Drs. Massie And Player Resign Posts As President Of NCC And Bennett

By LEE HOUSE, JR.

Dr. Samuel P. Massie, president, North Carolina College at Durham; and Dr. Willa B. Player, president, Bennett College, Greensboro, have both announced their resignations as president of their respective institutions in favor of government employment.

Dr. Massie who announced his resignation on Saturday, January 22, is to become the FIRST Negro professor at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. Dr. Massie's $17,000 a year post at North Carolina College is being held open for replacement upon his official release June 30, by the board of trustees. The board, however, granted Dr. Massie a leave of absence with full salary beginning the last week of January.

Dr. Player, having made known her resignation during the latter part of January, is slated to take the directorship of the division of college support of the United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare. With Dr. Player's new position effective March 1, the board of trustees has named Dr. Chauncey G. Winston, present dean of instruction, acting president, along with an interim committee to conduct college affairs pending the selection of a new president.

Both former presidents have outstanding educational backgrounds as well as promising futures. Dr. Player, a graduate of Ohio, Wesleyan, Oberlin, and Columbia has also studied at the University of Chicago, Wisconsin, and in France. A former Ford Fellow, she holds many honorary degrees and is renowned in her profession. In like manner, Dr. Massie holds degrees from Dunbar Junior College, Arkansas A. & M., Fisk and Iowa State. Well known in the field of chemistry, he was selected by the Manufacturing Chemists Association as one of the six top college chemistry teachers in the nation in 1961, and was awarded an Iowa State University Alumni Merit Award in 1964 for service to education.

Ex-Presidents Player and Massie both share a long tenure in the field of educational service. Dr. Player, however, has been at Bennett for 35 years, while Dr. Massie has been at North Carolina College for only two and one half years. Rising through the ranks, Dr. Player has headed Bennett since 1955. Dr. Massie, on the other hand, was brought in from Howard University on September 1, 1963.

Unconfirmed rumors have it that a third college presidential slot may be opening, the slot being that of Dr. Mays of Morehouse College at Atlanta.

Library Plans To Curtail Loss Of Needed Books

For many years the staff of the F. D. Bluford Library has been concerned with the problem of vandalism. Reference books, periodicals and other materials are taken. Other materials that are not taken are mutilated and are useless to other persons wishing to use or borrow the materials. This is deplorable and in an effort to curtail these activities the library will institute a new policy.

Guards were placed at the entrance doors starting February 9, and will be placed each night in an effort to stem the tide of missing books.

A copying machine has been available in the Periodicals Department for several months. It would seem that having the material copied would be a better solution to the problem of obtaining information than cutting out pages of reference books.

The library and all of the materials housed in it are provided for the use of all persons associated with A. & T. College. Items that have been taken or mutilated can not be used.

Dr. W. M. Bell Is Seeking Physical Fitness Award

A Somerset, Kentucky, coach, Beaufort, South Carolina's director of city recreation, a Decatur, Georgia, medical equipment inspector, and two men from North Carolina are pitting their contributions to America's physical fitness against one another in hopes of winning a trip to Washington, D. C., for the third annual Jaycees Physical Fitness Leadership Awards Congress.

The five are William Marshall Clark, 102 Vicki Lane, Somerset public school coach who has for 25 years organized and supervised summer recreation programs in addition to his occupation.

Johny Basil Green, 2706 Bull Street, Beaufort director of city recreation who has organized boys' baseball, football and basketball and has secured support for the programs.

Harold S. Sauter, 2285 Melody Lane, Decatur. A medical equipment inspector of the Atlanta Army Depot, Sauter is a many times-awarded fitness leader whose interest dates back to 1945. He once taught a triple amputee to play basketball and a film was made of the effort.

Dr. William McNeill Bell, 1215

Moody Street, Greensboro, North Carolina. As coach, now at A. & T. College of North Carolina, he has had more than his share of championship teams and is also a champion of physical fitness.

Albert M. Crater, 729 Elk Spur Street, Elkin, North Carolina textile mill supervisor who has developed Elkin's complete recreation program, building facilities and recreation department from nothing to status of a city several times the size of Elkin.

Each of the five has been hailed as making the best contribution to the physical fitness of their respective state's citizens by the state Jaycee organization. Vying for the three-state regional title, as are 45 other state winners in eleven other regions, each man's records are being examined by a distinguished panel of judges.

At stake is a three-day expense-paid trip to Washington, D. C., where the twelve regional winners will be honored by the U. S. Jaycees and Standard Packaging Corporation. During the March 27-29 event, three will be named the nation's three outstanding physical fitness leaders of 1965 and presented with $1,000 grants by R. Carl

RAMSEY LEWIS

Gentlemen Of Jazz To Appear Thu. In Charles Moore Gymnasium

Three gentlemen of jazz — Ramsey Lewis, Eldee Young, Issac (Red) Holt — will entertain the college community on February 17 in the Charles Moore gymnasium.

Once relegated to second-rate houses or a few select clubs in their native Chicago, the trio is now in great demand. Even jazz commentators do not argue with their success, and prospects for future success is excellent.

Their first album, "Gentlemen of Swing," was instrumental in establishing their reputation in the Chicago area. "Delilah" and "Carmen" led to a two-year-stand at Chicago's Cloister Inn. Eventually the Trio was able to obtain work on the road about ten and a half months out of the year. And that's where it would have ended if the "In" Crowd had not been released on July 1, 1965. Millions who had not heard of the Ramsey Lewis Trio pushed "In" Crowd onto the charts. In November, the group performed at Carnegie Hall to a packed house.

The recent success of the Ramsey Lewis Trio brought problems as well as popularity. The group started its long climb up the ladder of success on Chicago's West Side as youngsters with a seven-piece group called the Clefs. Eventually they established themselves as the Ramsey Lewis Trio (at the suggestion of Daddy O Daylie, a popular Windy City disc jockey) after the three—Lewis, Young, and Holt — had formed a partnership. With the advent of success and fifteen years of togetherness, little jealousies and personality clashes developed which caused the group to grow apart.

It has been rumored that the present Ramsey Lewis Trio is not the original group. This is contrary to fact. The group did separate for a brief time. Lewis announced his withdrawal and proceeded to hire and rehearse two new men, but public opinion, sentimentality, and negotiations soon changed his opinion. To stabilize the group as a business organization, new contracts were signed.

Fortune and fame is not the only pride of this delightful group. Each of its members is a family man. Ramsey has five children, three boys and two girls. Red and Eldee both have three boys.

Remove The Shadow

BY EULA BATTLE

Most of his life, the Negro has lived in the shadow of racial myth and stereotypes. His major obstacle today is his educational status. To forge ahead, the Negro must take advantage of educational and interracial experiences.

The challenge which faces the Negro today is one of compelling urgency. Having shaken off the shackles of the past, the Negro must use both tact and skill to achieve his goals. He must meet the challenges of today's rapidly changing society head-on and unflinchingly.

The Negro is striving to separate himself from the labels which have plagued him in the past. He wishes to be known only as an American citizen. His efforts are geared toward a new era in American history — a period of enlightenment.

The next generation need not speak of black and white Americans but of Americans — of a group of successful individuals striving for the common good of all concerned. To achieve this state, however, the Negro has had and will have to rely heavily upon himself.

The past is gone, and it is best forgotten. If remembered, it should be a foundation for the present as advances are made toward future progress. Success is built on past achievements, but it can not take the place of present challenges.

The present is here. It must be used to the Negro's advantage, or he will be lost in the struggle for survival. He must take advantage of the economic and educational opportunities offered to him. He must discipline himself to the hardships of life, take the good with the bad, and continue to strive for success.

The future is coming; and, with it, new generations; therefore, the Negro should prepare to remove some of the obstacles from his path. Each day will bring new challenges. To insure future generations of a "shadow-free" environment, the Negro must act now. What has been done in the past was fitting for that time. What is being done in the present is indicative of man's struggle for new horizons. What will be done in the future will influence the status of the next generation and the times of mankind.

Possible Solutions

There is, on A&T's campus, a complete turning of backs by students upon their responsibility. Students refuse to do assignments or to participate in and attend classes (Many do these things half-heartedly.) but insist on not being original. When this is done, there is no alternative but to give such students failing grades. That is the reason that the honor roll for fall semester is short, much too short, compared to the enrollment.

The time for pampering is past. It is imperative that "F's" be prevented by removing the causes for "F's" and by securing substitutes for "F's" which would be acceptable to the student, the administration, and the general public.

Uncle Sam proposes to do just this by drafting young men whose averages fall below "C". This eliminates the source of the "F's" and allows educational institutions to secure substitutes (better and more interested students). Another path of progress often utilized to purge educational institutions of "dead weight" is expulsion. Students whose grades fall below the accepted norm are placed on probation before final expulsion from the institution. In a way, the student is given a second chance — a chance to accept the responsibility that is his alone, to apply self-discipline which is the foundation of college education, and to remove his "F's".

Posting an honor roll is perhaps a good idea, but a more significant manifestation of concern and deliberation might evolve from publication of a "Dishonorable Roll". This statement may cause some readers to become indignant. However, past experience has shown that people react when they are insulted or humiliated. It has been previously suggested that, in its attempts to keep the college community informed, the administration list both the good and the bad "achievements" of the students if no progress is made in the immediate future. (Reference is made here to a flash in the January 28 edition of the college newspaper.)

The honor roll is very short compared to the number of students enrolled at the college, but the honor roll does not accurately reflect the abilities of the students. Each year, according to statistics, brings more talented individuals. Yet, the honor roll does not lengthen proportionately.

One solution to the academic problem could well be voluntary class attendance. For example, at some institutions, honor students are permitted to choose class lectures that they wish to attend. They must, however, take all examinations.

Over 100 Years Of Progress

How's Your Attitude?

By RICHARD J. PEACE

In this age and time, when we are all faced with problems and decisions which will affect our present and future lives, it is no wonder that we might be a little "snappy" or cynical.

I believe that it is for this reason that a set of rules such as the Optimist Creed is in existence. It is an excellent compilation of actions to take in order to develop and maintain a buoyant, favorable attitude. It was taken from Principles of Management by George R. Terry. Cut it out of the paper and paste it on the back of your door. Almost everyone can profit by reading this creed every morning and then putting it into practice during the day.

THE OPTIMIST CREED

Promise yourself —
To be so strong that nothing can disturb your peace of mind.
To talk health, happiness, and prosperity to every person you meet.

To make all your friends feel that there is something in them.

To look at the sunny side of everything and make your optimism come true.

To think only of the best, to work only for the best, and to expect only the best.

To be just as enthusiastic about the success of others as you are about your own.

To forget the mistakes of the past and press on to the greater achievements of the future.

To wear a cheerful countenance at all times and give every living creature you meet a smile.

To give so much time to the improvement of yourself that you have no time to criticize others.

To be too large for worry, too noble for anger, too strong for fear, and too happy to permit the presence of trouble.

FASHIONS

The "D. C." Cap Tops The Heads Of Aggie Males

After frequently reading in the REGISTER about what the girls are wearing on college campuses now days, it is time to get a look at what the men are wearing on campuses, particularly at A&T.

The head dress is a good place to start. Quite frequently, one sees what is sometimes referred to as the "D. C." cap. This type cap is the modern version of the type cap worn during the '20's. It stands up in back and slants downward to the forehead. The most popular patterns of this type cap are the checks and the plaids.

Another popular fad on the campus is the decorative type bow-tie or necktie worn with a dressy type top coat with a matching handkerchief worn in the upper pocket of the top coat. This style is becoming more popular and will surely remain popular throughout the remainder of the winter season.

Jazz Trio

It seems that we may well see someone other than the original Jazz trio, scheduled to appear here on February 17.

Latest reports reveal that Young, bassist, and Holt, drummer, were fired and have been replaced.

As to whether they sound as well as before will depend mostly on each person who listens to them play, now that the changes have been made. At any rate the Aggie family will be able to judge at first hand the performance of these "Gentlemen of Jazz".

The concert is set for the Charles Moore Gymnasium and is scheduled to begin at 8:00 P.M.

The concert will be one of many performed at various colleges throughout the nation. Included in their University and colleges appearances are Depaul University, Northwestern University, Knox College, Chicago Teachers College, and Villanova.

Anonymous Accuser

The end of the semester brought many different reactions from students at A&T. Judging from the size of the failure list, one could venture to say that the most common reaction to the semester's ending was that of disgust; and, as a result, many students experienced a minor depression.

Lifting this depression proved to be no problem for most students as they consumed their semester break with the usual: watching television, playing cards, having loud bull sessions, going to movies, having snow ball fights.

An unusual case is that of an anonymous student in section "C" of Scott Hall. There is a bulletin board located in this section on the first floor. The board normally has the usual announcements that are likely to be found on a dormitory bulletin board.

However, when I ventured through this section on last Friday I noticed that someone, presumably a student, had used that board as a medium of expressing his opinion on many facts of college life. On white index cards this anonymous person wrote defacing remarks about dormitory deans, the Social Science Department.

It seems to me if this person had something to say, or felt some injustice had been done him, he could have done so in a manner that is characteristic of a college-affiliated person.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Student Gov. And Mass Confusion

Editor of THE REGISTER:

Recently, the Student Government took upon itself the duty of chartering buses to the NCC-A&T basketball game at Durham. This was one of the most disorganized affairs that I've encountered.

The Student Government certainly made a mass confusion of things. First of all, we were told that it would cost only $1.25 to ride the bus to Durham. Then on Friday, February 4, we were told that we could ride the bus and get into the game for $1.75 and that the deadline for paying the money would be Saturday, February 5, at 12:00 noon. On Saturday morning, my friends and I went to the Student Government Office, and there was a sign on the door saying that the office would be open at two o'clock. At two o'clock we went back to the office to pay our money, only to find that the office was not open. Finally, one of the representatives responsible for opening the door stated that he had forgotten his key and that we should be at the auditorium at six o'clock and pay then and that the price would be $2.25 now.

At six o'clock, my friends and I were there with our money. The Student Government had what it thought was an organized plan with the girls sitting in one section, the boys in another section, and persons who had not paid in another section. After the people who had already paid had gone to get their tickets, the same representative who forgot his key told us that only eighteen more people could be allowed to go and that they must have correct change. Well, my friends and I were not in that eighteen nor did we have correct change; therefore we did not get to go to the game.

However, we did stay around to see what would happen. Many of the students had to pay $1.75 to ride the bus, plus $1.50 to get into the game, which was not expected because the Student Government nor members of the administration had told them. Just before boarding the bus, they were told that it would cost one dollar to get into the game; and the president of the Student Government, after hearing the mumbling protest, stated, "If there's anyone that does not want to go, there are some people down front who want to buy your tickets." This statement could have been left unsaid because it did nobody any good.

Later on, while we were waiting for the movies, which started late, the president of the Student Government told us that we could have gotten on a fifth bus that came later, but he made no special effort to let anybody know that the bus was available.

Therefore, I have come to the conclusion that there couldn't have been more confusion or disorganization for any other occasion. I hope that the next time the Student Government undertakes this job that it will take time to plan everything well. It should start its plans earlier so that there will be enough time to handle problems like the ones of February 5. Such poor planning and lack of information make me wonder if such matters should be placed in the hands of the Student Government.

Harvard Paper Breaks Tradition With New Edition

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The first announcement that Miss Linda C. McVeigh, 19, had become the first woman managing editor of the Harvard Crimson was made by the Harvard Lampoon, printed for the occasion on perfumed pages.

Miss McVeigh, a Radcliffe student from Anaheim, Calif., was not upset by the Lampoon's lampoon. The men of Harvard are taking it in stride, too.

"I think it's a grand idea," said Crimson executive editor Jay Mathews. "The old all-male traditions of Harvard have lasted long enough."

"Life is competitive," Miss McVeigh said, explaining why she went after the managing editor's post. "I would feel guilty living comfortably. I don't want to end up in some easy job and making easy choices."

She said she once had wanted to be a lawyer but now aspires to journalism.

As managing editor, Miss McVeigh will run a staff of 30, about a third of them girls, and be responsible for the news pages. The Crimson publishes every day but Sunday, has a circulation of 4,200 and usually runs six to eight pages.

The new commander for the 605th Cadet Wing at A&T College for the spring semester is Cadet Major Bobby R. Evans of Henderson. He will replace Cadet Lieutenant Colonel John A. Smith who has been made assistant to the Commandant of Cadets.

Lt. Colonel Harold L. Lanier, left, professor of military science at the college, and Mrs. Parker admire the medal.

Parker served as operations action officer, Office of Assistant Chief of Staff, Operations, United States Military Assistance Advisory Group, Republic of China, a tri-service operation including the Army, Air Force and Navy.

Lindsay Street May Get New Name

A petition to rename the portion of Lindsay Street between Cumberland and Luther Streets to Bluford Street will be presented to Greensboro Planning Board at its meeting Monday at 2:30 p.m. in council chamber of Municipal Building, J. Kenneth Lee, local attorney, said today.

The change, if approved, presumably would remove one of the main objections to a proposal to name a street across the north business district Lindsay for its entire length. The street now has four names.

The petition, signed by approximately 45 persons, will be handed to the board during its public hearing, continued from earlier meetings, on a single name for the east-west street.

The street, joined by construction over a period of years, now carries the names of Price, Bishop, Lindsay and Oakmont between Edgeworth and Bagley Streets and runs into an unintentional alignment with Arlee to the east. Arlee will be squeezed from the list when the street is extended later to ORD to join with Oakmont there. It also will be extended west to Spring Street.

Initiators Of Sitdown Hold Reunion

By BILL GOODE

Six years ago this February, four A&T College freshmen initiated the Civil Rights Movement that engulfed the whole country. They began in Greensboro in the form of sitdown demonstrations at local lunch counters. The four Aggies were Ezell Blair and David Richmond of Greensboro, Joseph Ezell Blair, Jr., Joseph McNeill, David Richmond, and Franklin McCain are shown in this picture taken in 1960 when they were all freshmen at A&T and actively engaged in the "Sit-In" movement which they initiated.

McNeill of Wilmington, and Franklin McCain of Washington, D. C.

The initial demonstrations were not just haphazard incidents. The four young men had been planning for months with a definite purpose in mind. They were tired of living with the complacency and fearfulness of the older members of the Negro race and definitely did not want their children to be victims of was while they were young. The fact that they were allowed to shop in the store, but were refused service at the lunch counter, didn't make much sense. After all, the money was going into the same pocket.

Blair and his co-workers solicited the support of students from other colleges as well as A&T, but they wanted no one who was not sincere or sympathetic with the movement. They made it clear that the demonstrations were to be orderly and non-violent.

It can truly be said that this nation owes a debt of gratitude to these four young men who had the courage and dignity to begin a non-violent revolution which brought about the eventual integration of lunch counters and restaurants throughout the South.

Thousand of students in other cities were aroused by the actions of these pioneers of equality. Soon, the sitdown demonstration became an everyday practice in cities of racial prejudice. Even those parents and adults who were against the demonstrations and were content to sit back and wait were aroused to the cause.

A. I. Department Seeks Members For Judging Team

The A & T. College Animal Industry Department is now seeking members for the 1966 Livestock Judging Team. After a short period of training and practical work, the top four members will be selected to make up the team to participate in the Southern Regionals to be held this year in Normal, Alabama on March 23 and 24 at Alabama A. & M. College.

The Aggie team placed third in overall total points, with 1501 points, and first in poultry judging last season at Southern University in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. The top six schools competing for a total of 2,000 points were Alabama A. & M. (1555), Fort Valley State (1535), A. & T. College (1501), Alcorn, A. & M. (4th place), South Carolina State (5th) and Florida A. & M. (6th place).

Jonnie Jones, one of the 1965 Aggie team members, tied in a triple first place for the poultry contest last season with Fort Valley State College and Alabama A. & M. Jones scored 82 points out of a possible 100.

A. & T. College will be competing also to keep the R. E. Williams Memorial Trophy for the second year. This trophy is given in memory of the late R. E. Williams, poultry specialist at South Carolina State College, and must be obtained by a school three consecutive years in order to keep it. It was obtained in 1963 and 1964 by South Carolina State's judging team.

The training staff is looking forward to training a team this month that will help the Aggies to rank with other schools participating in the 1966 Southern Regionals.

The four students at A&T College, who on February 1, 1960, initiated the lunch counter sit-in movement which later spread across the nation, were last week reunited in Greensboro.

They are from left to right: Ezell Blair, Jr., instructor-counselor, Rodman Jobs Corps Center, New Bedford, Massachusetts; Lt. Joseph McNeill, navigator and combat crewman with the Strategic Air Command (SAC) of the U. S. Air Force, Ellsworth Air Force Base, South Dakota; David Richmond, Greensboro, who dropped out of college for two years, but has returned to complete requirements in business administration; and Franklin McCain, development chemist, Celanese Corporation of America, Charlotte.

The Frank House would like to challenge the fraternities of A. and T. College to a "whopper eating" contest. This contest will be held during the mid-term. The prize of a $25 savings bond will be given to the Fraternity that eats the most "whoppers" during this time. In order to become eligible for the "whopper-eating" contest, the fraternities must purchase "whoppers" between the dates set by Mr. Barry Banks of the Frank House and the members of the fraternities. The two fraternities that purchase the most "whoppers" will be the ones to participate in the contest for the savings bond.

Every purchase of a "whopper" will be accompanied by a coupon by the Frank House to the members of the Frats or to persons who would like their favorite fraternity to win the contest. At the end of the allotted time, the two fraternities that bring in the most coupons collected by them and by their friends or those interested in seeing their favorite fraternity win will be the two fraternities eligible for the contest. The Frank House challenges the Frats. Which one will win the $25 savings bond? All interested fraternities are asked to register with Mr. Barry Banks at the Frank House.

A. & T. defeated North Carolina College in Durham with a fantastic rally in the final seconds that gave them a 66-65 victory.
The Eagles of N. C. College were leading 65-62 with 40 seconds left. Then Robert Saunders hit a 20 footer to narrow the margin to 65-64. With ten seconds remaining, Dewey Williams intercepted an in-bound pass by N. C. College. He passed off to George "Mack-the Knife."

Just as he crossed the mid-court strip, "Mack the Knife" let fly one of his potent jump shots from 30 feet. The shot was true with a swish for the final two points.

"Mack the Knife" led the Aggie scoring with 18 points. He had help from Tony Skinner with 17 and Robert Saunders with 12.

Manning of the Eagles led all of the scorers with 21 points. If Manning were more of a "team player," his team would have a better record. He "hogs" the ball and plays as though he has never heard of the phrase "pass-off."

Chargers Fall As W-S Rams Score 102-84

The A & T College Aggies fell before a mighty scoring barrage by the Winston-Salem State Rams 102-84, Monday night in a crucial CIAA basketball game played here at the Charles Moore Gymnasium.

THE AGGIES, behind the fine shooting of Tony Skinner who also pulled some fancy shooting with his sweeping hook shot, were still in the ball game as late as 4:00 to play. They matched the Rams about point-for-point in the first five minutes of the second half, but a scoring lag for three short minutes beginning at 14:30 in the second period did the biggest damage.

Elvin Bethea, a member of the A & T College track team, last week won the national championship in the shot-put event at the first annual National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) Indoor Track Meet held at Kansas City, Missouri, with a toss of 56-feet, 9-inches.

Bethea, also a star football player, was this fall selected to an All-American football team by a leading national weekly newspaper. He comes from Trenton, New Jersey.

A&T Defeats Morgan State 110-71 As Wilt Chamberlain Looks On

Aggies gained sweet revenge Tuesday night as they annihilated Morgan State by a score of 110-71. Morgan State was the only C. I. A. A. team that held a victory over the Aggies.

The way the Aggies played Tuesday it seemed hard to believe that same Morgan team beat "the mighty men from Aggieland." From the opening tip-off, it was clear that Morgan was out of the game.

The Aggies were supposed to be a little "rusty" after a long lay-off because of examinations and bad weather. But they came on the floor and put on the best basketball show in quite a while.

Maybe the presence of one of the greatest basketball players in the world inspired the Aggies to such great performance. Wilt Chamberlain, all-pro center of the Philadelphia 76'ers of the N. B. A., was in Greensboro with his team to play the St. Louis Hawks.

George Mack led the Aggies with 22 points. Ted Campbell contributed 18 points, Robert Saunders had 16, and Dewey Williams had 14.

"Mack the Knife" was hurtling all over the court as he scored in every possible way. He sank several set shots from beyond the charity circle; then he maneuvered into the corners and proceeded to astonish everyone with his jump shots. He also scored on driving layups and tap-ins.

Ted Campbell and Dewey

Williams had their best games of the season. Campbell maneuvered well under the basket and was always in position for a tap-in or a rebound. Williams scored mostly on tap-ins and blocked several shots.

As Morgan players drove in for layups, Campbell and Williams would slap the ball back into their faces. That was a quite a terror for Morgan to face.

Here And There In Sport's News With E. Fulton

What is an under-rated basketball player? An under-rated basketball player is a fellow who goes out, plays his heart out and receives little attention or recognition. He is a vital part of the team and is noticed only when he is out of the line-up. A player of this caliber is our own Tony Skinner.

Skinner goes out each game and plays a top-notch game offensively and defensively. Also, he is a good student. Earlier this season he, along with Bob Saunders, was presented an award by the United Men's Congress for being named "Athlete-Scholar of the Year".

My congratulations to Anthony Skinner for being a "dependable" man, on the basketball court and in the classroom, and I feel that I share the sentiments of many Aggies. He is certainly a credit to the team and to the college.

The Aggies played three games last week. They beat Morgan State at home and North Carolina College in Durham. However, they lost their first home game of the season as the Rams from Winston-Salem State played "whoopie" with them in Charles Moore Gymnasium. The final score was 102-84.

Going into the game with the Rams, A. & T. was tied for the CIAA lead with that same Winston-Salem State. They had identical conference records of 11-1. Now Winston-Salem has sole possession of first place with a 12-1 record. A. & T. trails with an 11-2.

In the Ram's victory over the Aggies, Earl Monroe proved why he is a prospective All-American. He almost single-handedly wrecked the Aggies.

Aggie Co-Captain James Webber is lost for the remainder of the basketball season because of an injury. The starting line-up now appears to be Bob Saunders, George "Mack the Knife", "Soapy" Adams, Tony Skinner, and William Gilmer.

"Mack the Knife" is one of the flashiest basketball players I've ever seen. He is so fast that it is difficult to keep track of him. He pulls down a rebound under the defensive boards in one instant and a second later he is downcourt driving in for a lay-up. Teddy Campbell and Dewey Williams appear to be coming into their finest forms as the top reserves. Williams isn't much of a scoring threat, but he is a terror on defense. Campbell is tremendous under the offensive and defensive boards.

The CIAA Tournament is scheduled to be played in the Greensboro Coliseum on February 24, 25, and 26.

The teams that are assured of representation are the A. & T. Aggies, the Norfolk State Spartans, the Winston-Salem State Rams, the North Carolina College Eagles, and Elizabeth City State.
