History Class Sponsors Student Services Survey

As a class sponsored project, 12 history students conducted a campus-wide survey with more than 600 students responding.

The survey was conducted in most of the residence halls on campus in an attempt to gather some meaningful information as to whether or not "students are taking advantage of the services being offered by A&T and to see how students have adapted to life on campus."

There were several limitations involved in carrying out the project, including time and manpower.

Students were questioned extensively on matters such as the student government and cultural services. The results are to be used for all interested members of the A&T family.

Of the more than 600 students to reply to the survey, less than half (43%), had never visited the Afro-House here on campus, but 55.5% had visited the Taylor Art Gallery in Bluford Library.

Surprisingly, only 21.6% of the students questioned attended the movies offered intermittently at Harrison Auditorium. Equally surprising, was that at least 81.7% of the students admitted that they did not attend the religious services offered at the Student Union.

When asked how often they visited the Student Union, many visited it daily and the overwhelming majority (about 77.3%) visited it at least weekly. The place most frequented was the bookstore.

About 248 of the 600 students usually study at the library two to three times weekly, and 104 study daily at the library, but 219 simply said that their study sessions at the library were "seldom."

Of the questions on the survey dealing with counseling services, 58% of the students said that they had never visited the Counseling and Testing Center for aid and 55.4% had not taken advantage of the Thirteen College Curriculum Program.

However, 52% felt that their academic advisor was "efficient."

An interesting fact was that most of the students would consult either their friends or roommate if they had a problem. Only 59 students would consult a counselor or parent.

When asked to evaluate the Brown and Murphy cafeterias for services, an overwhelming 319 students rated both as "poor." About that many rated the linen and laundry services as "fair."

One of the most interesting groups of responses came from the questions dealing with the Student Government Association.

61.1% of the students are aware of the purposes of the SGA and 72.6% said that they wanted to know more about the Student Courts.

When asked to give their rating of the performances of important SGA officers, the president, attorney general and student representatives, all received a rating of "fair" from most of the students. But in evaluating "the support of the student body," most gave it a rating of "poor."

About 63.9% of the students enjoy an "excellent" or "above average" relationship with their roommates.

Approximately 58.3% do not consider theft a problem in their dorm. But those who felt it was a problem decided that it was due more to carelessness than aggressive criminal acts. Furthermore, most of them felt that hall monitors, campus police or counselors would not help the problem.

Some 61.3% were willing to (See Students, Page 11)

THE A&T REGISTER

"COMPLETE AWARENESS FOR COMPLETE COMMITMENT"

VOLUME XLIV, NUMBER 29 A&T State University, Greensboro APRIL 27, 1973

Black Congressman To Deliver Commencement Exercise Address

An address by U.S. Congressman Charles C. Diggs Jr. of Michigan will highlight the baccalaureate commencement exercises of A&T in the Greensboro Memorial Coliseum on Sunday, May 13.

Diggs, the chairman of the Black Congressional Caucus and a longtime civil rights advocate, will address A&T's 800 graduates and their guests at 3 p.m.

Diggs currently has a daughter attending A&T.

Other features of the commencement exercises will be the annual statement by Chancellor Lewis C. Dowdy, music by the university choir and band, and the announcement of student honors by Dr. Jesse Marshall, and the commissioning as second lieutenants of graduating Air Force and Army ROTC cadets.

Immediately following the exercises, Chancellor and Mrs. Dowdy will entertain the graduates and their families at a reception in the Exhibition Building.

In connection with the graduation, a full Alumni Weekend is expected to attract several thousand A&T graduates and former students back to Greensboro. The weekend has been designated as reunion time for the classes of the eights and threes.

The "ole grads" will assemble mostly at the Ramada Inn of I-85. A key feature of the celebration will be the association's annual meeting on Saturday, May 12, at 10 a.m. and the election of national officers in Merrick Hall auditorium.

An alumni breakfast and a luncheon, both in the Red Carpet Room, will also be held on Saturday. Another highlight of the alumni weekend will be the annual awards dinner at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the Ramada Inn.

Speaker for the occasion will be Dr. Wilbert Greenfield, newly-elected president of Johnson C. Smith University. The association's annual alumni awards will be presented at this time.

Other alumni activities include a 5 p.m. reception and 9 p.m. cabaret, sponsored by the Gate City Alumni chapter and a 5 p.m. reception and a 9 p.m. All-Alumni Mixer on Saturday.

A highlight of the reunion is expected to be the report of the Class of 1953. The project entitled 5373 is committed to raising at least $20,000. President of the class is Col. David McElveen, the commander of Andrews Air Force Base.

'73 Is Better Year For Job Opportunities

By Millie Dunn

The job opportunities for the 1973 A&T graduate are much better than last year. According to W. I. Morris, director of placement and career counseling, "Business and industry offers exceed last year's and the year before by 15 - 20%."

Morris stated that most of the recruiters were looking for majors in engineering, accounting, physics, chemistry, and business administration. "Far more in demand than it used to be are industrial technology majors," he added. "They have as many offers as engineers. Everyone in that department has an offer. Their salary range has been higher than any other, from $12 - 13,000."

Opportunities for teachers for out-of-state jobs are up. "They're looking for math, science, and K-3 teachers," he said. "However, K-3 teachers are in demand in-state as well as out of state." He further added, "Of course nurses are in demand. They're mopped up before they get to be juniors." He also stated that he's been contacted by community colleges and technical colleges for teachers with a master's degree.

In spite of the increase in recruiting, the demand for liberal arts majors has not made an upward spurt. According to Morris, even in the heyday of recruiting - when every company wanted a Black in its firm, no one was hiring liberal arts majors. "The airlines, supermarkets, and railroads are wide open for liberal arts majors, but they don't recruit here. These people ask for liberal arts majors."

"The current budget has been over stepped," stated Nurse Thelma Vines, acting director of the infirmary.

A total of $16,590 had been allotted for medical supplies and expenses for this academic term. As of November 2, 1972, $11,530 had been spent.

A breakdown of figures show that $12,000 was allotted for medical supplies, $500 for travel expenses, $578 for repairs and alterations, $2,100 for general expenses, $1,000 for equipment and $412 for supplies. By November $1,000 had been spent for equipment; a debt of $69 existed for supplies; and $7,541 had been spent for medical supplies. The travel expense fund was exhausted, and also the repairs and alterations fund.

"Students pay a $50 medical fee which pays for medicine, laundry, water, lights and up till now, it paid for ambulance fees and specialists fees," said Mrs. Vines. "However, all the students do not pay these fees," she added. According to Nurse

Vines, "medical supplies are very expensive as witnessed by the fact that 100 industrial packs of tablets for colds cost $400, and 10,000 250 milligrams cost $365."

Nurse Vines has completed a study which shows that the infirmary offers and provides more services than any other university or college for a $50 fee.

Nevertheless, the infirmary (See Infirmary, Page 11)

Infirmary Budget 'Over Stepped'

Listeners of radio station WMDE-FM will find a change in its musical format starting May 1.

The station has been sold to Greensboro WPET AM and its musical programming will be geared toward family music.

Tom Armshaw, vice-president and general manager of the WPET-AM station, said that the newly-acquired WMDE will broadcast various types of music, including soul, middle-of-the-road, and gospel.

The present WMDE-FM will become WPET-FM. It will serve the Black and white communities," he said. Armshaw stated all announcers at WMDE have the option of moving over to the WPET studio and that the transmitter will remain at WMDE broadcasting studio.

Under new management the station will broadcast stereophonic music 24 hours per day.

Armshaw indicated that some of the announcers might not move to the new site because they are not familiar with playing certain kinds of music that the scheduled format would include.

All-Volunteer Army Not To Be All Black

An all-volunteer Army won't end up all-Black, one of the nine Black generals predicted here this week. Gen. Julius Becton said it would be "foolish" to think that only low income and minority groups will fill the ranks in an all volunteer army.

Becton, deputy commander of Ft. Dix, N.J., said the new army would attract a "broad cross-section" of society into its ranks.

He said life in the armed services would be similar to civilian life in that the "same" minority groups would have to compete in the same way in the Army as in real life for success.

Gen. Becton made these comments during a press conference at the Top of the Mart in the Southern Furniture Exposition Building prior to speaking at the A&T Air Force and Army ROTC banquet and ball.

In the broad ranging press conference, the 46-year-old general predicted that amnesty eventually would be granted to those who fled the country to evade the draft. Gen. Becton said he supported the Nixon Administration's present policy because he didn't think these persons could be granted amnesty so soon after the war. "They will be granted amnesty," he said, "but not today—maybe next year or in the years to come. But I think they should be handled on an individual basis."

As for the Administration's recent cutbacks in the number of military bases, Gen. Becton said, "This is usually done after every war. He warned, however, against "lowering our defenses."

Asked for his reaction on the downing of the first American aircraft in the recently resumed air war over Laos and Cambodia, Gen. Becton said, "We must recognize that, as long as we fly combat missions, we are going to lose pilots." He said the armed services are not responsible for the Indochina conflict. "This was a decision of the leaders of this country, and the armed services did what they were told to do."

The 26-year veteran admitted "it will take some time" for the armed service to live down the effects of the Vietnam war and such incidences as the My Lai massacre.

"But we are already getting back to the place where we once were. I can see it at the colleges and universities and cities wherever I go," he added. "In the past there were places where you couldn't even go wearing a uniform. That is no longer the case."

Gen. Becton said that, with the reforms in the armed services and the new opportunities available, it will attract persons from all walks of life. He said, "I think it (the volunteer army concept) will work, but it all depends on how society views the army and the armed services. But if a man, who joins the service, cannot be accepted in society and is criticized, it won't work."

Graduates Plan For Future

By Millie Dunn

Relief, gratitude, happiness, and just a touch of nostalgia are prevalent feelings among the seniors these days. With exams over, most of them are eagerly waiting for their graduation letters. But just what are they thinking while waiting?

Four questions were put to the seniors with varying answers returned. When asked what has been the most important thing that they've learned while here the answer given most was how to understand and communicate with people. Some had other answers. Sherman Harris, a senior from Swanquarter, stated that he has learned how "to get over".

Phyllis Joyner from Durham, stated that she learned that "Charity begins at home and not at A&T." Other answers given were self-discipline and a sense of responsibility. Perhaps the most interesting answer was given by Roy Smith from Charlotte. "The most important thing that I've learned is that education has its handicaps—the more educated you become, the more aware of your problems you are."

When asked about their immediate plans, except for those in ROTC who were going into the armed services, the seniors were very uncertain. Some stated they were going to graduate school, and others stated they would look for a job. Alice Vaughn from Lafayette, Ind. just plans "to take a long vacation."

When asked about what they want out of life, the answers most given were security, peace of mind, and happiness. Some wanted more material things. A senior who wished to remain anonymous stated that all she wants is money. Kenneth Poston, a senior from Orlando, Fla., stated, "I want the simplicities of life—a good job and a home in the suburbs."

Wendell White, a senior from Manning, S.C., wanted security, but to him security means, "a Cadillac and a diamond ring." Alice Vaughn said, "I just want the necessities of life. I don't have to be famous, just comfortable."

Although they may not know what they want right now, all of the seniors knew what they wanted to be doing ten years from now and the answers were surprising. James Keel from Chadburn plans a career in the Air Force. "In ten years I'll be a major," he positively stated. Richard Allen from Badin plans to be in the CIA. Stephen Blake from San Francisco, Calif., stated that he will be running for the U.S. Senate by then.

Look for Pearletta Graves from Reidsville behind a desk in her own boutique. Frances Huntley can be found as "the director of a social agency," while Kenneth Poston will be "a prominent attorney." Most of the senior girls plan to be married and caring for their family.

Some seniors plan to be doing some type of work to benefit the Black community. "Ten years from now, I plan to be teaching on the college level in a Black school to help straighten out the misconceptions that people have about Blacks in Black schools," stated Deborah Shanks from Greensboro. James Daughtry from Newton Grove stated, "I plan to be operating some kind of business to benefit the Black community." Wendell White will be "directing some type of program to help Black people achieve."

Their answers varied, but all agreed on one thing - they'd be glad to see, May 13 arrive.

U. S. Interest In Africa Growing

By Betty Holeman

"The interest of the United States in Africa is growing," said Dr. William Reed, who is presently diplomat in residence, as he lectured to students and faculty in Barnes Hall on "U. S. Relationships with Africa in Barnes Hall auditorium Wednesday night.

He said "The U. S. considers it more important to defer power to the Europeans where Africa is concerned. We do not want to displace their relationship with their former colonies." According to Reed, "The French feel they should have the influence where French speaking people are concerned; the British feel they know best how to deal with their former colonial possessions, and the Belgians feel we should provide the money and they the technical assistance."

Dr. Reed said "On a relative basis our trade with Africa is small. We have four billion dollars invested in Africa; however, this is only four percent of our investments in a world-wide scale."

"Interest of the United States in Africa is both old and new: The first people who occupied the U. S. were Europeans and Africans," stated Dr. Reed.

He said "Most Africans were brought over by forced migration and slavery."

The 1790 census showed that of the four million inhabiting the United States one-fifth were Black. This ratio remained until after the Civil War.

As a result of the migration from Southern and Eastern

Scholastic Standard Set For Teacher Certification

By Lloyd Stiles

The House of Representatives in Raleigh passed a bill on April 13 which would set a minimum scholastic standard for teacher certification.

This legislative action will temporarily stifle the certification controversy which has been hotly debated within the State Board of Education since last December.

The state board on a split vote in January, initiated a certification procedure which would all but drop a minimum score on the National Teacher Exam (NTE) as a requirement. Instead, a teacher's classroom ability and social characteristics would compose two thirds of the certification prerequisites.

The bill which passed the House on a 67 to 28 vote would (See Education, Page 5)

Veteran Instructor To Retire In May

By Ruth Allen

With a twinkle in her eye, Mrs. Catherine H. Copeland says, "I have been teaching ever since they said let's teach." Mrs. Copeland, who has been teaching for the past 42 years, is retiring May 18.

"Actually I have been teaching since I graduated from Shaw University in 1931. She is quick to point out that only 40 of the 42 years were of active service. She was out for two for the birth of her two sons by a previous marriage.

When asked why she is retiring, she stated that she is dividing her time among her classes, her mother and husband, Horace. She felt that this was getting to be a strain upon her. Also, she will be experiencing her fifth major operation after the close of school.

During her 11 years here, Mrs. Copeland served as chairman of the Teacher Education Committee and the English Committee, advisor to the Cape Fear Club, chairman of Freshman English Committee; representative from the School of Education and General Studies to the college council; advisor to the Junior Affiliate of the National Council of Teacher of English.

She was a participant with the 1964 Rockefeller and Carnegie Institute at Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana. Mrs. Copeland has served as a speaker on several occasions for university-sponsored activities.

Until two years ago, she was in charge of student teachers for the English Department.

Her favorite motto for the student teachers was, ungrammatical, but to the point,

"Know your subject matter, cause you can't no more teach what you don't know than you can come back from where you ain't been." Another of her expressions, which her students learn and repeat after class, is "Do you dig the drift or shall I snow again?"

Since she has been here, she has seen an improvement in the calibre of students, but she feels their performance has been hampered by non-compulsory class attendance. "They have the ability to do excellent work, but they can't perform if they are not in class."

Mrs. Copeland's love for her students is evident as she brings out her scrapbook of their appreciative letters, class projects, pictures of their children.

When questioned about her plans after retirement, she stated that she would like to do some writing, consisting of a textbook and a book called Copeland's Anthology of Ridiculous Answers. This was inspired when she was teaching Silas Marner to a junior high class. When she asked one young lady what was a quinea, she replied, "A speckled chicken."

Predominantly Livestock

Aggie Farms Used For Education

By Betty Holeman

"The A&T farms are used strictly for educational purposes," said Harvey A. Johnson, superintendent of the farms.

The farms are located just outside of the city limits on McConnell Road and Lee Street going east.

"They comprise 564 acres, Seventy-five percent of this acreage is tillable which means it will grow crops," he said.

The crops grown are alfalfa, corn, soy beans and sorgum—a first cousin to corn. "These crops are used for forage," said Johnson. They are being cut for soilage or hay.

Pasture crops include Sudan, clover, and fescue.

"The farms, however, are predominantly livestock," commented Johnson. "We have a registered dairy herd consisting of 30 milking cows and 38 young stock calves and heifers," he added.

"Also we have a beef herd consisting of 80 heads. The sheep consist of 14," he said.

"At one time there were 40-50 sheep. However people who went to city left their dogs in the country. Dogs which are blood thirsty thrive off sheep," Johnson stated.

A housing capacity for 4,500 chickens exists on the farms. The swine unit consists of approximately 200 heads. Three hundred turkeys are raised too.

"The farms are funded by the state. They perform a vital service to A&T and the community," said Johnson.

At present about 7,000 kindergarten and first graders annually visit the farms to observe the farm animals in their natural habitat.

"Our farm is no different from any other farm, but it has a larger number of different kinds of livestock," stated Johnson.

According to Johnson, "all agricultural schools have to have a farm to be used as an agricultural lab."

Johnson has been superintendent since 1960 and comments that "it's a constant something you try to do, and you can never overcome."

Curtis Hall Residents Object To Athletes

By Rosie A. Stevens

Plans underway to permit all athletes to live in Curtis Hall during the 1973-74 academic year were abandoned, according to Associate Dean of student Affairs, William Goode.

Mr. Goode stated, "Athletes were supposed to go to Curtis Hall, but the students who lived there felt they would be done an injustice."

Dean Goode said the original request to reserve Curtis for the athletes was made by Cal Irvin, director of Athletics. There were 148 students who were athletes to be housed for next year, and 148 spaces in Curtis Hall to be assigned.

The athletes were to go ahead and complete their housing applications and to be checked off a roster to be sent over by Irvin so that they could be assigned to Curtis. However, he said, students who are currently living in Curtis wanted to remain in the residence hall, because they liked living there and did not want to leave. "I never knew Curtis was so popular," he quipped. He indicated that since he had not received the list of athletes from Irvin, he decided to go ahead and permit the students who are currently in the residence hall to remain.

Plans were subsequently made to reserve part of Scott Hall for the athletes. One whole floor of a wing and part of another floor in Scott would be set aside.

African Liberation Day Declared For May 26 On Three Continents

By Hannah Rogers

African Liberation Day on three continents has been declared for May 26. Mass demonstrations are scheduled in 26 cities covering 24 states in the U.S., Halifax, Nova Scotia; Toronto, Canada; the islands of the Caribbean; London, England; Accra and Dar-es-Salaam, Africa.

The purposes of the scheduled demonstrations of Black people are (1) to express concern for the struggles of Blacks on parts of the African continent who are fighting to regain control of their land and (2) to restore the dignity of all African people; particularly to Bissau, Angola and Mozambique, in South Africa (Azannie), Rhodesia (Zimbabwe), and Namibia (South West Africa) who are engaged in armed struggle to regain African land under colonial and settler control.

The specific objectives of the demonstrations are to protest United States and West European economic and military support of the racist and totalitarian settler regimes in Africa; to raise the awareness of Black people and sympathetic people to the African struggle with regard to the significance of supporting the liberation of the African continent; and to mobilize Black people to give moral and material support to the struggle on the continent.

In order to educate, organize and mobilize Black people for support of the African liberation struggles, National Coordinating Committees have been formed in all areas where demonstrations will be held. In North America the African Liberation Support Committee (ALSC) is coordinating the activities at the national level.

ALSC is a broad-based committee encompassing a cross section of Black political thought and action. Owusu Sautaki, president of Malcolm X Liberation University in Greensboro is the National Chairman of the committee.

Fashions For Spring Modeled By Students

By Yvonne McDonald

"Showers of Fashion for Spring '73" was presented Wednesday night in the Paul Robeson Little Theatre, by the Secretarial Procedures class, directed by Mrs. Katie Dorsett. Featured in this year's show was night on the town fashions, the dressy scene, sportswear and casual wear.

The show was highlighted by a dramatic appearance by Ricky Slaughter and Dwight Dorsett modeling sports outfits.

Also highlighting the show was a creative dance by Mrs. Gwendolyn Roberson and a baton twirling dance by Miss Carolyn Atkinson.

The fashions presented included after five pant suits, sports jackets and pants, maxi skirts, halter tops and hot pants, halter gowns, sizzlers and jumpsuits.

The show was narrated by Miss Brenda Calloway.

Awareness Seminar Presented By 13CC

A&T's 13th College Counseling program recently (April 17, 18) presented its first "awareness Seminar."

The seminar was a multi-purpose project. Some of the main purposes were to counter the apathy on our campus; to allow students, faculty, administrators and Black people in general, to become one in an exchange of ideas and opinions; and to make everyone aware of the world that functions outside of the classrooms and beyond the boundaries of A&T. Thus, the program took shape centering around the major institutions that control, govern and influence man.

The topics discussed and the people that discussed them are as follows; "What Part Should Religion Play In the Lives of Blacks - Particularly in Our Present struggle?," Rev. John Mendez of Raleigh and Joseph Bennett, director of 13CC. "How Relevant Is Education as a Vehicle for Black People?," Dr. Florentine Sowell, chairman of the Business Education Department and Marc Smith of YOBU and AFRICAN WORLD; "Integration vs. Separation," (See Audience, Page 9)

Women's Council Gets New President

By Lorna Hines

The Women's Council elected its officers for the '73-74 school term Wednesday. Agnes Evans, a junior institutional management major, was elected president of the group. Other elected officers include Phyllis Evans, vice-president; Linda Burnette, secretary; Geraldine Davis, treasurer; and Vanessa Owens, chairman of the social and awards committee.

Agnes Evans stated her goals for next year; "I hope to get the women of this campus more interested in the affairs of the Women's Council. I hope to see better attendance at the meetings and a willingness to work with the officers."

The Women's Council has a number of purposes and goals. Its constitution states that it is an organization of the women students to recommend policies, regulations, and adjustments pertaining to affairs of women students; to aid in developing competent leadership; to encourage good scholarship; and to promote cultural, social, recreational and educational activities for women students.

The banquet which was scheduled for the group has been canceled. The cancellation was due to the large number of women students desiring to attend the activity. A list of over 500 names was submitted to Agnes, present chairman of the social and awards committee. The council was unable to find a location to accommodate the tremendous number, which would fit their budget.

An installation service is to be held in the Union Ballroom, May 2 at 7:30p.m. Another affair is being scheduled and is to be announced at a later date.

Law And Medical Schools Do Heavy Recruiting

Asked about recruitment by graduate schools, Morris stated that it was not as extensive as it used to be. "The heavy recruiting is now done by law and medical schools."

Morris states that a major reason for not as many recruiters visiting A&T is that not enough seniors sign up for interviews. When asked if the students know what they want, he replied, "The students in business and industry have an idea of what they want but the liberal arts majors, especially those in non-teaching majors, seldom have any definite idea about what they're looking for."

Blacks Intensify Plans To Save Schools

All African News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. - A wide range of concerned Blacks have intensified mobilization around the salvation of traditional Black schools in the wake of a recent U.S. Court deemed to be threatening.

The forces are composed of college presidents, politicians, student leaders, alumni and faculty.

State college systems in Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, North Carolina, Arkansas, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Maryland and Virginia are accused of being out of line. In all these there are predominantly Black state colleges separate from predominantly white ones--so-called "racially identifiable" schools.

The recent ruling, the Black school supporters feel, threatens the very existence of the Black institutions.

They began their actions early last week with 12 Black college presidents meeting with Dr. Herman Branson, president of Lincoln University, who also heads the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education.

The association is a coalition of Black college presidents, and the meeting involved discussion of the original HEW ruling, handed down on Feb. 16 by a

Their recent actions come in response to a U. S. Appeals Court affirmation last week (April 16) of a Feb. 16 ruling ordering the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) to begin fund withholding procedures against school systems felt to be not in compliance with federal desegregation statutes.

While most press coverage of the decision has focused on the portion of the order calling for action against secondary schools in 17 states, the judgment will also affect higher education in 10 jurisdictions.

The school presidents, like other Black schools supporters, feel that the application of the ruling to Black colleges will cause the institutions to either be assimilated or else abandoned as they feel Black secondary schools were under previous desegregation mandates.

"People are very eager to dismantle anything which is truly controlled and truly beneficial to Blacks," Dr. Branson said.

"What we want to make certain of is that in supposedly implementing this program, we don't lose some of the most valuable institutions we have."

Another group entering the struggle has been students and alumni of Louisiana's Southern University, where two students were killed Nov. 16 during demonstrations in support of improved educational opportunities at the largest predominantly Black school in the country.

Shortly after the college heads had met, the Southern University Movement-- a loose confederation of students, alumni, educators and national political leaders-- met with members of the Congressional Black Caucus.

The meeting produced a proposal calling for hearings on the problems of Black colleges, to be held in early summer if the full Black Caucus approves.

Dr. Branson said his group had established a continuing committee, headed by Morgan State College President King Cheek,

From The Ancient To The Contemporary

A "History of Music" was presented before an audience of twenty-five Morrison Hall residents by Deloise Mosely, a junior music major from Greensboro.

She led the audience through ancient music, with Greek chants to the different periods of music including Baroque, Classical, Romantic with emphasis on the beginning of Black music in this country.

Ronnie Quick and Deloise Mosley gave a piano presentation of jazz and rock, followed by Janet Jones who played "Invention No. 1 by Bach. Deloise also sang a contemporary rock gospel she arranged entitled "Eliza Rock"

Also appearing on the program was the University Choir who sang classical selections from Mendelssohn "Watching Over Israel" and Bach's "Jesus".

Deloise has cut two songs, "Love Lifted Me" and "What a Friend". Following the musical program, special certificates were presented to the graduating seniors by Mrs. Marylou Bowers, residence counselor in Vanstory.

Counselor Appointed To Fellowship Board

By Aurelia Curley

Mrs. Ruth M. Gore, director of Counseling and Testing, was appointed to the National Urban Studies Scholars Fellowship Advisory Board. The meeting was held in Washington, D.C. on April 10-12.

The advisory board consists of approximately 50 college and university representatives. Out of 900 applicants, only 100 applicants were selected. There were 15 alternates chosen and 15 honorable mentions.

The purpose of the program is to increase the number of highly skilled practitioners in government management and planning available to states, counties, cities, and multijurisdictional agencies. One year graduate fellowships are granted in various urban and community development fields to students who are preparing for careers in public service.

Applicants must be citizens of the United States or have applied for citizenship or persons who have obtained a permanent residence visa. Students must be accepted or have applied for fulltime graduate school leading to a master's degree. Urban Law applicants must be enrolling for their first year of study toward an L.L.B. or J.D. degree. Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will not support individuals enrolled in or enrolling in doctoral programs.

All awards will be made for one year only with no renewal option.

Phi Alpha Theta

Students Found International Honor Society

By Betty Holeman

"A local chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, an International Honor Society of History, will soon be founded here," stated Dr. James Nutsch, advisor for the group.

Installation ceremonies will be held May 3 in Room 100 of the Student Union. Sixteen students and ten faculty members are scheduled to be invited.

Presiding at this ceremony will be Dr. Percival Perry of Wake Forest University who is Regional Director of Phi Alpha Theta and a member of its International Council. Guests from local chapters at Winston-Salem State University, Guilford College and UNC-G will also be in attendance.

"Word was received during the past week by the History Department that its petitioning group had been approved for the honor by the International Council of Phi Alpha Theta and all of is more than 450 chapters," Dr. Nutsch stated.

Phi Alpha Theta is the largest and most influential of the honor societies in History. It is the largest, in number of chapters, of the accredited honor societies holding membership in the Association of College Honor Societies.

The membership of Phi Alpha Theta is composed of students and professors who have been elected to membership upon the basis of excellence in the study and the writing of history.

At the same time, it is a professional society, the objective of which is the promotion of the study of History through the encouragement of research, good teaching, publication, and the exchange of learning and thought among historians.

Faculty members to be invited are Dr. Frank White, Dr. Frank Bell, Reverend Cleo McCoy, Dr. James Nutsch, Dr.

Theodore Partrick, Dr. Peter Meyers, Cicero Hughes, Jr., Mrs. Christina Thompson, Dr. Dennis Vetock and Woodrow W. Harding, Jr.

Other students include Michael Pratt, Carl Rhodes, Yvonne Simpson, Sheneel Vines, Winston Watson and Terry Williams.

The newly elected officers for the society include president, Bobby Belfield; vice-president, Carl Rhodes; secretary, Maudie Davis; treasurer, Winston Watson; and historian, Otis Brooks.

Education Majors Need Earlier Experiences

require that a prospective teacher score at least 950 on the NTE, which is the old requirement, or the equivalent on any new test that might come into use. The State Board of Education could add on any other requirements it might desire in any formula.

In effect the bill doesn't alter the old scholastic standard but rather lets the state board add new social and performance requirements.

The change, not effective until July 1, was made to end any possible discrimination against minorities.

Estell Harper, an education instructor, feels that the NTE is a practical guideline set up by the state and is required for all prospective teachers. "NTE can be used for curriculum purposes by the institution," said Dr. Samuel O. Jones of the Education Department. He would like to see NTE not used for certification.

In regard to competency-based teacher education, Dr. Jones feels that it is the right approach to education when all persons involved understand what it is.

"Earlier experiences for all our education majors should be provided so that they can decide what they want to do," said Dr. Jones. "Guidance should be given for education majors and their training period extended for greater effect. "The NTE is okay but field experiences should be extended," said a male education major. Another male education major remarked, "By the time I got adjusted to the classroom situation, the training period was about over."

What is the future for teacher education majors? Competency-based teacher education, according to some authorities, will be the criteria in the future.

The Chancellor Called

Last night the chancellor called. He wanted to know something about a merger rumor. Honestly, I could tell him nothing. He was very disturbed. He wanted to give a reward for the name of those spreading the lies—$100.

This is why. All these rumors about merger with UNC-G are turning prospective students away, and if they continue, there will no A&T to merge. There won't be anyone here.

The chancellor thinks it may be a plot. I am inclined to agree. There have been so many rumors in the last three weeks that we have had to assign a rumor reporter. I got one this afternoon that takes the cake: "There is a bill in legislature to merge the university with UNC-G." Wow!

It's not that there are rumors; that's been going on since the '50s. People are dumb enough to believe them. The important thing about a rumor is that it clouds the truth. And truth is that high school seniors are not going to enroll at a college with an uncertain future.

So what can you do to save A&T? Go home and tell everybody you see that A&T is on the move. And it ain't moving cross town.

That's Tough

This will be the last time I will share my thoughts with you in these columns allotted to me. After two years, goodbye is hard to say.

I hope I have not been biased because I have tried to be fair. I hope I have not been offensive because I have tried to use good taste. I hope I have not been boring because I have tried to be timely and provocative. But, if I have not, tough! I don't intend to leave with a lot thank yous for everybody; not because they are not well deserved but because to say thanks would cheapen the gift. I have made friends while editor of the newspaper among administrators, faculty members and students. But at some point during the last two years my thoughts on a particular subject have run counter to theirs. Luckily they understood and we are still friends. The newspaper's purpose is to "print the news and raise hell," not making friends.

I have talked about a lot of things during the past two years; the good ideas that remained just that, the new programs that never got off the ground, the new laws that never got enforced, problems that never got solved and, most of all, the attitudes that never got changed. Next year there will be two papers a week and twice as much talk. But you must read it. You will not be asked to agree, but simply to think.

I am not leaving these columns in search of a home in the suburbs, a cadillac or a diamond ring; but in search of another newspaper to raise some more hell. Later.

Bases Affect Future Economy

By Rosie Stevens

An item in the National Observer, April 28th edition, stated that the Department of Defense plans to close 40 major military bases over a 14-month period. These 40 bases are included in a total of 274 installations to be closed, reduced or consolidated. According to the item, 42,800 jobs would be eliminated in 32 states, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico.

It is hard to predict the effect of the closings of these installations upon the economy. Though according to the item, the reason for closing the bases was that 3.5 billion dollars would be saved over a ten-year period, the immediate effect of unemployment would be great on the economy, and on the number of people directly affected in a given area. This could be the case in spite of administrative efforts to mitigate the effects. The Nixon administration seems to be primarily concerned with saving money. Education is no longer a top priority, with funds being substantially cut for the fiscal year 1973.

This may have the effect of forcing students out of school, depending on the guidelines of the Basic Educational Opportunity grants and the cuts and terminations of certain forms of aid. Forcing of students to leave school for lack of funds would create another source of unemployment. This, together with the effects of unemployment generated by defense close outs of military installations, could create a bad economic situation. The situation will not be so good as it is with close-outs and consolidations.

At the same time, food costs are rising, as well as other cost of living expenses. Conceivably, the nation could be plunged into a mild recession with rising costs, and with unemployment. This might be similar to the situation occurring when the president assumed office in 1969. It is very hard at present for one to make any predictions concerning the economy.

A Commentary

If You're Looking For An Excuse

By Ted L. Mangum

The whole question of African Liberation Day can be easily dismissed as just another day for them; "YOBU, Malcolm X and other so-called militants to get together and display their unwillingness to assimilate into the "American Main stream." But that's only if you're looking for an excuse not to become involved in ALD.

If you look close enough you'll find that ALD goes beyond the personalities, in fact principles involved, not the people, are the foundations for ALD. The principles of ALD speak to our past, present, and future conditions in terms of how much longer we are going to be a receptive, parasitic and powerless race.

ALD takes an individual from the level of personal frustration-but no solution; to a level of recognition of a universal problem (non-white) people the world over, being oppressed by white oppressors) with a universal objective (Pan-Africanism).

So the question becomes "Is our struggle or problem a universal one and is the oppressor also universal?" In answer to this, it is no mere coincidence that Frantz Fanon's analysis of the oppressed people in Algiers can adequately describe, the condition mentalities and values of any Black ghetto in America. A common oppressor, maintaining a common system, naturally causes common conditions.

Our reactions to our oppression is also understandably similar. At the time when A&T's student body was moving this nation into an era of sit-ins and demonstrations, our African brothers and sisters were losing their lives demonstrating in Guinea, Bissau, and Sharpsville South Africa.

When Harlem exploded into what was to become symbolic of the late '60's in this country, African revolutionaries had already organized and began to implement armed struggle in their country. Our emotional reactions to our oppression (riots), lacked the deep political understanding and commitment to principles that their revolution produces, yet we both moved into a position of armed struggle against our oppressor.

Because the luxuries of America has allowed for the misarrangement of our values and because white power has its very foundation in this country, our evolution towards revolution has been retarded, but no one can deny that our struggle as African people is one.

ALD also allows one to redefine Africa in its rightful positive perspective. Africa must never be defined as the negative, native, useless, underdeveloped, poverty-stricken land that white folks have projected it to be. The next time a white boy gives these negative misconceptions of Africa, he should be asked "If Africa is so useless why would white folks in Southern Africa rather fight than switch back to their original homeland?"

We are an African people, the world over-scattered and seemingly powerless but still an African people. As Willie Kgositsile says, "If you put water in a wine bottle and put it away for 400 years and at the end of 400 years, you pour it out-is it wine or is it still water?" We are still an African People!

Black Postal Alliance Head Charges 'Systematic Elimination'

All African News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C.-U.S. postal jobs, once considered privileged positions in the Black community, may not be so anymore. In addition, it was charged last week at a Congressional hearing, a process of "systematic elimination" is taking place, moving a good number of Blacks out of these once lucrative posts.

"It's not something we have in our minds or a hallucination of sorts," said Robert L. White, president of the predominantly Black National Alliance of Postal and Federal Employees (NAPFE). "We just know it. We've seen the same signs before."

White had just finished testifying before a special House sub-committee on Postal Facilities, Mail and Labor Management. The sub-committee was hearing testimony on two labor proposals, one calling for granting workers limited rights to strike while a second would make all postal employees have to join two predominantly white unions in order to keep their jobs.

While the Black labor leader, who heads the country's largest Black union, generally supported the first proposal, he was not in favor of the second, which he saw as part of a coordinated and recently accelerated process of eliminating Blacks from the postal service.

In 1970, when the U.S. Post Office Department became the U.S. Postal Service, a semi-private corporation, the NAPFE was not recognized as a bargaining group. Instead, exclusive rights were given to seven predominantly white units who had, up until 1960, generally refused to even admit Blacks to their ranks.

Under the new plan, all postal workers would have to join either the National Association of Letter Carriers or the American Postal Workers Union, or otherwise face possible loss of their job.

White favored instead a plan which would give his union full recognition in itself and not force persons to join a union not of their own choosing.

White charged the white unions with having a historical record of not representing Blacks and at one time actively either barring them or relegating them to Jim Crow unions.

"We do not believe that leopards change their spots," he said.

On the elimination of Blacks, the NAPFE president told the Congressional body that much of this was being accomplished by moving postal facilities away from inner cities and out to the suburbs, places to which Blacks had less access.

He explained afterwards that this was usually done on the pretense of a lack of space, but, pointing to "blocks and blocks of unused buildings" in the predominantly Black central cities, termed such justification "an outright lie."

Many are unaware that since the 1970 Postal Reorganization Act, workers no longer enjoy the protection of civil service status. Postal workers are now subject to most of the same hazards, layoffs and dismissals as other workers. White saw this as more of a reason for his group to achieve adequate recognition, lest the Black community be shortchanged.

At one time Blacks were 22 percent of all employees. However, that number has now dwindled to a less respective 19 percent of the total 600,000.

Why the decline?

Explains White, the jobs have become good paying and respectable, and white management wants them for its own kind: "They're just going to eliminate the Blacks so whites can get the jobs."

Black people are playing with the fight of their lives and losing

'Any Crook Can'

All-African News Service

Some Black community activists used to have a habit of talking about different presidents of this country as criminals. These thoughts were usually dismissed as nothing more than "rhetoric" and "groundless namecalling" by rag tag radicals. How different that opinion must become now in the wake of the Watergate mess.

The tentacles of unethical behavior have already filtered within the once believed immaculately white structure at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., stopping just a few doors short-and maybe just for a time-of the office of the President of the United States.

The Watergate scandal is far from over, and true it is that some who seem foggiest now may come out smelling like roses. Yet how in these times will those same critics now dismiss as radical rhetoric the involvement by persons virtually in control of the federal government in nothing short of high level crime and intrigue.

Blacks once looked forward to the day when a little Black boy born in some ghetto tenement or sharecropper shack might grow up be president. Perhaps the trend of current events has shown such a goal to be neither realistic nor particularly desirable.

In fact, in the wake of Watergate, a passing remark by a Black activist in the nation's capital might now prove to be a profound commentary on the matter. The activist was talking of those who questioned the ability of the city's predominantly Black population to govern itself. Washington is now controlled by a government appointed almost completely by the President.

"It doesn't take much to run Washington, D.C.," he said. "You can do just as good a job as is being done now. All you have to do is be a first class criminal."

This doesn't clearly mean yet that "Any Crook Can." But it seems crystal clear that though less than honorable characters may not be able to be on top, they can certainly be high up on the totem pole.

Guess Who Won?

By Janice Smith

Wednesday was a good day for guessing, especially for voters who elected officers for the 1973-74 Women's Council.

One coed came from the Gibbs Hall lobby shaking her head saying she had voted but she only knew two of the persons whom she had given her vote.

The constitution of the Women's Council states that it is an organization of the women students to recommend policies, regulations, and adjustments pertaining to affairs of women students; and to promote cultural, and social, recreational and educational activities for women students."

It's supposed to do what one is led to ask. Purposes for the Council's existence are valid enough, but we must not be merely satisfied with good intentions.

The Council has potential to become one of the most powerful organizations on campus, for there is an increasing number of coeds on campus. But latent potential is the same as no potential if it is not put into use.

Invisibility seems to be contagious, just ask class officers, Women and Men's councils' heads and the members of student legislature. As yet there has been no antidote to check the spread of the disease which causes sparsely attended assemblies, and meetings. There is one major reason why voters might not have known the candidates seeking office: they (the voters) probably have not been attending council meetings. These meetings are open to all the women students enrolled at the university.

Blame is a "dog" of a word that gets shuffled from person to person and ends up abandoned. Why don't Women Council candidates seeking office make campaign speeches? If they did would we listen or would we disappear into that "jive bag" of invisibility?.

How Charles Gourlay is bridging the post-college financial gap. With Super $tart.

"Take a person getting out of college, going on the job market," says Charles D. Gourlay, B.S. in Business, UNC-CH '71, who is now a Construction Coordinator. "O.K. You've got to worry about renting an apartment, putting a deposit down, deposits on all your utilities, plus the month's rent in advance. And living expenses. And then you load him down with a car payment. Add all those up and see how much you've got left. But, if you give a man six months' deferred payment on his car and Master Charge, it gives him time to realize what he can afford and what he can't afford. That way, he doesn't overspend. And, if you overspend the first month or two, you'll get so far behind you'll never catch up. Super $tart was valuable to me, and should be valuable to anyone unless they are independently wealthy."

Graduating students from four years of college, post graduate or professional school can qualify for Super $tart.

Also, be a student in good standing with a C or higher average. And be of legal age with definite plans to live and work in North Carolina after college.

Ask about Super $tart at any of the 164 offices of First-Citizens Bank in N. C.

We serve 67 towns from the mountains to the coast in North Carolina. There is a Super $tart Officer in each office of First-Citizens Bank. See any of our Super $tart Officers.

Another Can Do first. Exclusively at First-Citizens Bank.

Free banking services and a loan at a preferred rate with delayed payment option are included in this unique package of banking services.

Super $tart offers ● free checking service with no service charge for one year ● 200 free personalized checks ● free safe deposit box for one year.

Super $tart offers you a line of credit ● a preferred rate installment loan for a new or used car or other major purchase with no payments due for the first six months ● a Master Charge credit card with no payments due for the first six months. Finance charges do accrue, however, during these six months' periods.

Super $tart also offers you a relationship with the Can Do bank. We'll be happy to help you get established in your new town. After all, that's how we came to be called the Can Do bank: by going beyond the call of duty to serve our customers.

Band To Give Spring Concert

The A&T Symphony Band, W. F. Carlson, Jr., Director, and J. J. Williams, Associate Director, will present its Annual Spring Concert, Sunday, May 6, 1973, in Richard B. Harrison Auditorium, Main Campus. The 80-member group will present a variety program of band music that will include several marches by Richard Rogers and Vaclav Nelhbel; CHESTER OVERTURE, by William Schuman; GEORGE GERSHWIN PORTAIT, by Bruce Chase, as well as several lighter selections such as Isaac Hayes' SHAFT. Featured student soloist will be trombonist Beverly Bennett, a junior music student from High Point, N.C., who will play MORCEAU SYMPHONIQUE, by Alexandre Guilman, an arrangement by Wesley Shephard.

The highlight of the concert will be the premiere performance of a tone poem, ELEGY FOR THREE, composed and arranged for Band by Sherman U. Williamson, a 1946 graduate of A&T. Williamson will conduct the work which was written in memory of three former A&T professors: Dr. Warner Lawson, former chairman of the Department of Music, H. Clinton Taylor, former chairman of the Art Department, and Bernard Lee Mason, former Director of Bands and violinist. All are now deceased. Dr. Warner Lawson, under whom the composer of the tone poem studied theory and voice, was acclaimed as one of the great living conductors of choral music in America. He came to A&T in 1936 and while here developed vocal groups that were in demand all over the eastern part of the nation. A nationally known pianist, Dr. Lawson traveled and studied in Europe with Artur Schanable, world-famous pianist and teacher. He left A&T in 1944 and became Dean of Fine Arts at Howard University, where his dynamic conducting of the Howard University Chorus was enjoyed throughout Europe and on coast-to-coast air networks. Dr. Lawson died in June, 1971.

H. Clinton Taylor, under whom the composer of the tone poem studied art, died in December 1958. He began his art teaching at A&T in 1927 and was responsible for initiating its expansion. Many of his paintings adorn the walls of structures on the campus and throughout the city. His best known works are portraits of the late Richard B. Harrison and Dr. F. D. Bluford, now located in Harrison Auditorium.

Bernard Lee Mason was Director of Bands from 1934 until 1946 and taught both Williamson and Carlson. A native of Des Moines, Iowa, and a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory and the University of Michigan, Mason was an accomplished concert violinist and clarinetist. The Lawson-Mason Duo performed many years before music lovers throughout the east. Under his direction, the A&T Marching and Concert Bands gave many performances at football games and on concert tours throughout the south that brought wide attention to the institution. Mr. Mason left A&T in 1946 to become the Director of Bands at Howard University. He died in 1968.

Sherman U. Williamson, composer and arranger of "ELEGY FOR THREE," is a native of Greensboro, N.C. He received graduate and undergraduate degrees in Music and Art from A&T State University and has done further study at Saint Andrews Presbyterian College in Laurinburg and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. He is the only Black in North Carolina to have won awards in both original art and music in regional art festivals. As partial requirement for the M.A. degree, Williamson wrote a musical tragedy entitled "THE SIXTEENTH YEAR." He has recorded and composed popular and gospel music for three recording companies in New York and is presently teacher of art in the Laurinburg-Scotland County School System. He is the president of the 8th District Department of Music Teachers. A member of Kappa Lambda Chapter of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, he is the director of the Union Memorial United Methodist Church of Greensboro Gospel Chorus and initiated the Greensboro City Recreation Department Performing Arts.

Blue-Gold Indicates Defense Will Dominate Team Next Fall

When Blue team beat the Golds 18-8 last Monday afternoon in the spring football game on the A&T practice field, the outward appearance looked as if the defense will be the dominating force for next season's team.

Maybe so.

Coach Hornsby Howell didn't have the entire cast for the 1973 Aggies on stage for the fans, who lined both sides of the field.

To start with, almost all of the regular runners for the starting offensive backfield were missing.

Al Holland was keeping his left arm in shape for his next pitching assignment. Artis Stanfield is also involved with baseball.

Thomas Murphy and William Medley didn't dress for the game because of various injuries.

Howell, however, did have the services of his co-regular quarterbacks— Len Reliford for the Gold team and Paul McKibbins who ran the Blues' offense.

One of the areas that pleased Howell was the quarterbacking. "I thought Reliford threw well," lauded Howell, "but nobody caught the ball. And McKibbins had a real good day on his sprint outs."

The two quarterbacks had a hand in scoring the last three TDs.

McKibbins went over from six yards out in the second period and hit Ray Pettiford with a 26-yard strike in the last quarter.

Reliford ran over from the seven, after a blocked punt in the third period. He also hit Terry McNeil with the day's only conversion points.

"If we could put it all together, we could be better off," added Howell, who was talking about the overall play as well as the lineup. "But we've got to get somebody to catch the ball."

Michael Henderson made a 26-yard reception, which was called back by a penalty, but Howell was not impressed by Henderson's blocking ability. And everybody must block in Howell's system.

Another area of concentration was the defense.

The generally tough Aggie defense will be shattered by graduation, leaving only three regulars for the upcoming season— Carl Collins, end; Donald Barnes, linebacker; and John Hampton, back.

Howell also talks about a rebuilding year for the team because of his defensive losses.

While Howell said he mixed up the team, it was evident the Blues, for the most part, had the better and/or most experienced talent. The Blues looked the stronger on the line.

"We wanted to see how our young defensive back on the Gold team would perform," added Howell. "Mike Edwards played well (strong safety), so did Darrell Glover (free safety). David Brown did an outstanding job both ways for the Blues at defensive tackle and offensive guard."

There were some missing cogs for the defense, too. Antonio Wilson, a tackle, was out with a sprained ankle. Steve Jackson, a linebacker, was also held out because of injuries.

"There were several people I held out to stay away from injury," continued Howell.

"So we mixed it up and didn't try to make collegians out of them. I was satisfied with the type of ability we had although we didn't have that much.

"The players had a whole lot of desire and showed a great deal of effort. You've got to have this to win."

Howell kept injecting the incoming crop of players. He mentioned they will be playing whether they make mistakes or not.

The newcomers will get their dose of defense...that's Howell's way.

In District 26 Meet

By Blannie Bowen

Is there anyway possible for North Carolina Central University to lose an NAIA track meet? If there are any possible solutions, they had better be put in action soon or Central will easily win its second straight NAIA National Track Championship.

The only way to defeat Central is to break Larry Black's leg, punch Julius Sang's eyes out, and try fracturing Melvin Bassett's ankle. These solutions are highly improbable and consequently, Central still wins.

This was the case at the District 26 NAIA track and field meet Tuesday when the Eagles scored 81 points to easily win the event held at Durham, High Point College collected second place with 61 points while Winston - Salem State and A&T captured third and fourth places with 50 and 39 points respectively.

The meet's most valuable player was Ray Jenkins of NCCU who won the long and triple jumps in addition to running the second leg of Central's winning mile relay team.

A&T's fourth place finish was partially because of illness to 880 yard dash-man Ricky Majette and shot-putter Rex Smith.

Maurice Watson captured second place in the 440 yard dash with a 48.9 time, while Sang won the event with a 48.2 time. Albert Atkins won third place in this event for A&T with a 50.8 time.

David Blue, Wyman McCoy, and Glen Turner won second, third, and fourth places in the triple jump for the Aggies.

Blue and McCoy captured third and fourth places in the long jump. Lamont Taylor won second place in the discus, while Stanley Christian won fourth place in both the discus and the shot-putt.

Preston Cottman continued his fine running by finishing in third place in the 220 yard dash.

A&T put up a good fight against the fast running Central men, but the nationally famous Eagles are now flying high while participating in the same Penn Relays that they won last year.

Seattle Claims Harris In Fourth Round Draft

"I have never been out of United States and this is really an honor," said A&T's All-American guard William "June" Harris after discovering that he had been selected to compete in the World Basketball Games in Peru this summer.

And on the heels of this good news came Wednesday's National Basketball Association draft which left the Seattle Supersonics claiming him as a fourth round draft choice.

The Amateur Athletic Union is sponsoring a basketball team to compete against the olympic teams from Japan, Russia, Cuba, Brazil and other nations; Harris will be heading the group of American players. Coaches for the AAU team are John McLendon, former coach at North Carolina Central and Clarence "Bighouse" Gaines of Winston-Salem State University.

Gaines said "If we win the Games, then each player's value will go up considerably. A win would definitely cause the value of a player such as Harris to go up when it comes to professional ball."

But Harris' stock is already up, and the All-MEAC Tournament MVP this season and AP All-American says "I'm going to give 100 per cent as always when I go to Peru. As far as pro ball is concerned, any team weak in guards is the one that I prefer.

Bisons Fight Aggies For Second In Tennis

By Blannie Bowen

There is going to be a showdown this week-end in Washington between A&T's Aggies and Howard's Bisons for second place in the tough MEAC tennis race.

The winner will emerge in second place behind the high-flying Eagles of North Carolina Central. Winning second place in the regular season race is not the only benefit that the victorious team will receive. Placings for the upcoming MEAC Spring Carnival may be settled this week-end. A victory Saturday would mean that the second place team would not have to face the front-running Eagles until the finals.

Central will receive a bye in the quarter finals because there are only seven teams in the MEAC. This year's carnival will be played in Baltimore, Md., May 5-6.

A&T gained the showdown with Howard by trouncing

Aggie Racketman Picks Up Steam

Maryland-Eastern Shore 8-1 Friday in Princess Anne, Md. and by edging Delaware State 7-2 in Dover Del. Saturday.

Robert Sampson and Mike Onubogu continued their fine play by suppressing their doubles' opponents both days. Ronald Platt is picking up steam with every match and he has been on an unbelievable tear since an early season slump.

Coach Matt Brown of A&T cites Platt's performances of recent by stating, "He is getting better with each match and he is showing great promise."

"Christopher Allen," continues Coach Brown, "is very definitely the most improved player on our squad."

Blacks To Converge In Raleigh May 26

In North Carolina the May 26 demonstrations will take place in Raleigh. Hundreds of Black people are expected to converge on the city from several other cities and communities. The State African Liberation Committee, headed by John Mendez and Vaughn Clamhion is in charge of the arrangements.

The local ALSC is currently working vigorously to mobilize Black people within Greensboro and its vicinity. For further information concerning plans and activities for African Liberation Day, please contact:

Students Respond To Survey Questions

In the concluding section of the survey concerning academic habits, 43% of the students replied that they studied daily. The remaining 67% generally study weekly or when they have a test.

Most of the students consider the library as the best place to study, but nearly as many favored the dorm. About 81 students preferred places other than the dorm or library.

About 61.6% do not think that students are "academic minded." When asked to suggest some ways to make students more academic minded the replies included the following.

(1) Up to the individual himself. (2) Learn to study, and then study harder. (3) Stimulating instructors. (4) Less extra-curricula activities. (5) Defined study areas. (6) Better library facilities. (7) Greater class participation by students.

physician." Dean Jesse E. Marshall, vice-chancellor of Student Affairs said, "We are continuing to work toward getting a full-time doctor, but it depends upon one of the members of the Board of Trustees, an A&T graduate who is a medical doctor, Dr. Otis Tillman." Dr. Tillman is trying to get a full time doctor through a special program in Washington, provisions are made in this program to train doctors to work in infirmaries on college campuses. Due to the time element, a full time doctor can not be obtained until the students graduate. This may be next year or the year after, according to Dr. Marshall.

Marshall further stated "The infirmary only has one clinic because the doctors feel they can see twice as many students. In addition, they have started making rounds to the students in the wards." Dean Marshall said "I would like to see two full time doctors."

THEY CALL HIM, "SUPER BAD"

The origin of the nickname is not clear but, according to his fellow pilots, he has never made a bad landing on a carrier. One of his crewmen distinguished him as "the coolest . . . and one fine pilot."

Mike Southers graduated from college with a degree in psychology and had one thing in mind . . . to fly!

"I have always wanted to fly and the Navy offered me the best opportunity and training. I want to be a commercial pilot when I finish my tour and I have always regarded the Navy as the best way to go.

The Navy is no bed of roses . . . it has many of the same problems that society has as far as race relations go, but they're really trying to do something about them. But, if I had to do it all over again, I'd do exactly the same thing."

Mike Southers has his reasons for becoming a Navy pilot. The Navy has reasons for you.

There is a wide range of opportunities open to you as a member of the Naval Air Team. Like Mike Southers, you could go into pilot training and learn to fly sleek Navy jets, multi-engine prop "tracker" planes, or big Navy helicopters.

The Navy also offers you training as a flight officer with specialities in such areas as navigation, airborne electronics, air intercept control, or other exciting and rewarding fields.

It takes a lot to wear the Navy wings . . . it takes a lot of hard work. But, the opportunity is there for you. Get in touch with the Navy recruiter near you and . . .
