Campbell And Mobley Sweep Spring Elections

H-P-H Threesome Get Top Posts For Senior Class

The 1967 spring elections polled a total of approximately 1,300 votes as compared to last year's 1,256. Marsh Campbell and Patricia Mobley were victorious in capturing the top positions.

Campbell polled 1,022 votes while his opponent, Richard Womack, polled 290.

Campbell is a political science major from Kings Mountain and the son of an A&T College alumnus.

Before becoming president-elect of the Student Government, he held a number of campus and civic positions. Among these were the following: Men's Council (1966-67); vice president Men's Council (1965-66); student representative to the Association of Southern Colleges and Universities (follow-up program on the paperback book project, 1966); member, college council (1966-67); A&T representative, Greensboro Interracial Council Advisory Board (1966-67); student, Intensive Summer Studies Program (Yale University, 1966); vice president, political science club.

Patricia Mobley, newly-elected Miss A&T is an engineering mathematics major and a native of Greensboro. Patricia is presently president of the Mathematics Club and treasurer of Alpha Phi Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority. She holds membership in the off-campus club and has the honor of being Miss Company D of the Army ROTC.

Patricia enjoys bowling, collecting records, playing badminton writing creatively, and singing.

Other Student Government Association officers include Henry McCoy, vice president; Patricia McCoy and Narviar Cathcart, secretaries; and Robert Connor, treasurer.

In the race for senior class president, John Harrington was victorious over Major Clark. Others who were running on the same ticket with Harrington were also successful in gaining class positions. They include Nathaniel Powell as vice president and Sharon Harris as Miss Senior.

Melvin Bentley will serve as treasurer of the senior class; and the following persons will represent the class on the Student Government: Henry Higgs, Earnest Fulton, and James Rhodes.

James Jones, an engineering physics major, will lead the junior class with Charlene Banner as Miss Junior. Willie Drake will be vice president; Sandra Carlton, secretary; and Ronald Boyd, treasurer. Willie Currie, Barbara Gore, Donald Jones, and Calvin Mathews will be class representatives.

For the sophomore class, Lawrence McSwain was elected president. Serving with him will be Wanda Miller as Miss Sophomore; Sterling White, vice president; and Aona Harrington, secretary. The eight representatives include Harold Glover, Aona Harrington, Johnnie Hoyle, Kenneth Long, Vincent McCullough, Lawrence McSwain, James Munn, and Sterling White.

Tabulated results were made available to students on Sunday, May 7, from 2 until 4 P. M. in Cooper Hall Lounge.

Economics Prof. To Address Mother's Day Audience

By I. V. SELLERS

There is a completely new and up-to-date piece of machinery in A&T's Driver Education Department. Designed for greater and more profound learning skill and ability, this new model is rapidly winning an acceptable position in the school's program for greater learning efficiency.

The Simulator, as it is called, bears a close resemblance to a moving car or trailer-house, externally. When it is examined from the inside, however, there is quite another view to be seen. This compact, yet efficient, little van is equipped with model automobile gear (steering wheel, lights, speedometer, accelerator, brakes signal indicator, etc.), and it will seat twelve students at one time. Operated electrically by a central computer, located in the rear of the van, the "stationary automobiles" allow little fear for rear-end collisions. Situated directly in front of the model autos is a large picture screen which creates the illusion of an actual driving condition. The film is projected on the screen from the central computer. A computerized tape records each student's progress and his faults.

This benefiting, educational device was received on a loan to A&T by Southern Motors, Gate City and Chrysler, Inc. as an added asset to insure practical learning as well as experience. The Driver Education Department has a very good reason to feel proud because A&T is the only school in the state with this device. Says Mr. Isaac Barnett, instructor in the depart-

College Plans Full Day Of Activities

A&T College has observed Honor's Day, Founder's Day, and many other annual occasions during the present school year. All of these observances have placed the faculty, administrators, and students in the limelight. On Sunday, May 14, A&T College pays tribute to all Aggie mothers.

Activities for Mother's Day are scheduled to begin at 9:30 A.M. on the main lawn in front of the Dudley Building. At this time, the Army and Air Force ROTC units will present their annual review. The Air Force division will present awards to outstanding cadets in Aerospace Studies 100, 200, 300, and 400. The Army division will present superior cadet awards to outstanding cadets from all classifications as well as the Clifton Howell Marksmanship Award to the highest scoring member of the rifle team.

The annual Worship Service will highlight the day's activities. It will be held at 11:00 A.M. in Moore Gymnasium. The featured speaker will be Dr. Juanita O. D. Tate, professor of economics here at A&T College.

Dr. Tate received the A. B. degree in Romance Languages from Howard University, the M. A. degree in Economics from Howard, and the Ph. D. degree from the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences of New York University. While at N. Y. U., Dr. Tate received the Penfield Fellowship to complete her residence work.

Professionally, Dr. Tate holds membership in the American Economic Association, the Southern Economic Association, Kappa Delta Pi National Honor Society in Education, and Omicron Delta Epsilon National Honor Society in Economics. Dr. Tate founded the first North Carolina chapter of the Omicron Delta Epsilon Honor Society here at A&T in 1965. In addition, Dr. Tate is a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority.

Dr. Tate, who is also the sister-in-law of the late President F. D. Bluford, joined the A&T staff in 1957. She is devoted to her "children" as she calls her students. Her students, in turn, refer to her as "Ma Tate."

The Mother of the Year will also be announced at the Worship Service.

Lunch for the mothers and other guests will be served at 12:30 P.M. in both Brown and Murphy Halls. Special meal rates are offered for the parents' meals.

A social hour from 3:00-4:00 P.M. in the Bluford Library lounges and the dormitories will climax the Mother's Day activities.

DR. J. O. D. TATE

Ernest Johnston, Jr., former feature editor of The Register, left, accepts an award from John Thomas, founder of the Crispus Attucks Parade held annually in Newark, New Jersey. Johnston is a staff writer with the Star Ledger in Newark and received the award for his service to the parade through reporting. Johnston was among many alumni who visited the college during the Diamond Anniversary Celebration in April.

"Gotta Be A Do Right Man"

Few signs remain as evidence of the spirited battle for Student Government offices recently held here. The votes have been cast, and some candidates have emerged victorious. As to whether these are the best of the field, the truth remains to be seen, as they are yet untried in their newly-acquired offices.

The office of Student Government President is one that has remained in an idle state long enough. A&T has had its share of glory seekers who were the sole benefactors of their office. It is now time for A&T to have a man in whom we can place our confidence, one that we can feel reasonably certain will act on his better judgment whether the majority is behind him or not.

Recent elections show that we have placed this confidence in Marsh Campbell as he will assume the role of President of the Student Government for the school year 1967-68. Campbell is a political science major from Kings Mountain and is very active in campus life.

We are all cognizant of the fact that the president's office is in many ways weak, mainly because the power, influence and integrity which the office encumbers have been drastically injured by preceding presidents' reluctance to use them.

How can this power, influence, and integrity be replaced to the office of Student Government president? Not, we can be sure, by a great number of fruitless attempts to please everybody; not by unnecessarily playing the middle man between the students and the administration on issues that call for a decision one way or the other; not by making general optimistic promises on needed progress; and not by trying to play herdsman to a wrongly assumed stupid and uninterested student body.

There are no easy ways to restore to this important office that which it is due; therefore, it depends upon whether the president has acquired the conviction about whether he will be a true leader or whether he will merely be a symbol, a position holder, a piece of puddy clay which takes on any shape depending upon in whose hands it happens to be.

The new president should not proceed on the assumption that the student body should support him in his program, for they lack the confidence as to what an active S-G president can do because of previous poor showings. There are, however, a great number of things in the new president's favor. Besides the many students who will vigorously support his efforts, he has the added confidence of knowing that he is not a pioneer at this task, and can find many sources on how to be the best of presidents. He also has contemporaries at other colleges and universities who will experience the same problems that he will encounter. Some communication with them may prove invaluable.

No matter how one looks at it, an effective Student Government Association at A&T College is going to require a great effort on the part of all students, but the greatest effort will undoubtedly have to come from the Student Government president himself.

A Mother In History

By LARRY WRENN

A mother died May 9, 1905. Her daughter, Anna Jarvis, loved her mother so dearly that she realized, upon her mother's death, how much she had taken her mother for granted. During her mourning, she had a vision. She realized the grown-up children's lack of tender consideration and their need of a reminder of a loving unselfish mother, and she envisioned the establishment of a day, set aside, for honoring mothers.

An employee of an advertising department in Philadelphia, Miss Jarvis began a letter writing campaign requesting a mother's day. She wrote to governors, congressmen, clergymen, industrialists, anyone who could exert influence. The response was so overwhelming that she quit her job and devoted her full time to the campaign.

From her sizable inheritance, she dug deeply for expenses for lectures and printed booklets which she distributed. At the time when many women were fighting for suffrage, Miss Jarvis was campaigning for something more sentimental, sweet, idealistic, and less controversial.

She persuaded Rep. Thomas of Heflin, Alabama, and Sen. Morris Sheppard of Texas to present a resolution for a national Mother's Day. On May 8, 1914 President Wilson signed a proclamation which stated "Whereas the service rendered the United States by the American mother is the greatest source of the country's strength and inspiration and . . . the American mother is doing so much for the home, for moral uplift, and religion . . . therefore it is resolved that the flag should be displayed as a public expression of our love and reverence for the mothers of the country."

Anna Jarvis's vision came true. But Miss Jarvis wasn't satisfied in persuading only America; she depleted her inheritance by lecturing tours abroad. She persuaded 43 foreign countries to adopt Mother's Day.

She was content in the fact that Mother's Day was celebrated on the second Sunday in May (the anniversary of her mother's death) and that the carnation (her mother's favorite flower) was the emblem, but she abhorred the commercialism of the occasion.

"I'm trying in every way possible to prevent Mother's Day from being desecrated by the greed of individuals and organizations who see in it only a way to make money," she said. She hated the commercialism of Mother's Day so much that before her death, Miss Jarvis said with bitterness, "I'm sorry I ever started Mother's Day."

In spite of Miss Jarvis' feelings, however, we continue to observe the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day; and this year as in previous years, mothers throughout the country will gather on college campuses to be honored and most of all to observe their children.

The Register salutes all mothers everywhere, but especially does it salute the mothers of all Aggies.

FASHIONS

Cool Dress For High Temperatures

By WILLIE MAE LEACH

Songs about pretty girls and summertime naturally go hand in hand. Everyone's heard some song about girls and summertime. Two of the very many are "The Girls in Summer Dresses" and "Music To Watch Girls By". That's what a great majority of our male population does, watch girls. With the warm weather, you boys are going to see lots and lots of girls in cool summer dresses that are comfortable and easy to care for. For a while, the woollens are going back into storage and cotton and other cool fabrics will dominate the fashion scene.

With temperatures soaring higher and higher every-day, there will be lots of sleeveless dresses worn. This was a favorite style for winter that was usually worn with a matching coat or jacket. These same styles are being utilized for summer with the exception of materials being used.

Stealing their way out of winter's past and into summer's present are the ever popular "easy-going" styles. These include the simplicity of the A-line styles, the tent styles and the pom-pom styles. Colors used are all "bright" colors, typical of the out-door life of summer-sun and fun. Most designers are finding a place for yellow and orange in all of their collections. They are the two favorite colors for summer. The dress below is a simplicity dress featuring a large pleat down the front and no sleeves. It has a simple rounded collar and is lavishly splashed with large yellow and orange flowers.

Presumed Fools Act Like Heroes

By OSCAR BEAL

Quite a bit of tension was created when the William Frantz grade school of New Orleans admitted four Negro children in 1960. The white mothers who had children enrolled there made their children stay at home and went to the school to scoff the four Negro children.

One of the white mothers, Daisy Gabrielle, did not agree with the others, and each morning she and the four Negro mothers went through the mob of jeering and heckling mothers to take their children to school. As a result, Mr. Gabrielle lost his job, and each member of the family was scoffed at wherever they went. A job was waiting in Pawtucket, Rhode Island for Mr. Gabrielle, and he took three of his children in one car and Mrs. Gabrielle took the other three in another car along a different route. They had said to one another that, if the mob was waiting for them, all of them wouldn't be taken at the same time. In explaining her actions, Mrs. Gabrielle said that she would rather be beaten by a mob than her conscience.

This is only a spattering of the many heroes of the human race. Some people would call them fools; to me, they're heroes — heroes who have various things in common: only one life to live; a place and time in their lives for something more important than their own welfare; faith that the inhumanity they saw was worth fighting against; the question, "What can one person do?" with his actions and answering it with his actions and often his life; and the thought, "My life is worth nothing — or everything."

Milmore Darp: Belated Candidate

By LARRY WRENN

Milmore Darp is a man who is "sick and tired" of the REGISTER'S errors. Once they wrote an obituary about his death. He called the office to inform them of their error and they explained to him it was too late to retract the obituary but they promised to print his name in the birth column so he could "start over again."

Milmore was a candidate in the last election and the REGISTER failed to print his platform. He claims to feel "sighted"; and despite the fact he only received two votes and the election is over, he insists that his platform be printed so "the students will know what they missed." After several bomb threats the REGISTER has agreed to print Mr. Darp's platform.

EXECUTIVE FINK CONTENDER "What exactly is the office of Executive Fink?"

"It is basically the same as all other student government offices, that is you do nothing and have no power!"

"What is your platform for this government office?" (Darp floundered when the interviewer said "government".)

"Don't use the word "government", please. Government reminds me of the North Carolina House and Senate or United States Congress or the student government at UNC-G. These governments can find problems and actually get something done about the problem. We can't. We can discuss the problem but that's about all. We're better than the average discussion group but not quite a full-fledged government. Maybe, Disgov would be a more suitable name for it."

"Getting back to the original question; what is your platform for this disgov office?"

"I would like to say that if I'm elected I will see to it that the disgov that we now have will be changed into a full-fledged government. Then I will get the card-playing crowd out of the soda shop, so I can eat my bologna in peace, quieten the library so studious students can learn in peace. I probably can't do anything about the food in the cafeteria; it's too far gone to be helped, but I would like to secure a beer-permit so students can drink to forget the quality of the food. I would like to form a co-ordinating committee for the boys' and girls' dorms to work together on projects such as picnics, off-campus parties, and panty-raids. I will lead many demonstrations."

"Demonstrations about the war, or cafeteria service or the "D" you got in social science?"

"Oh no! I can change those by negotiations. We would demonstrate to ask for better students, harder curriculum programs, and a one-a-week assembly speaker of merit. Get famous speakers like Arthur Miller, Al Capp, Edward Albee, President Johnson, and Benop Pendelzak."

"I've not heard of Benop Pendelzak."

"Pendelzak wrote a book entitled HOW I BECAME INTERNATIONALLY FAMOUS."

"How do you plan to become elected?"

"I will dress up everyday; frankly, I can't wait until elections are over and I can return to wearing blue jeans. I will go around smiling and speaking to people I usually wouldn't bother to speak to. I'm really glad that I'm not running for state office because I would have to go around kissing babies and I hate kids. Say, don't print that about me not liking babies."

"Don't worry, I'll give you my word that I will not put that in the paper. My word is worth its weight in gold. (How much does a word weigh?) Do you think that you have enough supporters?"

"I'm not worried about voters; I have three brothers and a roommate who have promised to vote for me. Most of the voters don't know whom to vote for and they pick a name at random. I have a distinct advantage because my name is Darp. Most people know someone named Darp, so when they see names they've never heard of like Johnson and Robinson, they will pick the name Darp simply because it is familiar. I also have an advantage in the home-boy vote because I'm from D. C. I wish they would put the name of the hometown on the ballot."

"Do you have any trouble with rivals who destroy your campaign posters?"

"No, I expected it so I went around tearing down other candidates' posters before they could tear down mine. So far no one has touched my posters; I guess they are afraid to mess with mine because they know what I can do to them. Well, (he looked at his watch) I must go now. My home-boy is student teaching and he said I could use the last 45 minutes of class time to speak to the class."

"(I wonder if he got there on time because it took him 25 minutes to walk to the door of the soda shop because he was shaking hands, talking fast, and handing out literature and money.)"

Lt. Col. Massenburg Fills Post As Lt. Col. Santure Transfers

Lt. Col. Samuel E. Massenburg last week assumed the position at A&T College as professor of aerospace studies, in charge of the Air Force ROTC Detachment, a position formerly held by Lt. Col. Richard D. Santure. Col. Massenburg is credited with the recent dramatic increase in pilot production at the College.

A combat pilot himself, Col. Massenburg came to A&T in 1963, as assistant professor of aerospace studies, to head the Air Force Flight Instruction Program. During that brief period, more than 55 A&T students have completed the basic flight program here and have left to continue flight training at various Air Force flying schools throughout the country.

An Air Force veteran of 17½ years, he holds the rating of command pilot, has logged more than 3,000 hours, 500-hours of test pilot time and more than 100-hours in combat time.

As a bomber pilot in Korea, Col. Massenburg's craft was shot down in January, 1953. Captured, he remained a prisoner of war to the end of hostilities through August of the same year.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Richard D. Santure, who has been transferred to a staff position as branch chief, Special Action Section in ROTC at the Air University, Montgomery, Alabama.

Encyclopedias Invite Dean To Contribute

A professor at A&T College has been invited to write an article for inclusion in the next edition of ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA.

Dr. Darwin T. Turner, dean of the A&T Graduate School and former professor of English, was asked last week to prepare an article for the publication on Alain Locke, the noted Negro writer.

The request followed an earlier request by the publishers of ENCYCLOPEDIA INTERNATIONAL to produce a series of 22 articles of Negro writers for use in that publication, shortly to be released.

Earlier in the week he received notice of appointment to a five-year term as a member of the Program Committee for the Modern Language Association of America, in New York City.

An accepted authority on Negro literature and writers, Dr. Turner had the unusual experience of entering college at the age of 13, of being admitted to Phi Beta Kappa at 15, of receiving the A. B. degree at 16, and the A. M. degree at 18 all at the University of Cincinnati. He was awarded the Ph. D. degree by the University of Chicago at age 25.

ment, "Not only does this practical instrument lessen the need for more teachers, but the Simulator develops self-efficient habits in traffic. It enhances the essential skill of new drivers in complex motoring situations.

Perhaps the department has heard about the pre-planned televised "National Driver's Test," which is designed to reward the good driver rather than to punish the faulty one. Every licensed driver is eligible. His only obligation is to take the pledge, which will be announced on the telecast and to send in his name and address on the test form or on any sheet of paper.

The telecast will take place on CBS — TV, Tuesday, May 23, 10-11:00 P.M. EDT. On August 23, three months later, all entries will be collected and award winners selected. Those having had no accidents from the time of their entry until August 23 may, if selected by random, receive $10,000, an automobile, or $5.00.

Not only is A&T College keeping abreast with other institutions academically, it is also opening new doors and broadening its avenues to greater opportunities.

War Protests Draw Attention As Officer "Loses His Cool"

By LARRY WRENN

Last Thursday the Army ROTC marched, as usual. But they weren't the only group marching on the Curtis Hall lawn. Marching with them, or against them, maybe, were six placard-bearers.

The signs dealt with the war in Vietnam. One protested the drafting of Muhammad Ali; another protested the fact that George Hamilton hasn't been drafted.

A passing girl shouted at the marchers, "Don't worry about Muhammad Ali; worry about yourself."

One incident occurred. The troops were in parade rest facing the sidewalk. The demonstrators aligned themselves on the sidewalk facing the troops. An Army official thought that one of the demonstrators referred to him personally as being a "Black Mercenary." The official asked, in a belligerent manner, if the demonstrators had called him a "Black Mercenary." The demonstrators quietly replied that the term was mentioned in a conversation about the war, and they were not specifically referring to him. The officer refused to listen to the marchers and attempted to provoke violence by asking, in vile language, if the marchers would fight him. After realizing that the demonstrators did not want violence, the officer returned to his duties. A bystander remarked, "That's bad, an officer losing his cool."

An impromptu spokesman for the group said the demonstration was to "express sentiment" about Vietnam. "It deserves exploitation; we have no right to be over there. The government won't pull out for fear of losing its prestige. But prestige is not the idea as many innocent people are being destroyed." America needs to revamp its politics as we are a "hated country" abroad. He said that we must "face the truth. We have to accept the fact of Black Mercenaries; hired killers."

The marcher said that he was out to raise "questions about the draft status and the war." The only time "the Negro has equal opportunity is during war time." He lamented the "fate of his brothers" as the government's tendency is to "draft victims of circumstance."

Another marcher stated that "we're fighting in Nam for freedom, equality, and justice; something which the Black Man doesn't have over here. People who benefit from freedom here, in this country, should be over there (Vietnam)." Another marcher said, "It might be 100% colored over there; I haven't seen a white-man in uniform in a long time."

The marchers agreed that "we're spending 2-billion dollars in Nam and only half that amount at home. More money should be spent to help the Negro's problems of education, poverty and equal opportunity."

A soft-spoken marcher said he was "motivated by the drafting of Cassius Clay to dramatize the situation." He hoped that it would "provoke serious discussion." He was for perpetuation of the movement "to get response from others." Several bystanders had agreed with their "cause", but no one had joined since the demonstration formed.

The demonstrators agreed that they were not against the ROTC program. Several expressed that they "wished" it were voluntary. If the students had a "choice," many "would not be out there (ROTC drill); they would be in their rooms studying."

A bystander told the press, "It doesn't do any good here; they (ROTC) don't care; they should go to the high places where it will do some good." Another bystander remarked, "It's just something for them to do, something to get people to look at them. An excuse to cut classes."

Before disbanding, one of the demonstrators ordered "left face;" and the group marched off in step for one final trip around the sidewalk.

Garfield who is purchasing agent for the college. Both Mr. and Mrs. Garfield are A&T graduates.

Dean Urge Men To Take Action On Requesting Housing Space

The date of April 24 through June 2 has been set as the period to reserve housing for male dormitory residents. The male students have not complied in appreciable numbers yet and are urged by the dean of men to do so immediately. With the throng of incoming freshman men expected to be larger than ever, it would be wise for all male students to secure their reservations early.

Failure to reserve rooms during the allotted time will cause the delinquent students to be treated on the same basis as in-coming freshman students.

The procedure for room reservation is as follows:

- a) pay cashier $15 room deposit
- b) Take the receipt to Dean of Men and obtain housing slip and form.
- c) Complete slip and form and return both to the residence hall in which you presently live.
- d) Room will be reserved, although a choice is not possible.

Dean William Goode stated, that next year the dormitory entrance fee will be $2 — $1 for the key deposit and $1 for United Men's Congress dues. This fee will be required before initially entering the residence halls for the school term 1967-1968.

Philadelphia 76'ers Draft Campbell And Mack

By EARNEST FULTON

The Philadelphia 76'ers, champions of the National Basketball Association, drafted two star Aggie hoopsters last week when the N. B.A. held their annual draft of college players. The players drafted were Teddy Campbell, the "C.I.A.A. Tournament Most Valuable Player", and George "Red" Mack, the best all-around player on the Aggie squad.

The 6'7", 235 pound Teddy Campbell played his high school ball at Dobbins High School in Philadelphia. "Red" Mack is also a native Philadelphian. He prepped at Edison High.

These two players were eligible for the draft because their original college class graduates this year. Because they were "held out" of varsity competition for a year, they have one remaining year of basketball eligibility. Both stars have expressed a desire to return to school next year and to lead the Aggies to the conference championship.

The drafting of both Teddy and Red is merely another outstanding tribute of their fine abilities in the sport of basketball. The world champions, the 76'ers, thought enough of their abilities to reserve them; even though they have one more year in school.

The fellows were happy when they heard that they had been selected by the 76'ers. However, because of the high quality of the present world champions' personnel, they feel that they would have a better chance if another team had drafted them.

Earl Monroe, the second player selected in the draft, was the choice of the Baltimore Bullets. Teddy Campbell had this to say about Monroe: "Earl will be a great star in the pros. I feel that he will be even better than Jimmy Walker of Providence College, who was the first draftee." Campbell continued by saying, "Earl is a better shooter and a better playmaker than Walker is."

Teddy also commented on the teams that will be among the conference's elite next year. He feels that Maryland State will be one of the top contenders next year because they have some fine young players. Among them are Levi Fontaine and Mike Childress, who will return as sophomores next year, and the Ford brothers, Henry and Jake, rising juniors from Georgetown, South Carolina.

To make things brighter in Aggeland, Teddy and Red will be back next year to lead an Aggie team that has the entire squad returning. Complementing them will be Soapy Adams, one of the hottest shooters in the C.I.A.A.; William Gilmer, a deadly rebounder; and Carl Hubbard, a ball-hawking guard.

Our Aggies, the 1966-67 C.I.A.A. TOURNAMENT CHAMPIONS, will have their work cut out for them as they will compete with such teams as Winston-Salem, Johnson C. Smith, Norfolk State, Howard, and Maryland State.
