Julian Bond, the stormy figure in Atlanta politics and a member of the Georgia State Legislature, who spoke last week at A&T College, urged that the rights and lives of Negroes be upheld and not negotiable.

The former staffer, denied his seat after being elected three times, said that the rights and lives of real human beings are at stake.

He told the group that Negroes are the last to receive the benefits of the country's prosperity. However, he said he is beginning to wonder if the right to vote, often quipped, is so important when there is not freedom of speech.

One of the founders of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), Bond traced the development of the civil rights movement in this country.

He said under the system of democracy, there can be no middle ground in the matter of human rights.

The speaker said the right to be a lawbreaker at a lunch counter, the right to be served in a restaurant, and the right to vote are not the full answers to the racial problems in America.

"This can be offered only through full participation in American life, he concluded, "for the rights and lives of real human beings are at stake."

"The Negro Student is isolated, uninformed, apathetic, and generally an onlooker." These were the words of Miss Martha Randell, National President of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who spoke to the student body at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

In answer to questions by reporters following her presentation, Randell said that his statements about the Vietnam War had no bearing on the effectiveness of the civil rights movement.

She explained that there are all shades of thought within the movement. He believed that there must be different kinds of leadership in the movement. A Time To Rejoice

From time to time, THE REGISTER is sent releases about promotions of Aggies who are in the service. Because there is a tie that binds all Aggies together, such news is welcomed.

One of these promotions is that of John Lewis, Mill Jackson, Percy Heath, and the Modern Jazz Quartet, and I think the promotion is well merited.

It is pleasing to report to my present position that your achievement was well received and well recognized by many fellows many miles from the A&T College campus.

Fashion Review Reveals Popular Trends

Four A&T Alumni Among Listing Of Achievers

Fashion review reveals popular trends. Four A&T Alumni served as special consultants.

Mrs. Rosalie Shaw, fashion consultant of Prago-Guyes, posed briefly with student models at the Fashion Review... She pointed out the fact that hair styles change so often, that one cannot predict for any set period of time. Last year, the popular trend was the "little boy"... this year it is worn to "infinity." Shadows and various tints, too, seem to be very much in fashion as are wigs and hair pieces.

Mrs. Shaw followed with points of equal interest. "Nothing is more beautiful than a healthy, glowing, well-conditioned complexion," she reminded the girls. Dry skin problems are due to the cells of the inner layers of the skin. The basic advice and remedy for combating these problems is "to have a sufficient and adequate diet, get plenty of rest, develop necessary health habits, and an overall routine for cleanliness." Many good skin creams on the market are recommended... (1) cleans, (2) rinses, (3) and moisturize troubled skins.

Mr. Guyes, local fashion consultant, demonstrated the latest fashions in wearing apparel to the girls. This was a real treat when many of the dormitory girls were not used to modeling. "Fashions," he further explained, "are the erreur of the people dressed in spirit of fun. It lasts only for a short time." Among many of the points to remember are these:

1. Have ideas of taste and levels as they appeal to you.
2. Select basic clothes which can be worn on many occasions.
3. The skirt and sweater ensemble is the most practical campus outfit.
4. "Rings like jewelry," he pointed out, "are most appropriate to the finished costume. One thing that should always be remembered is the selection of color -- for don'ts and don'ts for each individual."

A&T College has been awarded a contract of $28,000, by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, to continue a research project concerned with the utilization of wheat by the adult male.

The project, which began this month, is being operated under the direction of Dr. Cecile H. Edwards, professor of nutrition and research. Dr. Seetha N. Ganapathy, associate professor of nutrition and research, will serve as co-director of the study.

Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, president of the college, announced receipt of the award this week. He said the new contract, the second in the series, brings to a total of $131,350, committed within three years to the project sponsored by the Human Nutrition Research Division, Agricultural Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. A previous grant of $85,288, was awarded in February, 1963.

The objective of the research is to study the utilization of wheat by an adult man. During a scientifically controlled diet period lasting 24 days, 12 college men were fed diets in which the major source of protein was provided by wheat bread. The men continued their usual college activities, receiving adequate calories, minerals and vitamins. The major difference to them was that all of their food was previously weighed and had to be eaten in the Human Research Metabolism Unit located in Byrom Hall on the A&T College campus. For reasons, prepared by the research staff, were made for them from wheat starch.

Samples collected during the research study are being analyzed for five vitamins, four minerals, cholesterol, phospholipids, lipids and total lipids, as well as many nitrogen containing compounds. During some of the four controlled dietary periods, the men received in addition to the wheat bread either plain beans, rice or peanut butter permitting the research team to determine the effect of these foods on improving the utilization of wheat.

The new phase of the research grant will measure the effect of the wheat diets on urinary amino acids and phosphatidyl acid, five additional minerals, coelenterdin, molybdenum, copper, zinc and iron and plasma proteins.

The staff of the project also includes Mrs. Lewey Bunkley, research chemist; Richard Craven, research technicians; and three students who will gain research training and experience while assisting with the project.

Aggies Top In Double Overtime Game

The Aggies had to fight for their very lives before making the Elizabeth City State College Vikings, 116-101, in the final game of the CIAA basketball season last week.

The Aggies whipped the Vikings in double overtime in a game which saw six technical fouls called, nine players disqualified, one ejected.

The Vikings finished out the game with four players in the last 18 seconds; but, at that point, it had no influence on the final outcome. They were hopelessly behind at 114-101.

Not all of the technicals went against players. The two coaches picked up one each — Cal Irvin his second in 17 years of coaching. The Vikings had to play catch-up even at the end of the first overtime as Robert Chadbuck dumped in a layup with just four seconds remaining. It was during this period that Elizabeth City had the advantage, leading by three points with just 43 seconds left on the clock.

Kerry Watts saved it for the Aggies as he sank three straight free throws from the charity line. He missed the fourth shot at the 11-second mark, which could have eliminated the agony Aggie fans had to suffer for another five minutes of play. The period ended 98-98.

It was during the final overtime period in which the Aggies finally recovered from the shock. Sylvester (Soapy) Adams, who led all scorers with 36 points, set the stage for the thrilling victory. He made a quick three-point play and another field goal to put A&T in lead 106-99, and, in the wild scramble which followed, fouls were called right and left. A&T had three players, while Elizabeth City seated six men of their 18-man squad.

The Aggies blew a 16-point lead after six minutes of play in the second half. The Vikings put on a full court press and in the process chipped away the bulge, tying the ball game at 87-87 with 36 seconds left. Daryl Cherry, who got 21 points for the evening, basketed a layup with 11 seconds showing on the clock, which sent A&T fans into short-lived hysteria, but it only set the stage for the nail-biter by Smith.
