A Painful Rule

The medical staff of A&T College is and has been for quite some time, insufficient. When a parent sends a boy or girl to school, he should be able to do so with a knowledge that his offspring will be adequately cared for. The medical services of the school emergency room makes this very hard. That rule is that "a student desiring entrance into the infirmary after a certain hour must be accompanied by a parent or guardian." It must be remembered that, in the event of an emergency, valuable time can be lost searching for one of the two aforementioned people.

An adequate staff might possibly eliminate this problem. According to the standards maintained by other colleges and universities, these are the criteria for a sufficient medical staff: one full-time doctor for every 1000 students, one full-time medical technician for every 2000 students, one full-time administrator for every 5000 students, and an assistant administrator when the enrollment exceeds 5000, one aid for each of the day shifts (7:00 A.M.-3:00 and 3:11 P.M.), and an orderly for the night shifts.

With these criteria in mind, the health service committee of A&T College has proposed plans for the following staff: a chief doctor and two assistant doctors, five part-time dentists used on a rotational basis, one medical technician, two secretaries, six full-time nurses with a relief, two aides, one orderly, eight or more student workers and a health service director.

The Red Cross chapter is a very important medical facility. The only thing it lacks is a large enough staff to give the students the medical attention they deserve and should by all means have.

If an epidemic or other emergency were to occur, it would be of our advantage to have a staff on hand to handle that situation. By saving the time that it would take to accumulate a sufficient staff, lives would be saved and complications prevented. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Successful Blood Drive

A&T College came through with flying colors in its participation in the Greensboro Red Cross Chapter blood drive. The student body of A&T is to be greatly congratulated for its participation while the participation of faculty members left much to be desired. The highest percentage of participation was the 100% participation of the Army and Air Force enrollees.

The A&T participants are to be proud they know they not only met but exceeded the Greensboro area, but broke three records in the process. By accumulating 313 pints the first day the participants broke the record for one-day donations in the Greensboro Red Cross Chapter. This record was broken again the second day when 322 pints were accumulated.

An overall record was established by the donation of 677 pints in the 48-day period. This far surpassed the desired quota of 500 pints.

Enough blood was donated to supply the hospitals in the Greensboro area for a 90-day period. That is very important, with the holiday season rapidly approaching and with the usual slaughter on the highways.

The Red Cross chapter expresses great appreciation to those who donated.

Voluntary Advisers?

(ACT) — A lot of red tape, extra work, and inconvenience could easily be eradicated with the adoption of a voluntary advising system for upper division students, says the DAILY CALIFORNIAN, University of California, Berkeley.

Now the "advising problem" rests in the lap of the typical University adviser who is usually uninformed about his advising responsibilities. The adviser should be prepared to take on the responsibility of guiding students in the career course.

A voluntary program would entail establishment of a small, concerned group of advisers, perhaps graduate students, who are as qualified to speak about courses as most professors — to aid those students who are unsure about course selections.

Mink Top Piece

PREMIERE DYE

For sometime the wig had caused the hat manufacturers to lose a lot of business; but now that "Joe Chilly" has spoken, wonder what they will say. As for the hat, it may be deserves a "Joe Chilly" hat brought business back to life.

The hats that are becoming the fashions this season are the mink pillbox, the mink visor, the mink picotée, the mink floppy, and the mink beret.

The pillbox is a very small hat that is made exactly like a box and round like a top for a jar. It fits either at the center top of the head or half way back the head. Speaking of the top, it is a type of round hat made of fabric folded into shape, then pieced or done over a frame, and it is small and portable.

Another popular hat this season is the bell-shape look and fits close to the head like a helmet. These and many other hats are leading the season, and they may or may not be mint.

Letters To The Editor

Editor: We are asking for your support toward the following social program.

We, the students, are depending on THE REGISTER, A&T College, Greensboro, North Carolina. We are asking for your support toward the following social program.

Thank you for that coverage but also thank you for that complete coverage, many students would not get a chance to go on the American Education Week activities. But, we, the members of the BSU, are certain that you will be more than willing to provide $50.00 to organize a Pep Band for home basketball games. The President appointed Vernon Harper as chairman of the Public Relations Committee which will develop some means of preventing the destruction and mutilation of books in the library. The meeting was held February 15, 1965, and the members of the committee present, according to a letter from the Public Relations Chairman, are: Isaac Burnett, Jr., Thomas Thompson, and Robert Raines.

We, the students, are depending on THE REGISTER to tell us the story of the most important part in the lives of students. Hundred things are possible, but it is always related to the students of the campus. The closing of the classroom doors, the destruction and mutilation of literature for knowledge, the problem of vandalism and student theft, the destruction and mutilation of literature for information? His friends and his family understand him. They aren't concerned with rhyme machinations and differences between Elizabethan and Ippenarian sonnets. So why should the student learn to read them? Reuben Dill is Vista Volunteer
On Arizona Indian

Reuben Dill, 24, a graduate of A&T College, is developing educational and recreational programs with the Pima-Maricopa Indians on their reservations near Scottsdale, Ariz., where he serves as a Volunteer in Service to America (VISTA).

"I didn't think I was fulfilling my potential," said Mr. Dill, when asked why he had become a VISTA. "I have a B.S. degree in business, economics, and accounting, and I was earning my living as a bank teller when I heard about the VISTA program." Mr. Dill is living and working in Phoenix, Ariz. He and almost 8,000 others are working on the 40,000-acre reservations of the Pima-Maricopa Indians. He was trained for assignment to the Indian reservations by Arizona State University. Never west of the Mississippi, Mr. Dill said, "I saw my first cotton field and my first backyard barbecue with VISTA." Mr. Dill is living and working in a small one-story adobe house. He and his fellow VISTAs are requested to follow the Tribal Constitution of the Indians. He has recently joined the Pima-Maricopa Indian tribe to help students improve their grade.

Students Wanted

As Volunteers

To Vista

A&T College students have an opportunity to volunteer for service on Indian reservations, among migrant farm workers, in slum areas, and in rural pockets of poverty ranging from Appalachian hollows to Alaskan villages. Representatives of Volunteers In Service To America (VISTA) were at the A&T campus on November 30 and December 1, or by writing VISTA, Washington, D.C. 20506.

Mr. Dill is a former student at Virginia Union University. "I saw my first cotton field and my first backyard barbecue," he said. "In a small, one-story adobe house, I and my fellow VISTAs are requested to follow the Tribal Constitution of the Indians. We have recently joined the Pima-Maricopa Indian tribe to help students improve their grade."

VISTA volunteers can get from a person like himself an appreciation of the Indian way of life and the Indian struggle to maintain their culture in the face of a changing society." Mr. Dill said. "I am living and working in a small one-story adobe house. I and my fellow VISTAs are requested to follow the Tribal Constitution of the Indians. The Ideal Modern Home

For Middle Income Families

BY JOSEPH HENRY YONGUE

The modern trend is against the two or more story houses. Usually, the entire plan is placed on one floor or in split level floors. These styles eliminate the staircase and minimize long flights of stairs. The ranch style with its freedom of room arrangement and the split level style with its ability to make the best use of sloping land are two of the house styles of today's building.

The ideal modern house is not restricted to flat or regular land. Homes are designed to blend in with the land and natural environment are very ideal. The cost of building and supporting a home such as may be expensive. The money saved in the purchase of such plots usually balances with the supporting costs.

Because of the budget and everyday activities of today's middle income families, home must be economical, centrally organized, and pleasing to look at and to live in.

From the economical standpoint of view, homes of today are designed to make every square inch of space useful. One room separated by room dividers such as panel, bookcase, cabinets, desks, and the like, is preferable to one room in a given area or across the hall. The breakfast room should be connected with a small partition between the living room, dining room, and activity room. The kitchen should be in a secluded area away from the noise and activity of the family. These students at A&T College model prize-winning garments which they produced. For "At Home Fashions," a fashion show held at the college last week, featuring clothing for casual wear about the home.

These students are majors, either in clothing or home economics education. The events was supervised by Mrs. Ann Lamb Davis, associate professor of clothing.

The modern-day housewife embraces a home which assists her to do her duties in the home quietly, easily, and efficiently thus allowing her more free time to relax and participate in community activities and her personal interest.

In modern-day living meals are very informal. Meals may be served in the activity room instead of interrupted television fan, at the snack bar between the kitchen and activity room, in the breakfast nook, in the living room or in the dining room, therefore, the areas of the kitchen to these areas is demanded. The dining room, though, still retains its position for meals because it is reserved for the more formal and special meals. The combination of the more formal areas, the living room, and activity room, is ideal.

Bedrooms should be in a secluded area of comfort and have all the factors necessary for relaxation and privacy. Because of compactness, windows should be made to allow for furniture to be placed where possible.

The desire for the use of the bathroom at the same time by the family members, demands two or more bathrooms (according to number of family members) in the ideal home.

Color plays a definite role in the evoking of environmental feelings in the home. Color can produce in the room that is demanded. The color of the room and the type of the room should be made to appear different by the various tones of color.

Most modern homes have architecture and scenic view of the house that would be appreciated for the duties and activities of the household. This area must be ideally designed for good use and control of all parts of the house. The modern-day housewife embraces a home which assists her to do her duties in the home quietly, easily, and efficiently thus allowing her more free time to relax and participate in community activities and her personal interest.

Today's homes must be well organized because of their components and of the needs of the active family. The central area of the house should be reserved for the duties and activities of the household. This area must be

"At Home" Show

Is Competitive

For A&T Coeds

The Advance Clothing Construction presented a Fashion Show on November 19 entitled "At Home," under the direction of Mrs. Ann Lamb Davis, associate professor of clothing.

The purpose of this competitive show was to stimulate the students in the class to use extra much and imagination on their garments. In order to encourage strong competition the Department gave a portable radio as the one and only prize, thus making the competition very strong.

Garments used for the competitive show were spools, spoolers, pincushion, pins, pins, pinny dresses, hats, and bags.

The class result consists of Lena Harris, Mary Kennedy, Naomi Long, Sandra Martin, Willie McKay, Carolyn McHenry, Freda Spencer, Joyce Williams, and Yvette Yancy.

Mary Y. Evans presented to Carolyn Yancy the portable radio for the best pants set.

A&T Plans Operation of WANT During This Academic Year

By PHENIE DYE

This year, there are possibilities that a radio station may begin operating. It has been thought of the school and other educational sources that radio and television have enhanced the learning of some seven million students in more than forty hundreds colleges and universities. For this and other reasons a proposal for a closed circuit A.M. radio station was made at a meeting by the director of the college, October 19, 1964.

After this meeting Mr. W. T. Alexander of the Technical Institute (now the School of Industry) was appointed to gather information and data that would be needed for the preparation and final operation of this station. A proposal was submitted setting forth the purpose, technical data, and operational procedures within several steps. The original proposal stated that A&T should become an integral part of the college world that educates educational radio.

Some of the purposes stated were the following: to provide cable for all educational programming; to provide a training program in the field of radio, and to provide service at the minimal cost. In other words, students will be able to use the regular A.M. frequency has to do with the station. The Federal Communications Commission has designated this service for use by colleges of our type as long as we are not competitive with commercial stations. Our signal will be, therefore, restricted to the boundaries of the campus.

Signals will be left the studio by cable and be transmitted with a sales of high frequency. The advantages are the transmission of the necessary studio equipment to the on-campus headquarter.

The procedure for doing this procedure rests major on the approval of the agreement, that a radio station may begin operation on the approval of the agreement, and that A&T should become an integral part of the college world that educates educational radio.

"Ours has not been an easy task," said Mr. Alexander, "as you can understand since an outside interest on finances or grants have been used, but we feel, if we utilize the best advantages the items have the student will have a station that can fulfill the students' needs and yet bet in the original proposal."

Confession Of A Graduate

OR THE GREEN TREE BY

The initial twenty-five years of any life are spent in a continual nibbling, an endless search for the Green Tree. Others had their own personal Eden, I know the Green Tree. During the latter years, which were spent in college as well, I became increasingly sure that I was approaching the end of my quest. The wall that divided me and the Green Tree was always swinging stone by stone; and with each stone, the scaffold grew wider. On the Sunday I received my degree, the same house that marked the limits of my roof brought the sweet, sweet smell of the Green Tree's fruit.

During the Sunday of graduation, I spent a week at home backing in my hair. I was a consultant, and I had never the necessary courage: I had never the necessary courage: I had not taken the Federal Service Exam. I was asked the same question, "Now that you've graduated, are you going to practice law?" I told a fellow who had recently lost his eyesight in his battle with cancer, "I had no idea except to write eventually, so my stock answer became "get a job" so as to raise some money and sometimes I came to the Green Tree with a book of poems in my pocket. I bought The New York and had the full fare waiting.

Once before, I had journeyed to the Green Tree to look for a room. But the time had never been right, nor the time I had sufficient money. There was no great sum to maintain myself, I found the Green Tree, I could talk with Cecil who had an eye for the Green Tree.

Going down the rivers, I got lost. We talked about mutual friends and how Cecil was doing as a guard because of the Green Tree. We talked about life and the Green Tree. We talked about New York and the city was as I remembered it. Swarthy explained he was one of the people one met or passed except as a registered volunteer. I noticed the trees. Here they loomed above the dwellings. Downtown, Manhattan. Queens was somewhat like home. Maybe, I realized, after I found the Green Tree, I could move here. Coming out I had no idea what the Green Tree would do? I found the Green Tree, I could talk with Cecil who had an eye for the Green Tree. I had not taken the Federal Service Exam. I was asked the same question, "Now that you've graduated, are you going to practice law?" In Orange Bowl

On December 4

Florida A&M, the only university that stages its own football bowl game, announced yesterday it had invited Morgan State of Baltimore as this year's opponent.

The teams will meet in the Orange Bowl December 19 in the annual Orange Blossom classic, one of the biggest events in Negro sports events.

The Morgan State Bears are undefeated in an eight-season game and have scored 39 points 27 for their opponents. The Rattlers have a 1-1 record.

The Aggies met both of those football powerhouses during the regular season and lost both games. The Bears of Morgan State provided A&T by the score of 31-27 and A&M handed the Eudora 54-0 defeat.

By virtue of the win-loss records of both teams and the scores of their respective games with A&T, Morgan State is a one touchdown favorite. It is hoped that the CIAA representative will perform to expectations.

The Ideal Modern Home

The character of the exterior and interior of each home should be such that a house must go hand in hand. Having a bedroom in a house is keeping with today's style.

Modern houses for the middle income family have many styles of red brick or brick-colored. In the area we welcome the warm winter sun. Yet interior decoration is very much in consideration for modern homes. Shelves and windows are used and considered in the exterior appearance of modern homes.

The style, environmental adaptation, arrangement of rooms, the color, pattern effect, architectural tricks, and general appearances are only ideas and some of the identifying aspects of the architecture of modern homes already in existence. By means of a set pattern or standard we are very near modern domestic architecture. To do so would be a violation of the basic ideal of modern architecture, which is freedom and development. The ideal modern home should have freedom and should be satisfying to the taste of the individual, as Louis Sullivan was aware of this when he wrote in his book FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT ON ARCHITECTURE, "There should be as many styles of houses as there are kinds (styles) of people and as many differentiations as there are different individuals."

An ideal home of today's life requires the materials, methods and architectural achievements of to-day's world. Homes of today which have a strong tendency to feature traditional styles are not ideally modern. This type of retrogression hindered the progress of architecture and the work of Louis Sullivan, who is well-known in the history of architecture. Truly, modern, middle-income home building depends on past achievements; but it is not modeled from them. Marcel Breuer, one of the top international architects today says, "We can not separate the two: responsibility based on experience and the adventures of progress."

Aggies Lose To Eagles

By CHARLES McHOY

Thanksgiving Day the Aggies took the field at 2:30 P.M. against the mighty flying NCC Eagles. As the game progressed the Aggies suffered a serious defense attack, followed by a weak offensive line against the strong Eagle counter-attacks. The Aggies entered this game with a 4-1 record compared to the Eagles' 1-7 record.

The former CIAA Champs started freshman QB Willie Pearson, but he was unable to put the team on the road to victory; therefore we were confronted by a surprise to see senior QB John Granger attack the mighty Eagles with the Aggies only TD and no extra point. To begin with, the Eagles ran it for a TD and one extra point in the first quarter.

The Eagles scored on a 11-yard drive as Phillips broke over tackle and squared up his way for the final 10. In the second quarter the big plays were a 15-yard pass from John Granger to Phillips and a 21-yard run by halfback Willie Vaughan.

The Eagles passed for the extra point which brought the Aggies to mid-field.

Piggott Comments On Weakness Of Aggies

By BILL GOODE

"The boys played hard but our defense broke down in crucial moments and our mistakes hurt us." This was head Coach Bert Piggott's comment on A&T's 3-1 loss to S. C. College on Thanksgiving Day. He feels that his boys might have been a little overconfident.

The loss left A&T with a 4-5 record for the season and third place in the CIAA Conference. This was the Aggie's first losing season since 1954 and it was the first time since Coach Piggott took over the team in 1957 that they have lost more than three games.

Coach Piggott felt that the over-all weakness of the team this year was its inability to score. Our quarterbacks sometimes failed to come up with the right combination of passing and running to keep our offense moving," he said. "We also locked a second-year halfback."

Halfback Melvin Phillips was the only returning starter.

The Aggies were stopped on two field goal attempts by Nathaniel Jones, the team's kicker, from the Eagles' 29 and 40 yard lines.

Piggott Comments

On Weakness Of Aggies

BY BILL GODDE

"The boys played hard but our defense broke down in several moments and our mistakes hurt us." was the comment of Coach Bert Piggott on A&T's 4-5 loss to S. C. College on Thanksgiving Day. He feels that his boys might have been a little overconfident.

The loss left A&T with a 4-5 record for the season and third place in the CIAA Conference. This was the Aggie's first losing season since 1954 and it was the first time since Coach Piggott took over the team in 1957 that they have lost more than three games.

Coach Piggott felt that the overall weakness of the team this year was its inability to score. Our quarterbacks sometimes failed to come up with the right combination of passing and running to keep our offense moving," he said. "We also lacked an experienced backfield." Halfback Melvin Phillips was the only returning starter.

Florida A&M, the only university that stages its own football bowl game, announced yesterday it had invited Morgan State of Baltimore as this year’s opponent.

The home will meet in the Orange Bowl December 4 in the annual Orange Blossom classic, one of the most popular Negro sports events.

The Morgan State Bears are undefeated in an eight-game season and have scored 381 points in 28 games for their opponents. The Rattlers have a 3-1 record.

The Aggies met both of those football powerhouse during the regular season and lost both games. The Bears of Morgan State trends A&M by the score of 31-6 and have scored 265 points to 27 for their opponents. The Rattlers ended the season with a 7-1 record.

The character of the exterior and interior of the home must go hand in hand. Having a bedroom in keeping with today’s style.

Modern houses for the middle-income family have many styles of real living rooms. The house must have all the comforts of the home. The ideal modern home building is a professional home building.

The style, environmental adaptation, arrangement of rooms, the color, pattern effect, architectural tricks, technicalities and general appearances are only ideas and some of the individual aspects of the architecture of modern homes already in existence.

Thus, by no means a set pattern or standard can be prescribed for modern modern architecture.

William Sinelis, senior Aggie guard and captain, Charlotte, N.C., follows the Aggie’s first losing season since 1954 and it was the first time since Coach Piggott took over the team in 1957 that they have lost more than three games.

Coach Piggott felt that the overall weakness of the team this year was its inability to score. Our quarterbacks sometimes failed to come up with the right combination of running and passing to keep our defense moving.

The character of the exterior and interior of a modern house is of the utmost importance. The modern house must go hand in hand with the setting. Having a modern house in an area that is not consistent with the setting is not a good idea.

Modern houses for the middle income family have many styles of roof designs. Some of them have a long roof over hanging so as to provide shade and light. Others have a flat roof. The choice of a roof design depends on the style and the needs of the family.

The modern house is characterized by the use of large windows, which allow plenty of natural light to enter the house. The style and materials used in the construction of the house reflect the modern aesthetic.

The style, environmental adaptation, arrangement of rooms, and the color scheme all contribute to the overall appearance of modern homes. The style can range from sleek and modern to rustic and cozy, depending on the preferences of the homeowner.

The character of the interior and exterior should be considered as a whole. Every room in a modern house must go hand in hand. Having a sunroom, for example, is no good unless a bedroom is in keeping with today’s style.

Modern houses for the middle income family have many styles of roof, lots of windows, a long roof over hanging so as to block the bright summer sun and still welcome the warm winter sun. Your exterior decoration is very much in consideration for modern homes. Sheer and shadow patterns are much used and considered in the exterior appearance of modern homes.

The style, environmental adaptation, arrangement of rooms, color, patterns, effect, architectural tricks, technicalities, economical aspects, and general appearances are all ideas and some of the identifying aspects of the architecture of modern homes already in existence. By no means, can a set pattern or standard be expected on any modern home.

To do so would be a violation of the basic ideal of modern architecture, which is freedom and development. The ideal modern home should have freedom and should be satisfying to the taste of the individual.

“Truth is the only guide line,” Mr. William L. Wright, founder of the Frank Lloyd Wright Architectural School, said in his book, Frank Lloyd Wright on Architecture.

“Truth should be as many different kinds (styles) of houses as there are kinds (styles) of people and as many different ideas as there are different individuals.”

An ideal home of today’s life revolves the materials, methods and architectural achievement of tomorrow’s world. Homes of today which have a strong tendency to feature traditional styles are not ideally modern. This type of regression hinders the progress of architecture and the work of Louis Sullivan, who is well-known in the history of architecture.

Truly, modern, mid-to-late 1920’s home should be based on useful, practical achievement. From the style of design and the work of Louis Sullivan, who is well-known in the history of architecture.

In Orange Bowl

On December 4

Florida A&M, the only university that stages its football bowl game, announced yesterday that it had invited Morgan State of Baltimore as this year's opponent. The teams will meet in the Orange Bowl December 21 in the annual Orange Blossom classic, one of the major Negro sports events.

The Morgan State Bears are undefeated in an eight-game season and have scored 38 points 27 for their opponents. The Rattlers have a 3-1 record.

The Aggies met both of these football powerhouses during the regular season and lost both games. The Bears of Morgan State upset A&T by the score of 31-6 and the mighty flying Eagles took the field at 1:30 P.M. against the mighty Fying NCC Eagles. As the game progressed the Aggies enforced a strong defense attack, followed by two quick offensive hits against the mighty Eagle counterparts. The Aggies entered this game with a 4-1 record compared to the Eagles' 1-7 record.

The former CIAA Champs started freshman QB Willie Pearson, but he was unable to put the team on the right road to victory; therefore we were confronted by a surprise to see senior QB John Granger attacked the mighty Eagles with the Aggies only TD and no extra point. To begin with, the Eagles ran 25 yards, compared to just 10 for the Aggies. Extra points was overthrown.

The character of the exterior and interior design of the modern home must go hand in hand. Having a living room in which to sleep is keeping with today's style.

Modern houses for the middle income family have many styles of red brick and stucco. The house must have a long roof over hang ing so as to block the bright summer sun and welcome the warm winter sun. There are many styles in modern homes. Shingles and shadows are very much in consideration for modern homes. Shades and shadows are very much in consideration.

The style, environmental adaptation, arrangement of rooms, the color, pattern effect, architectural trivia, technological aspects, and general appearances are only ideas and some of the identifying aspects of the architecture of modern homes already in existence. By no means is the set of past patterns or standard be kept on as the modern architectural style. To do so would be a violation of the basic ideal of modern architecture, which is freedom and development.

The ideal modern home should have freedom and should be satisfying to the taste of the individual. Mike Verdier, who recently brought us in his book FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT ON ARCHITECTURE, "There should be as many kinds (styles) of houses as there are kinds (styles) of people and as many differentiations as there are different individuals."

An ideal home of today’s life requires the materials, methods and architectural achievements of to-day’s world. Homes of today which have a strong tendency to feature traditional styles are not ideally modern. This type of retrogression hindered the progress of architecture and the work of Louis Sullivan, who is well known in the history of architecture. Truly, modern, middle-income home building depends on past achievements; but it is not modeled from them. Modern homes are built by themselves. "We cannot separate the home responsibility based on experience and the adventures of progress."

Florida A&M, the only university that stages its own football bowl game, announced yesterday it had invited Morgan State of Baltimore as this year's opponent. The teams will meet in the Orange Bowl December 4 in a national Negro sports event.

The Morgan State Bears are undefeated in an eight-game season and have scored 386 points to 171 for their opponents. The Retrievers have a 7-1 record. The Aggies met both of these football powerhouse during the regular season and lost both games. The Bears of Morgan State upset A&T by the score of 121 and FAMU handed them a 26-14 defeat. By virtue of the win-loss records of both teams and the scores of their respective games with A&T, Morgan State is a sure touchdown favorite. It is hoped that the CIAA representative will perform to expectations.

Thanksgiving Day the Aggies took the field at 1:30 P.M. against the mighty flying NCC Eagles. As the game progressed, the Eagles outfitted a strong defense attack, followed by a weak offensive line against the strong Eagle counterattacks. The Aggies entered this game with a 4-1 record compared to the Eagles' 1-7 record.

The former CIAA Champs started freshman QB Willie Pearson, but he was unable to put the team on the right road to victory. Therefore we were confronted by a surprise to see senior QB John Granger attack the mighty Eagles with the Aggies only TD and no extra point. To begin with, the Eagles ran 25yds for a TD and one extra point in the first quarter.

Granger's pass attempt for the extra points was overthrown. A&T scored on a 11-yard drive as Phillips broke off tackle and squared his way for the final 10. In the second quarter, the big plays were a 10-yard pass from John Granger to Phillips and a 21-yard run by half-back Willie Vaughn.

Florida A&M, the only university that stages its own football bowl game, is in town as it was announced yesterday it had invited Morgan State of Baltimore as this year's opponent.

The game will meet in the Orange Bowl December 4 in a semiannual Orange Blossom classic, one of the nation's biggest Negro sports events.

The Morgan State Bears are undefeated in an eight-game season and have scored 384 points to 22 for their opponents. The Rattlers have a 7-1 record.

The Aggies met both of these football powerhouse during the regular season and lost both games. The Bears of Morgan State outscored A&T by the score of 31-6 and gave up a 7-1 record.

The Morgan State Bears are a team that stages its own football bowl game and plays in it every year, according to Coach Bert Piggott. "This was the Aggie's first losing season since 1944 and it was the first time since Coach Piggott took over the team in 1957 that they have lost more than three games.

Coach Piggott felt that the overall weaknesses of the team this year was its lack of defense.

"Our quarterbacks sometimes failed to come up with the right combination of passing and running to keep our defense moving," he said. "We also lacked an experienced backfield." Halfback Melvin Phillips was the only returning starter.

On Weakness Of Aggies

BY BILL GOODK

"The boys played hard but our defense broke down in several moments and our mistakes hurt us." This was how Coach Bert Piggott's comments on A&T's 4-5 loss to N. C. College on Thanksgiving Day. He feels that his boys might have been a little overconfident.

The loss left A&T with a 4-5 record for the season and third place in the CIAA Conference. This was the Aggie's first losing season since 1944 and it was the first time since Coach Piggott took over the team in 1957 that they have lost more than three games.
