Work Begins On 'Old Van'

By Gail Ross

Old Vanstory, the last of the original buildings which composed the early A&T campus, is now being renovated to house five departments that are now in the Dudley Building. Old Vanstory will be the new home of Counseling and Career Placement Center, Planning and Development, Public Information, Sports Information and Cooperative Education.

The renovation process being used is called "Adaptive Restoration" and is currently an acceptable way for restoring older structures which may have been destroyed. The process takes a sound structure in a desirable location and converts it for new uses by re-deploying existing space and adding new equipment and furnishing along with the necessary mechanical and electrical work to create essentially a new facility in an existing structural shell. An example is the Fayetteville mayor's office.

Money for renovation comes from the A&T cluster which is a group of thirty-three industrial firms that joined with A&T to improve the over-all educational program. Their contributions are of two categories: cash contributions of approximately $3500 and gifts-in-kind (materials) which is approximately $9,178.

The labor is to be supplied by the Physical Plant Office and preliminary remodeling has begun and is expected to be completed in the next six to eight months.

One of the main reasons for renovation is the need of space for job placement and recruiters.

The new structure will have booths for interviews, a Career Information Library and a student work room.

Old Vanstory was occupied in 1896 and lasted through a fire in 1925. It was occupied by males for 55 years and converted to a women's dorm in 1951. It was last used in 1969.

SUS Members Meet To Air Grievances To Administration

By Betty Miller

Members of the Students of the University Senate held another meeting Wednesday night. The purpose of this meeting, according to Norman Johnson, acting chairman of the group, was to discuss a list of grievances. The meeting was sparsely attended. Of the thirty students on the University Senate, only twelve showed up.

The grievances were termed short and long range projects. The short range projects consisted of (1) acquiring books stating the rules and regulations of the University Senate (2) orientation sessions that will enable the students of the Senate to become knowledgeable of what happens in the meetings and what is to be expected (3) sending letters to students informing them of committee meetings, (4) changing the meeting time from 3:00-5:00 to 6:00-8:00.

The long range projects are (1) getting students on the Faculty Forum (2) getting students on the Executive Committee of the University Senate.

On hand to respond to the grievances for the administration was Gerard E. Gray, chairman of the University Senate. Gray gave an individual reply to each of the grievances.

In reference to obtaining books, Gray pointed out that the Constitution Committee has already approved the proposal for handbooks. He added that the administration had them and that he did not know why they had not been given to the students of the Senate. These handbooks will include rules regulations and policies of the University Senate. Gray injected at this point that the procedures

Campus Security May Stage No-Knock Raids

By George Johnson

"I have an obsession against drug pushers, and I'm in favor of doing anything to get a pusher, except murder." These were the words vehemently uttered by Marvin B. Graeber, head of campus security.

This response by Graeber was made with reference to the new drug regulations that appeared last week in a news letter released by the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs and others.

Graeber expressed his enthusiasm over these new regulations in that he feels that this is an extremely good beginning even though everyone may not agree with the wording.

Graeber took time out from studying what seemed to be an extensive blueprint and in a very professional and solemn demeanor explained why he feels so strongly about drug pushers.

"Drugs have no place in a struggling Black society," was one of his first statements. He feels that many students may try drugs out of curiosity, and he wants to help to defer these students from the pusher whom he described as "the biggest, most vicious and chronic liar in the world."

The formula for obtaining a

Frye Voices Need

Open Admissions

Black legislator Henry E. Frye wants this state to adopt some kind of open admissions policy to insure that blacks and other minorities have continued access to the restructured higher education system.

Frye, a graduate of A&T, voiced his opinion Monday night as A&T paid tribute to 31 national firms who have aided the university's development program over the past five years.

The legislator also said he is seeking a ruling to get the board of governors for the new higher education system to guarantee racial integration of trustees.

Noting the power of this board of governors, Frye said it should start with some kind of "general rule" to name about 20 to 30 per cent whites to boards of trustees of predominantly black institutions.

He proposed the same percentage of blacks for predominantly white universities.

drug addict, according to Graeber, is to take an alcoholic and multiply him by 100. The significant factor here is the time element. The difference is that a person becomes an alcoholic over a big span of time whereas one can become hooked on drugs by only three or four encounters.

Even though the latest medical findings indicate that marijuana has less deleterious effects than either alcohol or tobacco, Graeber stated that until the law is changed, he will continue to enforce it as a sworn official even though some people may think it is too severe.

Graeber further indicated that his office has a number of suspected pushers under surveillance, and that he is in favor of employing such procedures as raids and the no-knock policy.

He added that the approximate percentage of women on campus using drugs is one third less than of the men.

In closing, Graeber regressed to his previous sentiments that the most potent weapon his office would use would be the elimination of the "I-don't-want-to-get-involved" attitude of some students.

Frye said these percentages give "a goal to work toward" and noted the need for each trustee board to have representatives of the different races, sexes and political parties.

Frye said the time for implementing new policies is within the next six months, before the board of governors take office and the the university system becomes reconstructed.

The planning board, an interim board to act for the new system until July, was called "important and powerful" because it determines the top personnel, including the president and vice presidents of the restructured higher education system.

This interim board also determines some very important policy decisions, according to Frye, and these will determine how powers are delegated for years to come.

Letters

For the past two editions of The A&T Register, the How Our Readers See It section has been missing from the Editorial page. How Our Readers was the letter to the editor section.

Letters to the editor were stopped because students and faculty failed to utilize the space provided for the presentation of their views. In most cases the letters were simply to fill the space at the bottom of the page.

However, this does not mean that students and faculty have lost their "soapbox". The A&T Register will continue to provide a forum for ideas and comments from members of the University family. They will be placed in a new section titled "input...".

The section will be seen only when someone has something he wants to say, not because he wants a grade. If no one has anything to say, there will not be any letters.

The loss of the permanent letters section is a classic example of losing a privilege because no one uses it. Taking into account the apathy on this campus, the low attendance at class meetings and student body meetings, the letters section in the school paper is only the beginning.

The letters section is being replaced by a cartoon. One cartoonist who wants to draw something to make a point is worth a hundred "fake" letters to the editor.

Blacks And Blackness

For soemtime now, the words Black and Blackness have been used around campus for various reasons. Our heritage has been invoked by nominees for the Presidential candidacy, for our support. Our uniqueness has been called upon as a means of maintaining the Black insitiutions of higher learning. Our homecoming queens began their reigns as "Black, Beautiful and Something More." Clearly, these words have some significance for us.

Too often though, the potential of this idea of Blackness has been overlooked. We talk about our Blackness, we give the Black power sign, we use all the slogans, and sing the Black national anthem, but we fail to see our Blackness as a positive force. We are so busy rebelling that we haven't the time to be independent. We fail to realize our heritage and to appreciate our uniqueness as a people. We are content to blame others for our plight, as if this helps, even though we are not really aware of ourselves as a group.

With this in mind, we must see that we as Black people, need to see ourselves in a more positive light, as individuals who are unified and who can cause things to happen rather than have them happen to us. We must see ourselves in this manner rather than pretending and escaping through various mean.

This column will be devoted to creating such positiveness by helping to build Black awareness. In upcoming issues, we will look at such things as drugs from a Black point of view, togetherness among Blacks, a Black education, and many other things. Black people have been struggling for a long time; first, in love and self-hatred; then, in rebellion. It is high time we became aware fo ourselves as independent, and, therefore, in possession of our own Black dignity.

Benbow Researchers Host Clothing Research Conference

By Janet Jones
News Editor

Dr. Myrtle Smith, professor of clothing and textile, was the host of a conference held here Thursday and Friday.

The conference was on a research project in clothing. The title of the project is "The Effect of Selected Laundry Variables on Durability and Effectiveness of Flame Retarded Cotton Products."

Dr. Smith is also project director at A&T. The center of the research project is in Carver Hall. Two students, Joyce Clark and Millicent Bristol work with the research.

Miss Rowena Dowlen, part-time Home Economist in the research and assistant professor at the University of Tennessee, and Dr. Mary E. Carter, chief of USDA Clothing and Textiles research lab were guest visitors at the consultation.

The project comes under the Agriculture Research service.

Other consultations of this sort have been held in Knoxville, Tennessee.

Many other research projects are being held in sterile laundry conditions and other aspects concerning clothing.

Dr. Carter commented that research pertaining to the consumer is the primary aim of the project. The investigation is also geared toward improving life time performances of garments and making sure textile garments are properly labeled.

Miss Dowlen stated, "There is a sizable market for used clothing, usually which can't be tried on; therefore, labeling is important."

While here at the conference, the home economists were engaged in testing garments which are supposed to undergo fifty launderings.

The main research center is in Knoxville, Tennessee.

The project being conducted by Dr. Smith is a two and a half year research project. It has been underway for about six months.

At the end of the research, information will be compiled and made available to the public.

Dr. Smith has hope that other projects of this sort will be conducted on this campus.

Community Leaders Hold Confab With N.C. Fellows Program

By Janice Smith

In past weeks several leaders in the fields of business, education, and government have conducted seminars with the North Carolina Fellows program.

Last week, Joe Dudley, owner of Dudley Barber and Beauty Supply, and Reverend Cleo McCoy, Director of Religious Activities, were the guest speakers. The topic of discussion was the philosophy of leadership as it relates to the clergy and the characteristics of leadership possessed in a businessman.

Dr. William C. Parker, Jr., director of the Fellows program has released the names of prominent figures in the Greensboro and surrounding area who will conduct future on-campus seminars with the group. The list includes: Harold Greeson, president of the Greensboro Jaycees; Dr. L. C. Dowdy; Dr. Robert Eason, head of the Psychology Department at UNC-G; William Snider, Editor of the Greensboro Daily News; Mayor Jim Melvin; J. LeVonne Chambers, Charlotte attorney; Reverend Otis Hairston, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church; Charles Whitehurst, director of News and Public Affairs WFMY-TV; and Attorney Walter T. Johnson, Jr.

The N. C. Fellows Program at A&T, established in 1970, is a co-operative educational program funded by the North Carolina Leadership Institute located here in the city.

Since its establishment, approximately fifteen students from the entering freshman class have been selected to participate. The program proposes to develop creative leadership through intensive and interactive experiences by co-ordinating programs for students with potential leadership abilities. These experiences consist of on and off campus seminars, informal meetings, summer internships, and academic and personal-social counseling.

Presently there are twenty-eight students in the program. Twelve are sophomores: Loritha Batts, Johnnie Blakeney, Edith Brown, Gwen Burton, Robert DeVaughn, Kenneth Hairston, Robert Jones, Lane Miller, Robert Oxendine, William Scurry, Janice Smith, and Wayne Walton.

The remaining sixteen students are freshmen: Gregory

Concerning the benefits of the Fellows Program, several members of the group commented: "As far as I'm concerned the Fellows Program is a very worthwhile and unique organization. It has given me a chance to find out about myself and about others, while at the same time gaining leadership qualities," stated electrical engineering major, Joseph Powell.

Johnnie Blakeney, a psychology major from Kannapolis, noted that "being a participant in the N. C. Fellows Program has afforded excellent exposure to various aspects of being a leader."

Music major, Wayne Jefferson had this to say: "The Fellows Program to me means a number of things. It has helped me get to know myself better, to show me my potentials, and the changes that I need to go through in order to be a better man."

Male Intrudes Into Early Childhood Ed.

Early Childhood Education, a field dominated by women, has an intruder, Joseph M. Ferguson a sophomore from Wilmington, changed from Psychology to Early Childhood Education this spring because he feels it is a very good field for a Black man.

This major deals with grammar school children and he believes that Black men being in this field would give Black children a father image at school.

Joseph's sister, Mrs. Musa Kamara, has a Masters in this field; therefore, she was able to aid him with his decision. Mrs. Kamara is now the director of The Learning Institute of North Carolina. LINC is an institution for pre-school gifted children. She explained the advantages and the need for men in this field.

Joe, as most people around campus know him, is that crazy veteran who wears a big hat. When asked how he likes his new major, he replied, "I like it because a lot of women are in it."

After he receives his B.S. Degree, he plans to continue for his Masters. From this point he hopes to come in direct contact with little children. He feels that opportunities are now being opened for Blacks and that this is a wide open field for men.

Security Chief Comments On A Parking Violations

By Barbara Turner

Roosevelt Raines, chief of Campus Security, made several comments concerning campus parking regulations. He noted the increase of parking regulations and the increased number of parking tickets which have been distributed.

Raines stated that the main reason why so many parking tickets have been seen on the windshields of cars is that the student's don't read! Many students park without noticing the No Parking signs which have been placed in the designated areas.

When Raines was asked whether he felt that the police department had neglected to inform the staff and students of these No Parking areas, he replied, "the department has done its part to inform the students and staff of these restricted areas."

Raines does foresee a possible solution however. He feels that one step would be for students to become more attentive to the signs concerning parking regulations.

Aggie Alumni Present $10,000 In Annual Giving Campaign

Jeans On The Scene

By Doreen Green

Dungarees have come a long way in recent years.

Years ago dungarees were worn merely for work clothes. Today, they have moved into a more glamorous spot in fashion. They can be worn for any occasion if they are worn correctly.

The best part about dungarees is that they are inexpensive and very durable.

The fun part about them is what you can do with them.

Studs are decorative metal attachments that can be used on dungarees, hats, shirts and anything else you can think of. Studs come in all shapes, sizes and designs. You can create your own designs according to the way you arrange them.

Appliques are eloquently designed patches that are usually sewn or ironed on to clothing. Today you can find appliques in hundreds of styles and designs.

Sewing trim can effectively be used to decorate and lengthen dungarees. Sewing trim can be purchased in many different designs. You simply sew the trimming on to the rim, pocket or leg of any pair of pants you choose.

A very inexpensive way to decorate your pants is by patch designing. Cut out a design from your favorite material and stitch around the design. There is no end to the amount of designing you can add to your dungarees. Cut out your initials, flowers, animals and continue adding until your dungarees are loaded with design.

Rhinestones are the newest addition to dungaree decoration. They can add a great deal of beauty to hats, pants, shirts and many other of your accessories. Create your own beautiful layer of design by adding row upon row to the legs of your pants.

Glamour magazine's current issue has the name and address for a little machine called a "Brisk Set." This little device can save you time and energy when you are applying studs or rhinestones to your pants.

So have fun, create your own designs. Do your own thing and create cool dungarees to express a cool you. There is no end to what you can turn a simple pair of dungarees into.

For further information write Brisk Set, No. 100-A, A. H. Standard, 28 West 38th Street, New York, New York

The announcement of the gift to the A&T University Foundation was made Saturday by Joseph D. Williams Jr., executive secretary of the alumni association.

Williams said the alumni are committed to raising $100,000 in the current campaign, mostly for student scholarships and the university's faculty improvement program.

Williams pointed out that the alumni have contributed more than $145,000 in scholarship aid to A&T during the past five years. He said they are committed to raising $333,000 on a $1 million goal set by the university in its overall development program.

The alumni association, headed by Mrs. Julia S. Brooks of Philadelphia, Penna., has been a prime source of awarding the prestigious Presidential Scholarships at the university. Many of the former recipients of these scholarships are now making outstanding records in graduate schools.

Williams said the current campaign is being conducted among the association's 65 chapters throughout the nation. The drive is slated to end prior to the association's annual meeting in Greensboro in May.

National chairman of the fund raising effort is Miss Louise Pearson of Alexandria, Va. James Meachem is president of the Greensboro chapter.

Anaconda Country. Become part of it.

A lot has happened since Anaconda began mining copper in Butte, Montana in 1895. Today our operations extend across the country, including Canada and Mexico. And we're still growing.

Just last year, over 280,000 tons of copper came out of our North American mines. That's 42% more than the year before. And in the U.S. alone, we have enough proven and potential copper reserves to meet estimated needs for the next 65 years.

We also make aluminum. In fact, when our big new aluminum reduction plant in Sebree, Kentucky is completed in 1973, we'll be the fourth largest producer of aluminum in the U.S. And we produce zinc, lead, molybdenum, gold, and silver, too. But that's not all.

Over half of our activities involve fabricating metal into everyday and not so everyday products. Aluminum foil for packaging. Electric power cable. Wiring for space craft. And our manufacturing plants cover the territory.

Our widespread, diverse activities have produced the need for talented individuals of many learning backgrounds. People like yourself whose prime interests are in:

Social Services Asked To Assist In Services For Thomasville Comm.

By Ruth James

The Social Service Department has been asked to assist the residents of Thomasville Church Homes in helping to bring in better social services in Thomasville's Black community. At present two students are working on the project; Lesly Threadgill and Sherman Harris both junior social service majors. The department has set up an office in Thomasville where the students commute twice a week working fifteen to twenty hours.

James Johnson, an instructor from the Social Service Department, stated, "We were well received by the tenants and are working closely with them in getting the proper facilities into their area." "We will assist the people in Thomasville in providing better social services including health and police protection, organize volunteers for child care, build recreational facilities and meet with the tenants of Thomasville Church Homes and tell them what services are available and set up a public transportation system.

The location of these Church Homes is far away from the city limits. At present, Thomasville does not have public transportation facilities. In addition, the department will assist in developing a beautification project and ridding of pests in the tenant's homes.

He further added, "We hope to bring in other departments of the University to help solve other problems in areas of food, and nutrition, clothing and transportation for the people in Thomasville Church Homes."

SUS Holds Meeting

for the meetings are conducted according to Robert's Rules of Order.

Concerning the orientation sessions, he said that once the books have circulated among the students, he doubts that there will be any need for the orientation sessions. He feels that the handbooks will be able to satisfy any questions that might be posed.

Gray commented that the chairman of a committee is responsible for letting the students know about the meetings. It was agreed that this responsibility should not fall on the chairman alone, but that the department chairmen should be concerned with letting the student representatives from their departments know about meetings. A decision was reached that the students should receive some type of notification at least one day before the meeting.

The main complaint about the time changing was that during the 3-5 period many of the students of the Senate are still in classes; therefore, they would prefer the 6-8 period. It was commented that most of the faculty prefer the 3-5 period because of convenience. Usually their working day has not ended and they don't have classes during this time.

Gray said that he was not qualified to discuss the adding of students to the Faculty Forum or the Executive Committee as those matters would have to be discussed with someone else. However, he did say that the matters would be discussed at

Aggie Wrestling Team Captures Fifth Match Of The Season

The Aggie wrestling team captured its fifth match of the season this past weekend at South Carolina State, 37-12. This victory improved the team's record to 5-1, with the only blemish coming at the hands of Howard University.

Ricky Smith and Craig Davis continued their brilliant success by remaining undefeated with 6-0 and 5-0 records. Melvin Fair and Bernard Herring are not doing too badly either.

Fair has an impressive 5-1 record, and Herring has an outstanding 4-1 record.

These wrestlers have been the brightest stars, if you consider the record book; but all the members of the team are stars when you look at the successful wrestling galaxy which Coach Mel Pinkney has molded.

The wrestlers have to go through strenuous exercises from 4-6 p.m., but the biggest strain comes when you consider their eating habits. The wrestlers have to lose between 10-30 pounds during the year. This type of diet has to have effect upon a wrestler's personality, and the wrestler resorts to having excessive fun to eliminate the thoughts of hunger.

There are four more matches before the tournament at Howard, and Coach Pinkney implied that, if they can win at Morgan State and Catawba, then they should go into the tournament with a sparkling 9-1 record.

N.C. Central University comes to Moore Gym for the final home match on Saturday at 4:00. In Durham, the Aggies won the match with relative ease, and Coach Pinkney remarked, "When you can win 30-10 in the first match, then you should win 40-0 in the return match."

Campus Coeds Leave Bleachers To Become Aggressive Aggiettes

By Jacqueline Glisson

In the last two years, the name "Aggiettes" has been floating across the campus, bringing a new spice to the athletic world of A&T. Thirteen Aggie coeds have switched from a passive state, sitting on the bleachers, to an active state of playing basketball on the court. These coeds represent the extramural women's basketball team, better known to all as the Aggiettes.

The Aggiettes are now sporting a 2-1 record, with seven more challenging games ahead. Twice on the court they have defeated St. Augustine's and lost to Catawba by one point in a 43-42 cliff hanger. Having the pleasure of coaching this team are Tyrone Bolden, head coach, and Steve Owens, assistant coach.

The players wearing the blue uniforms of the Aggiettes are Joyce Spruill, Garry Blackwell, Bonnie Crawford, Phyllis Brown, Joan Goode, Doreen Bryant, Kathy Johnson, Yvonne Miller, Charlye Bolden, Patricia Potat, Harriet Harris, Carol Flowers, and Renetta Seward. The leading scorers on the team are co-captains Joyce Spruill and Garry Blackwell.

Although a few changes exist, the girls will be playing the same professional standards as set for the male players. Five players constitute a team. Every foul is a shooting foul. There is no backcourt and a 30-second shooting clock is used.

With the team being comprised of women players, coaching is taken at a different angle. As expressed by Coach Bolden, "I think the big difference in coaching a girls' team is the sensitivity of women. You can yell at a male player to motivate him and he will respond. To yell at a girl player will draw her in a shell and she won't reveal her potentials." Since these players are more unselfish and play more together as a team than men do, they tend to "pick-up" instructions and pointers much easier.

Along with the sensitivity that most female players possess, defeat brings in another problem for the coach to handle. When the Aggiettes lose a game, they are crushed. Bolden brings them out of this mood whether practicing or after losing a game by saying, "You must take the bitter with the sweet." This philosophy is working for the girls. They have a 2-1 record and are making it a point to remain receiving more of the sweet than the bitter.

Spectators are generally accustomed to seeing male players on the Aggie court. The Aggiettes are making them "Kick the habit", as they clearly reveal to spectators that a young lady can be feminine and play sports at the same time.

When asked in what area of basketball do the males surpass the women, Bolden answered, "It is much harder for female players to 'catch-on' to the techniques of defense. The girls enjoy the thrill of competing." From his experiences of working with the Aggiettes, he feels that women make good basketball players. Bolden, a senior recreation major, concluded by saying, "It's a new experience. It is more exciting to see the girls play, because they put more into the game of basketball!"

Clutch Free Throws Quell S.C. State

Clutch free throws in the final minutes of play enabled A&T to defeat South Carolina State College 83-78.

William Harris came out with the first basket of the night but that 2-0 lead was short lived as South Carolina quickly tied the score and jumped out to a 10-4 advantage.

A&T tied the game 12-12 when substitute Lloyd Glover cashed in a three point play, but the Aggies couldn't avoid costly turnovers which constantly prevented them from opening up any kind of lead.

A&T went ahead 30-29, but three straight ball-handling miscues again throttled their initiative.

Al Carter gave the Aggies their biggest lead of the half, 40-35, with 1:10 on the clock; but before that minute was over, the Bulldogs had pulled within one for a 40-39 intermission score.

A&T came out in the second half and constructed a ten-point lead only to see the Bulldogs' Johnny Thornton keep his team in the game with tower-bombs from outside.

William Harris was suffering from a touch of the virus so Carter proved his value by connecting on three straight field goals from the corner, giving A&T a 59-52 bulge. The Aggies kept their advantage between 7 and 10 points for six minutes before South Carolina attempted to make a comeback.

Coach Cal Irvin beseeched his players to hold the ball during the last three minutes of play, but his words fell on deaf ears as the Aggies took numerous drives to the basket, only to have them swatted down by the Bulldogs' massive Tommy Barswell.

The Bulldogs whittled the lead to 73-70, but South Carolina was forced to foul. William Harris, Walter Anderson and James Outlaw went to the line in succession and hit one-and-one free-throw attempts.

In the end the Aggies escaped with the victory behind Al Carter's season high output of 21 points. Elmer Austin followed with 18 while Anderson and Outlaw contributed 10.

The Aggies take a six-day layoff before hosting North Carolina Central University next Saturday.

Intramural Basketball Going Into Full Swing

By Blannie Bowen

The intramural basketball season got totally underway this week with a full slate of games being played. Only half of the scheduled games were played last week because the slate had to be abbreviated due to previously scheduled activities in Moore Gym.

The intramural department has scheduled 3 games to be played per night, with the first game scheduled to begin at 6:45 p.m. The games have not started on time this past week because of night classes. Some teams did not show up for their game because of the late starting hour of their game. When a team fails to show up for a game, it is considered as a forfeit on their part.

On Tuesday night, two games

The team which was present simply made a lay-up, and they won the game 2-0. There are 41 teams participating in this year's intramurals program, and a few of these teams are not participating fully.

The first game of the season was played between the Kappas and Alpha Phi Alpha. The Kappas won handily 62-29. This was one of the most action packed games thus far. Cooper and Mayo led the Kappas with 15 points each. Carlton and Barnes led the spirited Alpha Phi Alpha with 13 and 9 points a peice.

The second game of the season was between two independent teams, High Phi Point and the KNICKS. High Phi Point captured this game 41-28 with Rollingson leading the way

Aggie Wrestling Team Captures Fifth Match Of The Season

Anyone who meets an A&T varsity wrestler might think the fellow is missing a few marbles upstairs, but usually these outstanding athletes are suffering from the "growls."

The "growls," better known as an affliction of hunger, often make members of the wrestling team hyperactive and a little annoying to others, head coach Mel Pinckney explained.

"But that's the way I want them right before a match," Pinckney said. "When they get out on the mat, they usually end up tormenting their opponents for the agony they've been through."

The Aggie grapplers, in their first full varsity season, have come around quite well and are presently in second place in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference behind a seasoned Howard University team.

The Aggies came of age last week when small college wrestling power Elizabeth City State University was soundly whipped in A&T's Moore Gymnasium. That win and a conference victory over South Carolina State College in Orangeburg Saturday night by 32-14 has given them a 6-1 overall record while placing 4-1 in the conference.

"I'm a fundamentalist first of all," Coach Pinckney said "and it takes a lot of work to mold a 90 per cent freshman laden squad into a top contender."

"They're in good shape but 65 per cent of wrestling is attitude rather than experience," he added, and the Aggie matmen have the utmost confidence in themselves.

Even though they're young, Pinckney has plenty of talent to work with in Bernard Herring, a city champion from Wilmington, Delaware, Dan Coleman, a heavyweight state high school champion from Baltimore, Md., Melvin Fair, a 150 lb. state champ from High Point Andrews and Craig Davis, a 160 pounder from the same school.

Pinckney, a 26-year old health and physical education instructor out of Glassboro State College won district and regional honors in wrestling while in high school and college. His well-drilled team has become the joy of the A&T student body as near-capacity crowds have enjoyed the action of clean college wrestling.

"Our boys are looking forward to meeting Howard University again in Washington, D. C.," Pinckney said. "They would love to win the MEAC's first wrestling championship."

And if the South Carolina trip is any indication of what the team has to go through prior to a match, the Aggie wrestlers can look forward to dinner plates of celery, jello-o salads and other low-calorie but nutritive foods.

Add a couple of miles of running and the "growls" just might turn Pinckney's team into monsters deserving of a conference championship.

were won because of forfeits, with 12 points. Pierce and Shaw led the Knicks with 9 and 8 points each. This game was well played and it also held the fans in the Gym.

A good sized crowd was on hand to witness some super shooting, "Charlie Scott style," and defense, "Russell style." All of the players are playing with the styles of the great N.B.A. players in mind. It is common to see behind-the-back passes, and dribble, right and left-hand shots by the same player, and of course, great defense. The season has just started and the style of play will be improving. Students would not miss a chance to see their favorite team "do their thing."

the next Executive Committee meeting on February 1.

After the general meeting, somewhat of a question and answer period was held. Gray asked if the students really felt that they were made to feel that they did not belong at the meetings. Norman Johnson mentioned the fact that at some times people were not sent notices of the meetings and he pointed out that this might definitely give the impression that one's presence was not wanted at the meetings.

Ron Ivey, SGA president, is helping the SUS organization and he expressed concern over what seems to be a lack of respect by the administration for the students. He said that "The administration should respect the students for the adults that they are," in doing so, he feels that the air of separation that he believes exists between the two groups would be eliminated.

In order to gain the necessary respect for the successful functioning of such an organization, Ivey feels that it is imperative that the students come to the meetings and come on time.
