Frosh Elections Confusing To Some

"Who's running?" "Who are you going to vote for?" "I really don't know anyone's capabilities, I'll just vote," said one. "Well, I'm not going to vote," said another. Fumbles, Fumbles Everywhere

By STANLEY JOHNSON, Editor

Bottom-most in almost everybody's mind is probably the game we lost in Nashville last Saturday. At the bottom it seems to be the best place to put things we don't want to recognize or think about. An old cliché says "the more one stirs in a stinking mess, the more it will smell," or something like that. Well, grab your hankies and turn your nose because there are a few things that need desperate consideration concerning this costly sport, football.

Besides offering students an extra-curricular activity, scholarships to qualified players, jobs to qualified personnel, and a stepping stone for potential professional players, football at A&T and every other college or university throughout this great land is basically a publicity stunt. It is used not only to attract students in sports, but it also attracts students who consider one of the school's greatest assets to be a noted football team no matter how shallow the idea sounds.

Football publicizes the school in the community and offers the community a source of social activity and something of which to be proud. It publicizes the school nationally when its players go out to national competition. When the alumni can point with pride at the football team of their alma mater, they are more likely to donate larger amounts to the alumni fund.

The most difficult to overcome every year — another publicity stunt — it seems only fair that the alumni can feel reasonably optimistic about seeing a winning home team.

Yes, a winning team, because no matter how much we rationalize that is what the game is all about — winning. We may go into a game to win outright, or to hold a team back so as to tie, but not to lose. The whole publicity stunt is based on this winning aspect of the sport, and when it comes to exist in an appreciable degree, then the publicity is ineffective. Few schools make a name by winning football program. Should A&T?

While commenting on the very costly errors of our Aggie squad, the radio commentator summed it up quite well. He said that a good team requires three basic things to be effective. The first thing is good backing by the University which appears to be relative good at A&T. The second thing is good recreation which from yearly announcements has to be up to par. The third thing is good coaching.

Motorcycle Conclusions

A recent article in the Greensboro Record on "Motorcycle Hazards," states that young motorists might find helpful even though none of you freshmen consider yourselves amateurs.

The article candidly tells us by 1970 there will be over five million motorcycles on the road. As a result new types of safety problems have developed. Presently, the death rate of motorcycle accidents is twice as high as auto accidents. In 1965 almost 1,600 persons were killed — a shocking number considering the relatively small membership of the road at that time. Seventy percent of those killed, however, had either rented or borrowed the vehicles, and twenty of per cent were riding for the first time.

Conclusion — people who are unskilled in cycle riding have a good chance of being in an accident.

In Minnesota and Oregon," the article stated, "it was found that 90 per cent of all motorcycle accidents involved injury to the legs, but that fatalities were invariably caused by injuries to the head." Conclusion — A quick way to get crippled or killed is on a set of motorcycle wheels.

Some believe crash helmets would save three to four thousand lives a year. Others argue that helmet reduces the peripheral vision of the cyclist so that he's more likely to get into an accident.

Some say that goggles would aid in making the sport safer. Others argue that adding goggles can increase rather than decrease the hazard because the goggles tend to fog up in bad weather.

Conclusion — motorcycle safety will require more attention and constant observation by persons frequenting the Student Union under constant observation by persons frequenting the Student Union.

Colorful Stripes Are Back Again

There are many new fashions that the young lady and young man on the campus will be wearing this fall. These fashions have been seen on the dressing boards of the top designers since last spring. Here's a list of some things you will see.

- Stripes: Whether vertical or horizontal, will be seen almost everywhere this fall. The colors are all vivid and alive. This is quite removed from past trends in that light pastels are not being used extensively. Instead purple, yellow, red, lime, and salmon are making a come back. These are the colors are the favorites.

- Color: Dark colors include black, midnight blue, low, cobalt blue, verdant green, white, and tints. Middle-of-the-road colors range from lavender to khaki.

New designs include checked pants and vests worn with a solid shirt. This is a reversal of the usual solid vest and pants worn with a checkered shirt. The colors for the fall range from brights to broads, and tints. Some even resemble old-fashioned country plaid. Broady colors include plum, brown, green, and slate grey, and pine. Middle-of-the-road colors range from lavender to khaki.

Fashions are one of the fashion trends to expect this fall and they're greater than ever.
The Poet And His New Expressions

“I Shall Not Pass...”

AUTHOR UNKNOWN

And it came to pass,
Early in the morning toward the last day of the semester
There arose a great multitude smiting the books and wailing.
And there was much weeping and gnashing of teeth,
For the day of judgment was at hand.
And they were sore afraid, for they had left undone
Those things which they ought to have done,
And they had done
Those things which they ought not to have done,
And there was no help for it.
And there were many abiding in the dorm
Who had kept watch over their books by night,
But it availed them naught.
But some there were who rose peacefully,
For they had prepared themselves the way
And made straight paths of knowledge.
And these were unknown
As wise burners of the midnight oil.
And to others they were known as "curve raisers".
And the multitude wove
And ate a hearty breakfast.
And they came unto the appointed place
And their hearts were heavy within them.
And they had come to pass,
But some to pass out.
And some of them
Repented of their riotous living and bemoaned their fate,
But they had no prayer.
And at the last hour there came among them
One known as the instructor; and they feared exceedingly
He was of the diabolical smile.
And passed papers among them and went his way.
And many and varied
Were the answers that were given.
For some of his teachings had fallen among fertile minds,
Others had fallen among the fallows,
While others had fallen flat.
And some there were who wrote for one hour,
Others for two;
But some turned away sorrowful, and many of these
Offered up a little bell
In hopes of pacifying the instructor.
And these were the ones who had not a prayer.
And when they finished,
They gathered up their belongings
And went their way quietly, each in his own direction,
And each one vowing unto himself in this manner:
“I shall not pass this way again.”

The Special Touch

By CURTIS SHOFNER

(Grade 9-A, J. C. Price School)

First take a dash of golden sunshine
Then some bright blue skies
A pinch of springtime’s softest breeze
And add some butterflies
Some daffodils, some crocus, too . . .
The first ones to appear
A bluebird singing happy songs
For everyone to hear
A dogwood on a mossy bank,
Trees freshly decked in green . . .
Blend them all together for
A lovely springtime scene.
To make this season perfect
Add an extra special touch . . .
And that’s a mother just like you
Who’s loved so very much.

A Blood Drop

By CLAYTON G. HOLLOWAY

I passed a drop of blood
Dying on the street yesterday,
And I was made to wonder what vein pumped
Forth this spot
And dropped it in my way.
I walked around the blot
And a powerful thought struck me
Of a man dragging two pieces of wood
Along a street that led to Calvary.
A mental blot of red
I saw that covered all the land
I then realized that side stepping
I could not
That stain shed by a Holy Man.

The Tangible And
The Intangible

BY WILLIE A. HARRELL

My soul searches out to grasp
The infinite things of nature.
These are the products of God.
The intangibility of them
Accounts for their immortality.
If they were tangible
They would perish and sadden my soul.
I cling to the everlasting
Intangible things of God’s nature.

ALL AMERICAN LINEBACKER

Before The Tenn. Game With Elvin Bethea

Football is not a child's play pen to A&T's ALL-AMERICAN linebacker, Elvin Bethea, but it's all business. In an interview with Bethea, he stated that this is one year that really counts on his career, not only because he is a senior in his last year at A&T, but because he has taken on the additional work he and his teammates have been taking for a September 25 opener against National Small-College power Tennessee State.

Bethea stands 6'4", weighs 253, has become one of the men wanted men in the pro ranks among other pro-pros. In several post- and pre-season polls (Sports Illustrated, he was rated as one of the most-valuable interior linemen in college football. He stated "I have been playing football ever since I can remember in all my days at my native Trenton, N. J. located just 40 miles from this game and have made it my goal to become a professional in the sport."

"When I attended Trenton Central High School, I wanted to play and, because of my speed the coach placed me in the fullback position. I weighed 168 pounds, which didn't have any effect upon me in carrying out my assignments."

"I entered A&T and became very much surprised to learn that I had been selected to play offensive and defensive linemen. I had the speed and ability to be as effective, if not more, than the backs who had excelled. Coach Bert Pippert said that I was needed because speed is necessary to do the required job."

"My first assignment was playing tackle, but Coach Pippert wished me to play guard with my speed and great ability to pull and know how to use the pulling squad."

Bethea plays every minute every game which is a new physical condition, so he did when he was selected on the ALL-AMERICAN and ALL-CLAA teams last year.

He is 21 years old, the eldest of nine children, and wants to play pro ball and later pursue a successful career in physical therapy.

When asked about the team's possibilities for the 1967-68 season, he said we are looking forward to one of our best seasons. The freshmen seem to be very impressive and are willing to fill the gaps left from last season.

Aggies Clash With Bulls
After 35 - 0 Loss To Tenn.

A&T's young but spirited Aggies, playing under their new University status will play host to the Johnson C. Smith Golden Bulls of Charlotte at Memorial Stadium on Saturday, September 30 at 8:00 p.m.

Coach Pippert's young team, is going through a rebuilding process, is expected to retali­ate against Smith for the last it suffered at the hands of the Tennessee A&T Lions at Nashville last week led by the All-American quarterback Edgell Dickey.

The Tigers barned A&T's defense, and an interrupted pass into touchdowns and added three other tallies to humiliate the Aggies for the second straight year. The final score was 35-0.

The fighting Aggies will go with their standard offensive and defensive series of plays. Players expected to play a major role in this first conference clash
