 1889 but it did not have provisions for the acceptance of Negro students and, therefore, could not receive federal funds. To overcome this deficit the A&M College for Negroes was annexed to Shaw University. In 1893 the school was moved to Greensboro and located on land donated by interested citizens. In 1915 an act of the State Legislature changed the name of the institution to The Agricultural and Technical College of North Carolina.

Through the years A&T has contributed much to the improvement of the Negro race and the American society in general. Deposited all across the country are A&T trained scholars, technicians, nurses, doctors, sociologists, military leaders, and other personnel.

Yes, we should all be thankful for our opportunities and take precautions not to waste them. A&T was founded to help individuals to learn to help themselves.

About The Bookstore

A recent article on the college bookstore served its purpose in that some light has been shed on the matter of book deficiency.

During a talk with some bookstore personnel, it was revealed with substantial facts presented that the bookstore is not in fault because many students don't have their books.

The bookstore can order books only when it receives an order for the books needed by a specific department of the college. The order for the four hundred books needed by freshmen, that was specifically mentioned in the previous article, was not received by the bookstore until October 6. That means that twenty-one days passed before the bookstore could even order the books.

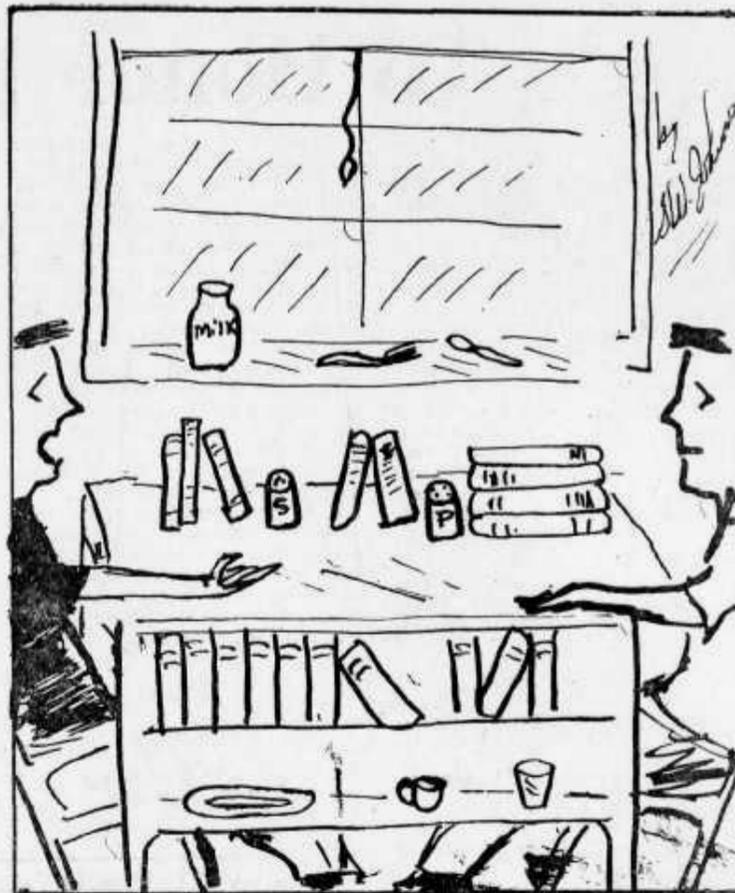

Who is to blame? Let us first examine the procedures necessary in ordering books. First, the chairman of the department needing the books must make out an order, listing all needed copies. Second, the order must be okayed and signed by the dean of the school under which the department is classified. In addition to this signature, the signature of the dean of instruction must be added. From this we can see that unless the order is started through its proper channels in time the books cannot be ordered in time for registration.

This, of course, is no excuse for the books' not being available and on time. Some one must be given the blame for the negligence to which the students fall victim. From the evidence presented here, it can be deducted that the blame could be somewhat divided among the chairmen of various departments, the deans of the related schools, and the office of the dean of instruction.

As unbelievable as it may seem the students are sometimes to blame for the book deficiencies. It was revealed that many books are issued to students who later learn that they don't need the book or who have dropped the courses for which the books were previously needed. It never occurs to these students to return these books so someone else may use them.

It is sincerely hoped that this article has cleared the air about the bookstore problem. It is in no means a retraction of the preceding article, for that article has more than served its initial purpose.

We now see that in order for the bookstore, or any other branch of the college to function properly, it must have the sufficient co-operation and attention from responsible department chairmen, school deans, administration officials, and the students.

WONDER WHERE THE SILVER AND SHAKERS ARE?

Who Is An Aggie?

By LEE HOUSE

Aggie, as you no doubt know by now, is a pet name for a student of the Agricultural and Technical College of North Carolina.

Not just any student of the college, however, is a real Aggie. The True Aggie is of a special breed. Usually from the back field, to the "Cow College" he comes. Stupidity, simplicity, and "duffidity" often are not his trademarks. Beware, however, of his attractive temperament and his admirable, though crude, personality.

Don't laugh at his dress; his is just practical and economical that's all! Don't ponder over his mannerisms; can he help it if he is still recovering from the voyage over, and adjusting to American culture. You must admit; you do admire his audacity and boldness—don't you? Who else threatened by ensuing poverty and illiteracy would walk, run, hitchhike, or the like, to college and major in "canteenology," "foology," "omniscientology," and related fields of folly?

Only in "Aggieland" may the passer-by stumble upon fickle freshmen, soul searching sophomores, juvenile juniors, and successive superseding seniors. Only in "Aggieland" may be found the perennial daydreamer, the walking corner stone of the canteen, the meandering relics of antebellum days, "cool cats" of "slumbic" descent, and a multiplicity of nature's little creatures, imitating some of the roles of the student.

Yet, the true Aggie reigns supreme. He is the most talked about the most laughed at, the most interesting, and the most controversial form of matter to adorn a college campus.

Be not dismayed, however, for the Aggie is a blissful little fellow. Everyday is homecoming; every hour, party time; everyone, the object of fun. Testimony of such may be borne out in the following dialogue:

"Hello, Aggie. What's on your mind? Nothing . . .! Oh, well, what is your major? Nearly everything, but mostly nothing. When do you study? Now and then. When do you expect to graduate? Sooner or later. What are your ambitions? Women, wine and poetry (fimericks and anecdotes)"

See what I mean? This evidence was drawn from an "honor Aggie" on the seven year plan — now in his fifth year; you know it's tuthentic.

When in "Aggieland," dear friend, tarry not; only observe and make haste. The fold is already much too big and the plight is contagious. Let me assure you, however, that for those who like it, the life is fabulous. The people are actually great. Only in "Aggieland" may "you" be truly happy. You may wonder how it is that I am so knowledgable on this subject. You, on the other hand, may have discovered that I, too, am an Aggie. And strangely enough, I'm proud of it!

From The Office Of The Dean Of Students

Dr. J. E. Marshall, dean of students, commends the students on their department and responsibility during the the week of homecoming. He says much of it attained the result of the students participation in planning and in carrying out duties and activities assigned to them. He asserts that this was a cooperative venture which proved that we have an excellent student body on which we can depend. "We felt that they understood what was expected and they exhibited leadership and citizenship. While we might not have been victorious as far as the game is concerned, the student body won the praises for the exhibition of true school spirit, cooperation, and devotion to the goal and aspiration of the college."

Dr. Marshall seems quite satisfied about the student reaction to the homecoming festivities. He is even laudable of us. We take this as an assumption that praises often motivate continued well being. We, too, are proud of the overall outcome of homecoming, 1965.

Fashions

By PHENIE DYE

The cold weather has brought back to our wardrobe the bulky sweater, knee tickler, leotards and knee socks.

Bulky sweater is at the all time high because of the changeable weather. It is too warm to wear a coat but it is just right for the bulky sweater. This sweater is made of a very heavy knit and the designs are criss cross. The sweater extend a little below the waistline. The styles are V-neck, button down the front, crew cut and turtle neck.

A knee tickler may be straight, pleated or gathered and stop at the knee or a little below the knee.

The leotards and knee socks should co-ordinate with the outfit.

The leading colors for the season are cranberry, pink, blue and cranberry, and burgundy.

FFA Group Attends Fair

The A&T College Collegiate Chapter of Future Farmers of America sponsored another trip to the annual North Carolina Agricultural Fair October 15.

The trip consisted of thirty-six students and four adults. The time was from 8:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. and transportation was by car and one activity bus, "the blue goose."

The primary purpose of the trip was to tour the fair and see some of the latest developments in Agriculture. These developments included farming machinery, research, livestock, and poultry.

All participants appeared to enjoy the fair as they saw many other aspects of the fair including the various shows, demonstrations, and exhibits.

Each student agreed to take note of the various aspects of the fair and submit a written report on what he liked or disliked about the fair and also to list some recommendations as to how the fair could be improved for the benefit of the public.

N. C. Fund Seeks Campus Volunteers

The North Carolina Fund for the past two summers has sponsored the North Carolina Volunteers. This has been a program in which college students volunteered their summer vacations to work in the neighborhoods of poverty.

A new facet to the program is under contemplation. A letter to President L. C. Dowdy has set the purpose of his facet and the need for volunteers. Excerpts are as follows:

"In order to provide these services (aid for the poverty stricken) year round, North Carolina Volunteer groups are being formed on many campuses throughout the state. The purposes of these Volunteers is to provide self-help services to a community and to involve the college students in some of the problems that face disadvantaged persons.

The initial efforts of the North Carolina Volunteers will be directed toward the organization and staffing of a reading center. The North Carolina Fund has been given thousands of books which are to be used in deprived areas. These books come packed in boxes that can be readily converted to book shelves. Setting up a small library for children in a neighborhood using these books will be the primary goal of the program, with the plan that many additional services will soon evolve such as home-work aid, recreation, homemaking, health education, and cultural enrichment.

"So that these services may be provided, college students will be asked to work on a voluntary basis several hours a week. Community leaders and faculty members will be encouraged to provide the professional guidance that can make the program more meaningful to the student and more valuable to the recipient of the service."

Brenda Johnson, a veteran volunteer, will serve as student coordinator for the campus.

Literary Club Elects Adams As President

The Fortnightly Club, sponsored by the Department of English of A&T College, held its first meeting of the year Tuesday, October 19. The purpose of the meeting was to reorganize the club, elect officers, and to acquaint new members with the organization.

Previous members of the club were, for the most part, seniors and had left the club virtually void of active members. Last year's adviser, Miss Jean M. Bright, is presently on leave, and documents and information were needed before the club could get "on the go."

William Adams was elected president of the club, and Beverly Johnson was elected vice president. Miss Dorothy M. Eller, Mr. Terry A. Babb, and Mr. Charles C. Dean are advisers to the club.

There is an open invitation from the Fortnightly Club to all persons interested in the art and enjoyment to be found through reading, for such is the primary concern of the club. For further information please contact one of the above officers or advisers. The Fortnightly Club reminds you: "For a Richer Fuller Life, Read!"

Math Club Meets Officers Elected For School Year

The Mathematics Club had its annual meeting for the purpose of electing officers last Monday. The new officers elected were Robert Seales, president; Alton Wallace, vice-president; Pat Mobley, corresponding secretary; Derwood McKinley, treasurer; Malinda Jackson, secretary; Jesse Newton, publicity chairman; Charley Flent, social chairman; Fred Cook, program chairman; and Mrs. Anita Rivers, adviser to the club.

The purpose of the Mathematics Club of A&T College is to promote and stimulate interest in the various areas of mathematics and to keep the student abreast of the new trends in mathematics through research, visiting speakers, and seminars.

Meetings have been set for the second and fourth Mondays of each month at 7:30 P.M.

Aggies Top WS Rams 30-20

The A&T Aggies won a conference tilt from the Winston-Salem State College Rams with the Rams challenging the Aggies to the bitter end.

Melvin Phillips, who has been an Aggie standout since the outset of the season, paced all Aggie backs as he carried the pigskin into the end zone four times, with a total of 20 points.

Phillips put the Aggies in front early in the first stanza as he ran the ball from the Rams' 21-yard line and gave the Aggies a 6-0 lead. Granger then passed to Willie Vaughn for the two-point conversion play, giving the Aggies an 8-0 lead.

While the jubilant Aggie fans were recovering from their team's 61-yard drive, All-CIAA quarterback James Millner of the Rams had other ideas and interests. Millner passed for 36 yards and a Ram touchdown, as he hit end Walden Taborn. Their try for the extra point was no good, so the Aggies still led 8-6.

Phillips, who evidently got angry at the thought of Winston-Salem's threatening the Aggies pulled in a 63-yard pass from Granger giving the Aggies a 14-6 margin. The Aggies held the Rams scoreless during the remainder of the second quarter.

Aggies held the Rams scoreless in the third stanza as they lengthened their lead by putting 16 points on the scoreboard. The first six points came when quarterback Granger rifled a 22-yard scoring pass to Willie Vaughn. Phillips ran over for the two-point conversion play giving the Aggies a 22-6 lead and Phillips his 14th point of the game.

Granger then passed another bomb of 43 yards to Phillips who carried it into the end zone for the final touchdown of the third quarter. Granger passed to Vaughn for the two-point conversion play giving the Aggies a 30-6 lead.

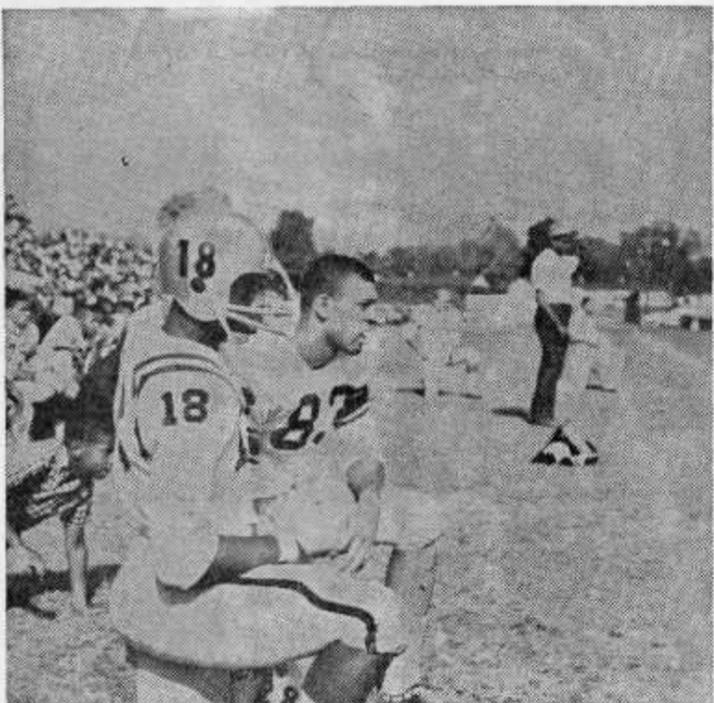

The Rams, who up to now had been relatively quiet, held the Aggies scoreless in the final period. With the ball resting on the Ram 49, the Rams were forced to punt. A penalty nullified the punt, and the Rams were given the ball first and 10 on the Aggie 35-yard line. In three plays, quarterback Millner passed the ball for a Ram touchdown with the touchdown coming on the third play of the series, as Millner passed eight yards to Benny Parker for the Ram score. The two-point conversion was good. The score now stood at 30-14 Aggies.

The Rams kicked off to the Aggies; but unable to move the ball, the Aggies were forced into a punting situation. The Rams lost the ball on downs and were forced to punt.

With the ball resting on the Aggie 22, the Aggies fumbled on the first play from scrimmage, with the Rams recovering the fumble on the Aggie 20.

The Aggies tried to make the Rams repeat their last series as they held the Rams motionless for three downs. With fourth and ten, reserve quarterback Roy Hicks passed 20 yards for a Ram touchdown. This ended all scoring with the score A&T 30 and Winston-Salem State 20.

Other outstanding performers for the Aggies were fullback Thomas Confi, end Conrad Lattimore, halfback Michael Johnson, guard Robert Edwards, and tackle Elvin Bethea and William Sinclair.

Willie Pearson, Jr., Winston-Salem freshman, and Conrad Lattimore of Newport News, Va., senior, watch the action from the sideline.

Team Faces Undefeated Morgan Bears In Bear's Homecoming Event Saturday

By ERNEST FULTON

The race for the C.I.A.A. conference football championship is tightening up. There were two unbeaten teams going into last Saturday's games. They were Morgan State College Bears and Delaware State College. These two unbeaten teams collided in Dover, Delaware on October 23 and Morgan State came out victorious by the score of 34-0.

Morgan remains as the only unbeaten team in C.I.A.A. competition. It is definitely the team to beat for the conference championship. This Saturday the Aggies will tackle the Bears in Baltimore, Maryland at their homecoming. If the Aggies are retaining any hopes of capturing the conference championship, they will have to stop those big, bad Bears from Morgan State.

Last Saturday the Aggies showed that they still have an offense that can eat up yardage and score points with a bang. In their game against Winston-Salem State College, quarterback John Granger threw three touchdown passes and Melvin Phillips scored three touchdowns, two on pass receptions and one via running. The play of halfbacks Willie Vaughn and Mike Johnson was outstanding. Vaughn has turned out to be a sturdy all-around ballplayer. Johnson seems to have regained his form of last year. In his freshman year he was a flashy, breakaway runner, but he suffered a leg injury in the middle of the season. Now he appears to be running at full speed, and opponents had better be on their toes or he will run right by them.

The Aggie defensive forward wall is just as potent as it was at the beginning of the season. Winston-Salem State College's quarterback, James Millner, can testify to that effect as he was "dumped" repeatedly for big losses. The men who did most of the "dumping" were Clyde Petteway, Dennis Homesley, Erwin Bethea, Ernest Johnson, and Heyward McKie.

The teams who are still in contention for the conference's championship besides A&T and Morgan

State are Virginia State, Maryland State, Delaware State, and Norfolk State.

Results of some of last Saturday's games were Johnson C. Smith 44, Shaw University 22; St. Augustine's 28, Fayetteville State 12; Virginia State 48, Hampton Institute 6; Maryland State 35, North Carolina College 0.

In this week's action the big game should be the game between the A&T College Aggies and the Morgan College Bears. Other games of importance are Maryland State vs. Norfolk State in Princess Ann, Maryland, and Virginia Union vs. Virginia State in Petersburg, Virginia.

IN BALTIMORE, MARYLAND

By DAVID MOREHEAD

The Aggie Tank squad, who last year was the most phenomenal team in the CIAA Conference, by winning six out of eight meets with only nine regular swimmers, is ready for all opponents.

During the regular season the Aggies were visitation champs, with all eyes on them to win the CIAA swimming and diving championships but, because of the limited supply of swimmers and the extreme pressure put on a team during the championships, the Aggies were able to muster up only a measly fourth place.

This being a new season, the Aggies hope to have a lot of surprises for a lot of people. With seven veterans returning along with a bunch of new boys trying out for the team, Coach Forrist Willis hopes that this will be the largest ever, and also a team that will make people look twice.

11-MEET SEASON

On November the 17th, the Aggies will begin their 11-meet season when they travel to Dover, Delaware, and meet the Delaware State Tank Squad. Then, on November 18th, the Aggies will make their way to the beautiful olympic-sized pool of Howard University, hoping to avenge one of their defeats from last season. From Washington, D. C., the Aggies will travel to another beautiful pool, at Morgan State College, there too, to try to avenge a defeat from last season. These first three trips are what the fellows on the team call, the Northern tour.

TOUGH SPOT
I want to let some of you non-swimmers know that swimming is hard, tough, and more competitive than any other collegiate sport. A swimmer uses almost every muscle in his body during a race. As I watched the boys practice yesterday, I could actually see, without looking too hard, the pain and agony that is experienced in each and every race that the fellows encounter. You hardly ever see a swimmer loafing because he knows that if he lets up just a little bit,
