Polls Open Until 9 p.m.

Students Vote On Visitation

The turnout for voting on coed-visitation was fairly heavy Monday. It was the first day of two days of student voting in nine resident halls on the issue of coed-visitation.

Counselors in Vanstory Hall reported that over half of the residents there had voted by the time the polls closed Monday night. Mrs. C. O. Pettiford, a hall counselor in Gibbs Hall, said that "quite a few" had turned out to vote. Mrs. Mary D. Smith, a hall counselor in Morrison Hall, said that 67 out of 103 residents had voted by Monday evening. Eighty-five out of 154 residents had voted in Holland by the time the polls closed on Monday. A hall counselor in Cooper Hall reported that close to half of the residents had voted there.

According to Ronald Penny, president of Senior Dormitory, the turnout there for Monday was "pretty good." Senior Dormitory had coed-visitation for fall semester last school term.

Marilyn Marshall, president of the SGA said that in the discussions with dormitory residents about the issue, held Oct. 1-5 in each dorm except Senior Dormitory and Cooper Hall, the factor of two-thirds of the residents voting yes for the issue, not just two-thirds showing up to vote was stressed. She said that members of the SGA are supposed to help at the polls today from 5 to 9 p.m. The hours for voting today are 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. Students are required to show their I.D. to vote.

Coed-visitation is only acceptable by the university in the living areas of a residence hall upon the approval of the same by two thirds of the residents. This means that two thirds of the members of each dorm have to vote yes to coed-visitation before that dorm can have coed-visitation. The votes will be counted by the hall counselors and one member of the SGA.

If coed-visitation is not approved by two-thirds of the residents of a residence hall, it shall be publicized by the various communicative media. By presenting a petition with one-tenth of the residents' signatures on it to have coed-visitation reconsidered, the policy may be changed by a two-thirds vote provided a majority members of the hall are present and voting at the meeting.

Marilyn said that she was uncertain of how much leeway coed-visitation would have in a close vote. She did not know whether the majority of votes would be accepted in a close vote or whether coed-visitation would be ruled out because it is a little short of the two-thirds vote.

If approved by two-thirds of the residents of a dorm, it will go into effect Thursday, Oct. 25, at 6 p.m.

Alumni Service Speaker Says 'Be Mindful Of Times'

By Betty Holeman

What Time Is It? was the topic discussed by the Reverend

John H. Malone at the twenty-sixth annual alumni service, Sunday in Harrison Auditorium.

Rev. Malone, a member of the Class of 1951, based his sermon on selected verses from the third chapter of Ecclesiastes and the 13 chapter of Romans.

Rev. Malone observed that we need to be more aware of time. He stated that primitive man used symbols to tell time; however, modern man is too far advanced for symbols.

"What does a clock tell you?" he asked. "Does it point only to the hour rising or does it signify something else?"

He stressed that God Himself has entered into the flesh and that the "Kingdom of God is at hand."

"What time is it?" he queried. "We should be mindful that this is a perilous time," he answered, "a time of confusion, famine, race against race; but this is only night and the day is coming which will remind us that God has His eyes upon us."

Rev. Malone said, "God is coming again; He is very near." The day is approaching," he continued; "be weary of the time; be aware of spiritual death; be concerned."

"This is the time for teachers and preachers to live the life, to serve as examples. There is not time for weeping; no more time for sadness."

"Come, on in-in time," he invited.

Moreover he stated that there is no time for distress and worry. Rev. Malone sees the need for Mother's to tell their daughters and fathers tell their sons that play is the secret of perpetual love, read- or to read is the foundation of life; love is a God (See Alumni, Page 3)

Play Director Cites Reasons For Bad Review

By Janice Smith

David Staples, technical director of the Paul Robeson Little Theater charged the administration, faculty and university staff with apathy in attending the play last week.

In a telephone interview Monday, Staples said only about 10 administrators, faculty and staff member turned up to see the Richard B. Harrison Players' presentation of the musical, "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," during its six-day presentation.

On the other hand, Staples said the attendance of students had been much better. "How can we possibly blame students, who are forced to go, when the teachers who force them, don't go themselves?" he asked in commenting on attitudes toward the arts.

"It was a good production, as good as they would have seen in New York," he said.

Staples said he realized that many activities were going on during the week such as meetings and Coronation, but he added, "There were several nights when they could have come."

"They can't say there wasn't publicity; they were notified long in advance that it was being held," he continued.

During the week, Staples said that persons from other schools and universities in the city came to view the long play with a representative number of A&T students, and estimated that the total attendance over the six-day period ranged from between 600 to 700.

He said that it was evident what the University is doing in areas such as engineering and business, but he questioned what the University was doing in the arts.

"We are wondering where the administrators were, the educators; they are supposed to set the example," he said.

And later he added that the students see the same University personnel who don't show up for cultural activities at ball games or somewhere partying.

Staples commented on the review that was given of the musical in the Greensboro Daily News. He said that one of the biggest reasons why the review said the play was a disaster was because of the sound problem. He said the theater had tried for six weeks to get a pianist, a percussionist and a trumpeter.

"We did get a percussionist, but we couldn't find the other two. We even offered pay," he said.

He explained that the singers had to go on with a recording in the background. Staples added that reviewer from the Daily News called back and told them that he had received feedback from persons who saw the production and who felt that it was not "disastrous."

Emphatically, Staples asked, "How can they (administrators, faculty and staff) explain to four talented people why they were not there to support them?"

He called on University personnel to give the theater cast feedback as to why they failed to show, either by writing or calling Extension 7852.

Three Floats Receive Top Honors In Parade

Out of 15 floats that streamed down Laurel, Market Street, Murrow Blvd., Lindsay Street to the War Memorial Stadium, Omega Psi Phi, Inc., the School of Agriculture and the Esquire Fraternity came out with top honors.

The prize for the most beautiful float went to Omega Psi Phi Inc. The most unique award went to the School of Agriculture and the Esquires took the award for the best interpretation of the theme.

The winners will receive a plaque as their award. The judges for the contest were chosen from the Homecoming Committee. They were chosen to represent the faculty, alumni and the student body.

The floats were judged on originality, general appeal and adherence to the theme, which was "More Power Through, Unity, Dignity and Struggle: Harambee." The technical aspects that the judges took into consideration were that the float be completed and stay together for the parade.

The Omega Psi Phi float was decorated in purple and gold, the colors of the fraternity. The Que queen was sitting under the horse shoe, the fraternity emblem. The School of Agriculture float had as its theme "The Changing Times." The float had a clock that turned around. The Esquire float had a large star in its rear with the heads of a Black man and woman. At the front of the star, it had the word "Unity."

Did You Vote?

For several years now, the issue of co-ed visitation has been hanging in the air, but by tonight there will be a definite answer given by the student body themselves—hopefully.

It has been almost seven months (inclusive of the summer) since the Faculty Forum "adopted co-ed visitation in principle" back in February.

At that time it was decided that Chancellor Lewis C. Dowdy should appoint a committee to reconcile the differences between the original proposal that was drawn up and the modified proposal which was submitted to the faculty extending the hours of the original proposal.

During that February meeting, a motion was carried to present the proposal to the student body after the Chancellor's committee had ironed out the wrinkles. So, there it is, a brief history up to the present of efforts to get co-ed visitation instituted on this campus. Thus, the issue has been passed off to the students, the persons who will be most affected by the decisions that they make. Within the last two weeks, Student Government Association officials and dormitory officers have conducted rap sessions on the proposed policy.

Students were allowed to ask questions and talk about policy implications. Copies of the policy have been made available to anyone desiring them and also to persons who were not particularly concerned about co-ed visitation but just happened to latch on to copy of the policy as it was circulated.

And unlike some other elections, time and distance should not have been a deterrent to voter turnout since we had two days to vote and only a few feet walk to the lobby and cast the ballot.

While waiting to see the outcome of the election, the important fact will not be whether we passed or failed co-ed visitation; the most important matter is whether we voted or didn't vote.

The President's Choice

By Rosie A. Stevens

The President's choice of a person to fill the office of Vice President was a very good strategic move in the way of rebuilding his administration's credibility. The person chosen, Rep. Gerald Ford is very certain to pass the House and Senate with more than a simple majority of the votes required by the 26th amendment.

It is admitted by most that Ford is well liked by both Republicans and Democrats; and that he is member of congress is also a plus factor in the situation. Under the circumstances, then as one congressman put it, there would be no one who would dare to play partisan politics. At the same time, the President is still caught in the Watergate issue as far as the tapes are concerned. The U.S. Court of Appeals has ruled that the President is under the ruling of court, contrary to his contention that co-equal branches of government may not restrain the action of the other branches of government.

The court also ruled that the principle of executive privilege did not hold because there was no provision for it in the constitution. It represented a legal defeat for the President which was significant, but the battle is not yet over, seemingly, because Mr. Nixon has said that he will abide by any definitive ruling. The emphasis here is on definitive.

One wonders what the consequences will be if the case reaches the Supreme Court. It is also to be wondered what would be the case if the tapes were actually heard. One wonders if they would actually reveal information which would lead to the impeachment of the President.

At the same time, there is enough evidence against the President to impeach him anyway, one writer has pointed out. At the very least, the evidence points to a pattern of negligence. If he didn't know what was going on, that is no excuse. He should have known.

In any case, the selection of Ford was a strategic move that can only be considered a plus factor for the President in the trail of dishonor of Watergate.

Will Blacks Support An Anti-Black Cause?

An analysis I did in the August 31, '73, edition of The Register has become relevant to our times even sooner than I had anticipated. The war in the so-called Middle East has taken the exact route that I outlined in that article, so that the next important issue will become if we Blacks in America will support an ANTI-BLACK cause in the name of being an American citizen.

Yes, once again the glaring contradictions between being an American and being a Black man have forced an opportunity of decision upon us. We, as Black people, will either sacrifice being Black or sacrifice being Americans. America has issued her word of support for Israel, so our responsibility to ourselves becomes understanding the politics of the Israel that America supports.

First of all, there is the Israeli support of Governments that have professed to be against the freedom of Black people. Any time South Africa needs an ally more than just words, she can always depend on USA and Israel. This is probably because they all had similar immoral beginnings. The USA had to annihilate an entire nation of Indians in order to be born. South Africa had to repress a nation of Black people. And Israel had to displace hundreds of thousands of Palestinian people. So that all these white nations were born from the blood of another people. Their relationship and commitments, however, go far beyond their similarities of birth. So strong is the issue of Israeli's support of South Africa, that the Black nations of Africa that have taken sides in the war are 100% anti-Israel.

The military cooperation between the two countries is also a very functional reality. According to a Jewish Telegraphic Agency report of January 20, 1970:

"The South African Government has begun to organize the export of tanks to Israel marking a 'new stage of their cooperation.' The South African tank is a sixty-five ton giant 'armed with a heavy gun and designed according to the model of the British new tank'."

But we don't have to focus solely on our African brothers to find examples of Israeli racism.

In the fall of 1969, forty Blacks from America (Chicago) made their way to Israel by way of Liberia. Since Israel is supposedly open as home to all Jews, there was some confusion as to what to do since these Blacks professed to being Jewish. The Blacks were allowed to stay while the issue was decided. And the issue was decided suddenly and soon when the number of Blacks swelled to four hundred. After all 400 of us, even for three million Jews, are too many and, just as being an American can't override the fact of being Black, being a Jew became secondary to being Black and thus the Blacks were expelled from Israel. As one Jewish official put it, "They are not Jewish, thus they have no claim to Israel." Too bad they couldn't all sing and dance like

Sammy Davis, Jr.

The U.S. is once again trying to reduce the war to a level of Russian support for Arabic nations; therefore, the U.S. must enter to offset the Russian support. Well if that's the case then in terms of our interest, Russia is on the right side. We cannot afford to become so anti-communist or anti anything to the extent that we become anti-us. We helped fight Indians, Koreans, Vietnamese and whoever else America fought. Will we fight us?

Israel was not established with the interest of Black people in mind, yet she quickly lined up in opposition to Black aspirations for liberation and self-determination. The decision amounts to America or your people, and I must go with my people.

Late Mail

Editor of The Register

"I received my letter informing me of a very important meeting late," one of the most heard words on campus by the students and faculty.

Why have a post office on campus? It is just a place for you to place mail to go off campus and the mail for on campus to collect dust? If so, why not, install more mailbox containers and get the employees in the campus post office out and help to clean - up this campus.

I was to attend a very important meeting on Thursday, September 20, 1973, and I received the letter on Wednesday September 26, 1973, and my correct address was on the letter. Nearly, a week later, I received the letter.

I want to restate the statement again, "Why have a post office on campus that is so inadequate with the mail?"

The above, may be the reason that students don't attend meetings. Not because they are not interested and concerned about the problems on campus. It may be and probably is with the problems that occur with the handling of several hundreds (not thousands) a week.

Here is some advice: If you are going to mail a letter from your dormitory or anywhere else on campus, you better mail it, two weeks in advance, for it to be delivered on time.

Give Credit

Editor of The Register:

Published in the Greensboro Daily News, Tuesday, October 9, 1973, was a so-called play review of "Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," by Joe Knox entitled A&T Production 2-Act 'Disaster.'

Granted the play by most of the University students was rated as 'tired' and uninteresting, I feel that Knox did not give credit where it was due. In fact he managed very well to knock down and destroy any and all positive aspects of the production.

Instead of simply commenting of the disadvantages presented by the small theater and other technical difficulties, Knox obviously used them as a weapon against the Harrison players.

Even the talents of these participants were never fully accredited but just barely mentioned and then dismissed by negative comment. True the production was not perfect nor was it the players' best, but I feel that an honest and complete effort was put forth by them plus a lot of hard work and they should be given their due praise.

Editor of The Register:

After, having been a spectator at both the Coronation of Miss A&T and at the Homecoming parade, I have concluded that Black people never start on time. Both the Coronation and parade were very beautiful except for the unexplained delays.

All of my life I have heard that Black people never start on time; and I am sure that most of you have heard the same thing and experienced it many times.

During my two years here at A&T, I have found out that many, although not all, programs are late in starting. What is the reason for their tardiness?

I feel that, if the audience can make it to the different activities on time, then why can the participants not be there on time also? If there is a valid excuse for the delay in starting the program, then the person in charge of the program should have the decency enough to inform the audience of the delay, the length of the delay, and maybe even the reason for the delay. It is simply a matter of courtesy.

Sincerely yours,
Jerry B. Wilson

Truthful Answers

Editor of the Register:

The nature of this paper (The Register) is such that it is a potential weapon through which we, the student body, may critically analyze this university and, if necessary, launch written critical campaigns against instances of inefficiency on this campus.

If this paper is to realize its full potential, I think it would be wise if its reporters would seek to avoid cursory coverage of their topic areas and instead, seek real, substantive, concrete, answers to their inquiries.

For instance, the radio station (has been off the air for some time now. When it went off the air last spring, the student body was told that it would be

Judging Floats

Editor of The Register:

I have a whole lot of questions concerning the Homecoming parade, dealing with the floats.

First of all I am a Kappa and I would like to know who were the judges and how where they chosen. I have been at A&T for four homecomings, and for three years I thought we had a dynamite float and for three years we didn't even place.

Next year, again, I hope we will have a float; but, before then, I would like to know what are the judges looking for, I am sure other people who designed their own floats and worked on their own floats feel the same way.

After the first two years, we came to think that it's a jinx; but everyone I've talked to has wondered the same thing. Either the judges were blind or the judging was fixed. If it was, we really don't appreciate it.

Albert Atkins

returning to the air with full coverage by fall semester. At the beginning of this semester, we were promised its return by early September, then early October, now it's promised at some indefinite date with only limited campus coverage to be provided until another indefinite date.

When will WANT be back on the air with full campus coverage? We deserve truthful answers.

The Register is the collective voice of the student body. Individually we, as students, will find it difficult if not impossible to put proper pressure on those persons responsible for the inefficient operation of our radio station. I think it significant to note that recently the program director has resigned, that students are being back to when they are told that the station will be on the air soon, and that the newspaper has the editorial muscle and the informative "know how" to put this issue in its proper light.

High stepping group marches through the streets in A&T's Homecoming parade

'New Birth' Electrifies Crowd, Doing It Until It's Time To Go

By Patricia Everett

"New Birth" was performed Saturday night before a capacity-packed crowd in Moore Gymnasium. The performance brought the Homecoming social festivities to an exciting end.

Backstage, before their show, the members of the group relaxed in one of the offices that had been temporarily converted into a dressing room, where various sub-groups participated in private conversations that were occasionally accented with unexpected laughter.

Melvin Wilson and Londee Loren, two of the leading vocalists, departed from their conversation for an interview. Wilson expressed hopes of venturing into other areas in the field of music after he reaches his peak in the area of singing. He explained the ideas and feelings the group tries to express in their music by saying, "More people need to come together and be one accord. They need to socialize more, party more, when it's time to party—and really get along. I believe this is the feeling we try to express, a happy thing, rather than a high performance thing."

The petite Londee Loren explained her musical expressions by commenting, "I'm just trying to see what I can do by using my vocal chords. My thing is trying to see what my capabilities are as far as singing."

At showtime the "New Birth" bounced on stage and began their performance with "It's Impossible"; then they sang other well-known party tunes such as "Got to Get a Knutt" "Until It's Time to Go" and "I Can Understand It."

The crowd responded enthusiastically to the music. As the show ended, members of the group entered the lobby of their dressing room and were greeted with a fragile sound of applause, puffing from the exhaustion of their performances, and sweating to the extent that their hair was dripping with sweat.

They smiled in acknowledgment—then headed for the dressing room—as the sounds of the excited crowd which was stomping rhythmically to its own musical sound of "Par-ty...Par-ty..." drifted into the warm silence of the backstage lobby.

Black Magazine Aimed Toward Aiding Young Black Businessmen

What do you need to start a successful business venture? It might boil down to $35.00 and a good idea, if you talk with energetic Earl Gill, publisher of "Black Business Awareness."

A brash young man who is going places, Gill recalls with a smile how his glossy magazine has zoomed to a circulation of 10 to 25 thousand per issue.

"This thing has turned into a monster," said Gill, in an interview last week. "I never imagined it would take on like this."

"Black Business Awareness," according to the founder, is meant to be a consumer magazine.

Featuring shiny covers and pictures of celebrities who visit this area, the magazine also offers a pretty complete directory of Black owned and operated businesses, feature articles on Blacks who are making it in the business world, and consumer tips from federal and state agencies, and even articles by North Carolina Congressmen.

"It seems like I have always wanted to do something in sales and communities," said Gill. Although born in Robeson County, he grew up in Greensboro with an uncle, late lovable Black disc jockey, "Jam-a-Ditty."

Young Gill was at his uncle's elbow when he was calling on customers for his radio station. He was hooked on sales from

Masters Degree Not Offered In Economics

By Alice Mae Britt

A masters degree is not being offered yet in economics, says Dean Quiester Craig.

Dean Craig gave two reasons for the department's not offering a masters degree in economics. Thus far, all the staff, from necessity, had to be used for undergraduate purposes. The demands placed on them are great at the present time. Dean Craig says that he is also having a problem securing more staff members, not only in quantity, but in competency, too. Today, finding people with the proper credentials and qualities, who have a dedicated mind to get involved with others, is a difficulty, he said.

He hopes, within the next two years, that a masters degree will be offered in economics and business administration. Dean Craig would like to note that the Economics Department has more doctorates than any other department. Right now, his goal as dean is to make all the programs being offered much better. Now, he is in the process of developing modifications of present programs. The dean feels that these steps will make them more relevant for the students. He is also working to change the major core to satisfy requirements for accreditation.

Dean Craig wants to add majors in finance and banking and marketing in the future. These two areas will be provided as majors to act as options to prepare students for related careers. They will also serve as alternatives to the Business Administration degree.

Student NEA Will Host Fall Cluster Meeting

The James B. Dudley Chapter of the Student National Education Association (SNEA) will host the Fall Cluster meeting for the Student North Carolina Association of Educators (SNCAE) on Sunday, October 21, at 3:00 p.m. in the Memorial Student Union Ballroom here on campus.

The SNCAE is composed of seven clusters; A&T is in cluster 4, along with Greensboro College, UNC-G, Elon College and Bennett. Lloyd R. Stiles, a senior English Education major at A&T, is cluster coordinator for the SNCAE and president of the James B. Dudley Chapter of SNEA.

The principal purpose of the cluster meeting is to stimulate thought and discussion about the purposes of education and about the influence of changing viewpoints in it.

The cluster meeting program will consist of a forum-type presentation by UNC-G, Elon College, Greensboro College and A&T. "Student Rights and Responsibilities; Certification;" "The Open School;" "Competency-based Teacher Education" will be openly discussed.

13-College Curriculum Provides Enrichments

By Mary Cropps

The 13-college curriculum program has been in effect at A&T for seven years. It is a general education program designed for freshmen and sophomores. According to J. A. Bennett, the program's administrator, it involves innovative student-centered teaching methods, leaning heavily on student input and student participation.

Bennett continued by saying that the program has created its own content material and teaching methods. Over the years it has provided counseling for students and has sponsored cultural enrichment activities. The activities include attendance at stage productions, travel and other activities of cultural interest.

The program involves 36 colleges that are engaged in undergraduate studies. It also includes six colleges with graduate programs at the master's level and two universities that provide doctoral programs for faculty members. The 13-college curriculum program encompasses states from Pennsylvania to Oklahoma to Florida.

Hawks Give Rough Present To A&T

By Blannie E. Bowen

Maryland-Eastern Shore gave a crowd of 18,900 at A&T's Homecoming a rough present to come home to as the Hawks defeated the Aggies 22-15.

Maryland quarterback Charles Boston passed for a nine-yard touchdown to Steven Watts mid-way through the third period to seal the Hawk victory.

A&T tried to rally on several occasions late in the fourth period, but three key interceptions proved to be the Aggies' downfall.

Mike Royale intercepted two Aggie passes, the first at the Maryland goal-line. Len Reliford passed the ball into a crowd of three Hawks and Royale grabbed the ball and returned it for 45 yards. Ken Lipkins intercepted another A&T pass with 5:45 remaining in the game.

The Aggies had possession of the ball via a John Hampton interception of a Boston pass but with Paul McKibbins and Reliford alternating at the A&T quarterback slot. McKibbins threw a desperation pass right into Lipkins' arms with the Aggie fans looking on in disbelief of their team's performance.

Maryland was first to score when Stanley Perry booted a 33 yard fieldgoal with 9:55 left in the first period.

A 44-yard Al Holland punt resulted in a safety for A&T when Hampton batted a pass when the ball was carried into the endzone by the punt returner.

Boston hit on nine of 21 pass attempts for one touchdown, but he narrowly missed a second one (See Hopes, Page 7)

Welfare Rolls Increase; Reform Debates Go On

WASHINGTON, D.C. While a Federal task force absorbed itself in almost three years of debate over welfare reform, welfare rolls increased from 3.7 million persons to 14.8 and the program's cost rose from $6.5 billion to $18 billion per year.

Almost everyone agrees, including recipients, that existing management efforts are inequitable, wasteful, and impractical. Obviously, the task force is developing a new welfare strategy to effectively aid the nation's poor.

The task force, from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, produced a confidential 150-page report which takes a broad-side look at the existing system and contends that income maintenance should be "less grudgingly available" since many of the poor are poor through no fault of their own.

A random sampling among HEW officials shows that the prevailing feeling is that a system of income maintenance grants — administered by states in conjunction with state programs to find employment for those who are employable — would be the best approach toward helping the poor.

A critical disagreement with welfare reform as it was originally conceived, was its guarantee of an income to recipients without requiring them to work. The HEW report says it found no evidence to support such a requirement. In fact, it added, such employment might have an adverse effect on some family heads who have a strong work motivation.

The report adds that the problem faced by most able-bodied welfare recipients is low pay, or employment that is not steady. Then too, once employed many would stand to lose numerous medical care housing supplements and food stamps.

Registrar Must Get Class Cards Before A Course Can Be Dropped

By Cynthia Shipley

A memorandum has been issued by Rudolph Artis, director of Registration and Records, concerning course and University withdrawal.

For the Fall semester 1973, course cards were issued, as a part of registration, for officially enrolling students in each course. The sets of cards were delivered to each department prior to the University wide Drop-Add days. These cards were a check for the Computer Print Out Roster and the enrollment for each class should reflect the class cards.

Turning in these class cards to the Office of Registration and Records is a first requirement for dropping a particular course. This is also true in cases where students are withdrawing from the University. After turning in the cards, they are returned to the Computer Center, and the names are dropped from a subsequent roster printouts for the semester.

An important factor is that the names of these students will not appear on the final grade roster, meaning there will be less chance for a student to get an "F", when he or she has withdrawn from the University or has dropped a particular course, Dr. Artis said.

Artis said he hopes that this will simplify the Drop-Add Process, and that he looks forward to discontinuing the use of the 'Change of Schedule Form' after this semester.

away from Tom Samuels at the start of the second period.

The Boston to Samuels combination did manage to complete a 64 pass play that led to the first Hawk touchdown. Boston rushed twice after the pass play and Maryland led the Aggies 9-2 with 7:13 left in the second period.

Reliford put the Aggies on the board when he ran three yards for the first A&T touchdown. Dwight Nettles added the P.A.T. and 13 seconds in the first half.

With the crowd cheering and a 9-9 tie existing, the bottom fell out for A&T. Nettles booted the kick-off out-of-bounds and when he kicked-off from his 35-yard line this time, Royale raced 79 yards for a touchdown.

McKibbins passed to Artis Stanfield for a 14 yard touchdown with 2:37 left in the third period to complete the A&T scoring. The Aggies had numerous scoring threats topped by mistakes in the fourth period.

Maryland is now 2-3 over-all and 1-2 in the MEAC. The loss may have cost the Aggies the MEAC crown because their record dipped to 3-2-1 over-all and 0-1-1 in the MEAC.

TED MOODY IS LEARNING HOW TO FLY

"He's a classy guy. Always went all-out." These are the words of one of the Dartmouth football coaching staff about Ted Moody, a former star linebacker. Ted graduated from Dartmouth College in '72 with a degree in Economics and a mission in mind... to be a pilot... A Naval Aviator.

Now Ted Moody is going all out again. This time in Pensacola, Florida as a Naval Aviation Officer Candidate. He is finding out what it takes to be a Naval Aviator. He's finding it takes a lot of classroom work and long hours studying. It takes a lot of work on PT fields and obstacle courses. It takes special training like the parachute slide and the land survival mission in which you must hunt your own food and erect your own shelter. It takes a lot of time in a cockpit and even some old fashioned close order drill. And it takes a lot more. But, most of all, it takes the right kind of man.

No, you don't have to play football to be a Naval Aviator, but you do have to have a college degree and a lot of drive. And, when the time comes for you to wear your "Navy Wings of Gold" you will know what it takes. It takes your best!
