To The Advisory Budget Commission

Chancellor Presents Requests

By Rosie A. Stevens

The Chancellor presented capital improvement requests for the 1975-77 biennium to the North Carolina State Advisory Budget Commission Thursday morning.

The top five requests for the biennium are in order:
1. Social building, a female dormitory, a new gymnasium, an adult education and community services building, improvements for the natural science building, the renovation of the home management house and Murphy Hall, and the tennis courts.
2. The construction of the tunnel. Dr. Dowdy stressed that the construction of the tunnel is necessary in order for A&T to continue to keep pace with changing trends.
3. Final inspection of the walk-through tunnel for steam lines under East Market Street has taken place, and the contractor is now correcting deficiencies in the construction of the tunnel.
4. Architectural plans are in various stages of development, and revision for the gymnasium and the construction of the home management house and Murphy Hall, and the tennis courts.

The proposed list of 26 items totaled $22.6 million for capital improvements for the upcoming two-year period.

The status of current capital improvement projects was also reported during the meeting.

Items that have been accepted or completed include:
- The construction of the tunnel.
- Architectural plans are in various stages of development.
- The renovation of Price Hall and Murphy Hall, and the tennis courts.

To continue to keep pace with changing trends.

Ronald Alston Captures Audience

With His Magnificent Physique

By Phyllis A. Mittman

"Look at those bowed legs! Wow, he's got a hairy chest!" These are only a few of the comments that were heard from the audience as the nine contestants modeled their swim wear in Tuesday's Mr. Personality pageant.

The top five requests for the 1975-77 biennium are in order. The first phase of renovations at Scott Hall was completed in the Treasurer's budget outlay of $67 million.

In addition to the five top priorities, the second phase of renovation of Scott Hall was presented as number seven on the list with an administration building, a student dormitory, and an adult education and community services building being designated on the list.

The proposed list of 26 items totaled $22.6 million for capital improvements for the upcoming two-year period.

The status of current capital improvement projects was also reported during the meeting.

Items that have been accepted or completed include:
- The construction of the tunnel.
- Architectural plans are in various stages of development, and revision for the gymnasium facility, the natural science building, the renovation of the home management house and Murphy Hall, and the tennis courts.

African Heritage Center To Start Collection On Black Experience

By Charlie Lasitter

A&T’s African Heritage Center, located on Nnoch Street beside Gibbs Hall, is trying to start a collection of rare books and documents relevant to the Black experience. Mrs. Mattye Reed, custodian of the Center, is supervising the building of the collection and already has a number of artifacts on display.

Some of the books in the collection are an original copy of Paul Lawrence Dunbar’s collection of poems “When Malindy Sings”, a Bible over 400 years old, and original copy of the “Little Black Sambo” story, and a 2-year report on North Carolina’s public educational institutions in the years 1896-98 by the N.C. Superintendent of Public Instruction which contains some revealing facts about A&T.

Also in the collection are three newspaper clippings dealing with disturbances at Dudley High School. A Piece of music entitled “The Calico Man”, and three balls of yarn drawn up at North Carolina slave auctions.

All the items in the collection are authentic originals and most are permanent display in the center. A few of the artifacts are too fragile for display; however, the entire collection is available for scholarly reference. Though it is growing at the moment, the collection is still relatively small.

The Center does not receive funds from the university for purchasing rare artifacts. The collection consists of gifts and contribution.

Mrs. Reed requests contributions from any people in the Greensboro community who may possess original historic books or documents pertaining to Black people.

The African Heritage Center is open to visitors Tuesday through Friday from 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

Administrator Remembers Riot

Which Swept Campuses In 1969

By Benjamin Forbes

During the 1969’s, riots swept across many of the nation’s college campuses. A&T was not without its share of violence.

In May of 1969, a wave of violence swept across the campus, bringing in the city police and the National Guard.

Articles appearing in the 1969 October issue of the A&T Register indicated that the disturbances occurred at A&T were directly related to the troubles being experienced at Dudley High School.

Claude Barnes, a student at Dudley, had been campaigning for president of the student government. Because Barnes was a member of the “Youth for the Unity of Black Students” and labeled a “trouble maker”, his name was taken from the voting ballot. However, Barnes received 600 votes by means of write-in votes, but he was not given the position.

Barnes also started a group called the “Dudley Student Action Committee” which stressed the problems at Dudley. When no action was taken on the problems, students began to picket. However the students were arrested and allegedly beaten.

According to Dr. Jesse E. Marshall, chancellor of Student Affairs, the high school students felt that A&T could be used as a base for its activities.

Marshall recalled that the trouble really started when students on campus heard that a group of whites were burning some books on Deseray Avenue. He added that, afterwards students began to stone cars on Dudley Street. When police were called in, more trouble started. Later the National Guard were called in by the Governor to evacuate the campus.

In the 1969 October 10 issue of the Register, it was stated that tear gas was used to clear the dormitories of students. It was also stated that a male student in Scott Hall was taken a shower on second floor when he heard a fellow student shout, “The guards are coming!” The young man then jumped from a window on second floor and escaped with the aid of students below.

In the 1969 October 10 issue of the Register, it was stated that 200 students were loaded onto buses and carried downtown to police headquarters for fingerprinting even though they had not been charged with a crime.

Also it was reported that the National Guards were given a pass key to rooms of the buildings, but many of the dorm locks were shut off. One witness stated that he saw some of the guardsmen stuffing different items under their shirts and jackets.

After the disturbance, it was indicated that over $50,000 in damages were reported.

As a result of the riot, student enrollment decreased because parents felt uncomfortable about sending their children to A&T. Also many whites stopped coming to events on campus.

Now that the riot has almost been forgotten, things have returned to normal.

A&T Prefers Not To Contract Private Janitorial Service

By Charlie Lassiter

A&T registered a late arrival and not available for comment. However, sources have reported that A&T makes and designs his own clothes, which was quite evident when he appeared on stage with a hooded crush velvet, midriff top to match his baby blue swimming trunks and crushed velvet flaps that moved in front and back.

All in all, the pageant was quite enjoyable for contestants and audience. Besides being entertained by the contestants and the hilarious audience itself, the pageant provided the beautiful voices of Ronald Knight singing “We’ve Only Just Begun”; Eddie Bines doing “Impossible Dream” and a quartet consisting of Cheryl Johnson, Kathy McAfee, Ronald Knight and Eddie Bines doing the National Black Athlete. Their accompanist was Geraldine Gill.

This was the first Mr. A&T Pageant and although not well received by the campus, especially the male portion, it was unique trip into the different worlds that only A&T can afford.

"Outstanding Participation," "well attended," "well organized," "North Carolina A&T does a wonderful job." These were some of the feelings of the 150 representatives of industries and governmental agencies that were here interviewing and offering their services to the students at A&T.

The majority of people that took time out of their busy schedule to talk to these public relations leaders, were told that the white corporate structure in this country are not recruiting Black Studies Students. The corporate power that is in the control of the economical off-and-on switch are looking for qualified students in these fields engineering, in the areas of mechanical, electrical and chemical, the economy is a very tight field.

People are constantly seeking and paying top dollars for qualified accountants. Chemistry and biological researchers are also in the top ten list. Coming up fast in the ranks and securing their places are computer operation and communications.

Important Student Body Meeting

Wednesday Night Oct. 2 in Harrison Auditorium at 7 p.m.
Be There
Towing Challenged

The question of reasonable towing and storage fees was at last challenged; and, thank God, it was not a student that did so.

After two days of responses to the “Incident report” that appeared in The A&T Register, September 24, 1974, it became clear that the emphasis was not one of “to tow or not to tow” but one of who should be towed;
It also become an issue of what should appear in a student new paper, and what should not.
Less stop for just one minute and see what could have happened. There had been “Mr. Everyday Student.” It is Friday night September 24, 1974, the night of the Sports Hall of Fame Banquet, and “Mr. Everyday Student” was working for the Food Service Department and helping with the banquet.

The student is transporting goods that are necessary for the successful outcome of the affair. He parks on the side walk of the Union and goes inside.
Less than an hour before banquet time, the director finds that he doesn’t have the number of dishes needed to serve his guest.

He sends “Mr. Everyday Student” out to retrieve the needed plates.

The student apparently wants to help and gets out of the car. From the building and finds that his car is going to be towed away. Knowing that the guest will be arriving; soon he must have the plates, there is no time to explain.

The student attempts to enter his car the security officer is struck! There is a struggle and the student is handcuffed and taken to jail. What would happen to the student?
First of all, whatever happens to Mr. Every Day Student should happen within the university and or within the university student court system and not “downtown.”

Secondly, one is taught, as a student editor, that one should print what is of interest to the student body and not “downtown.”

The security officers should have known that there was involved.

There are many lessons to be learned from this embarrassing and disappointing incident:
1. That you should think before you tow.
2. You should think before striking; also you should think whom; you are striking.
3. That editors should (like many did in the Watergate) find the truth no matter where it leads and when in the best interest of most of the people, print the truth.

All leading editorials are written by the editor of THE A&T REGISTER. Such editorials will not necessarily carry a byline and will not reflect the opinions of the University or the University staff. Staff members are free to write dissenting opinions.

Token Representation?

By Rosie A. Stevens

Now about these token students, including, at one time or the other the writer, on various student-faculty committees throughout the university, who represent the student body or, at least, who are given such an impossible function. What about them?

Well, for one thing, they don’t really represent the student body, through no fault of theirs. Why don’t they represent the student body?

One explanation for this lack of representation lies in sheer numbers. To explore this matter further, a contrasting example may be given.

Members of the faculty and administration usually dominate committees in terms of numbers. They have a more effective voice because not only are they a majority of the committee, but because each faculty committee member represents a much smaller number of faculty. This means that the person is in a much better position to be held responsible for representing his or her colleagues, especially by those colleagues.

With the student body, and with the student “representative,” this is not the case, unless representation is done on a smaller student-representative basis. For example, one could consider departments or dormitories. If one does this, then the student would not have to face problems of being a representative of a consensus of a total body on a given issue. The person would only have to face other inequities in the student-faculty power arena.

The situation is absurd the way it exists. The chancellor is able to appoint committees to represent him, to direct others outside the university to consider signatures other than his to be valid authority. Why can’t the same respect and consensus be given to the SGA president and committee appointments if he were to decide to appoint someone to represent him in that respect? Why must someone else come up with the brilliant idea that this person or that person represents this or that interest and to make appointments according to such criteria?

By the time the person attends all of these meetings, then he has no time for classes. One should think before striking; also you should think whom; you are striking.

Department ‘Cheated’

Editor Of The Register

The Political Science Department here at A&T State University is in a quandary. The faculty has been reduced to four but there has been an increase in political science majors to twelve and forty. This does not include those persons outside of the department who have to take required political science papers in their respective majors.

The University of North Carolina State Board of Higher Education states that for every six sessions, there is to be an instructor. Using this statistic the Political Science Department is entitled to fifteen instructors and not the minute number of four. Many other departments on this campus are overstaffed, due partially to grants, but we pay no attention to them. What is the truth, that can only be provided with a sufficient number of instructors. We feel that we are being cheated.

Last year our department lost two instructors and gained only one. This is a grave injustice not only to the students but to the small faculty. The university can not deny the fact that the department is severely understaffed.

Speaking from a writer’s point of view, in 1973, when I entered N.C. A&T State University, the department had about one hundred and fifty majors and four full-time instructors. The following year we grew to ninety-one hundred and eighty majors and the same four instructors.

Last year we grew to two hundred and thirty majors and we gained two part-time instructors and had five instructors. The department, as I see it, is supposed to grow and progress as the university does, but we have not Retracted. What is the significance of a new dining hall and a beautiful landscaped campus when we do not get the vital element we came here for? That element is very simple and easy to understand, a good education which can be provided only by a sufficient number of instructors.

We used to be told that we were understaffed because we were a predominantly Black university. Now that we are just another university in North Carolina, what is the excuse? How can we prepare ourselves to compete with those students of other universities of this nation who have the resources to work with?

Political Science majors are rallying behind this very important issue and hope to make it a campus-wide acknowledged issue. We feel that we are being badly cheated out of a much needed education in this department. If we are not provided with necessary instructors, the university can provide the student with the resources to work with.

Our voice must be heard and heard now for the sake of our education.

Supposedly, the administration wants input from students, but does not, except in rare instances, provide a meaningful structure for such input. In effect, by making the SGA president, or Miss A&T the student representatives, or Rosie Stevens, a student representative, the administration predetermines the kind of input received from students, by a time factor, and by under utilization of resources.
Blackness Produce TV Series

Heritage of Hope is a series of ten 30-minute, color programs created, written and produced by two North Carolina blacks, Evangeline Grant Redding and her brother Gary Grant. With the spiritual as a thread running through and tying together the series, the programs aim at "spiritual and unity through and tying together the threads of African culture." The series also provides an interpretation. Students from A&T will be entering these events also.

The Forensic Association of A&T State University is beginning its second year. It was founded last year with the objective of providing intellectually stimulating activities for students at A&T through Speech Communications experiences such as debates and discussion. At the present several debates are working on the national debate topic which is "Resolved: that the powers of the Presidency should be significantly curtailed." Two teams from A&T will be entering the North Carolina Forensic Association tournament at Catawba College, Salisbury, on October 22.

Representing A&T will be Deborah Brown and Regina Brown, and Niyaana (Koko) Redboy and Joseph Williams. They will compete with students from Davidson College, Appalachian State, N.C. State, UNC-G, and Catawba College. Students will debate in three rounds of debate on both the affirmative and negative sides of the proposition. At this tournament there will also be individual events, competition in Persuasive Speaking, and "oral" interpretation. Students from A&T will be entering these events also.

Any student interested in participating in debating, individual events, or rap sessions is welcome. All students are invited to a meeting which will be held from 12 noon until in Room 227 Crosby Communications Building.

UNC-G To Present Art Exhibit

The Lakeside Studio will present, for one day only, a unique selection of Old Master, Modern Master, and Contemporary prints. The exhibit will take place Tuesday, October 1, 1974, from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Weatherspoon Gallery, University of N.C. at Greensboro. This collection is brought to the public under the auspices of James Tucker, director of the Weatherspoon Gallery.

Local collectors will have a fine opportunity to view this collection of over 1,000 original prints containing works by Durer, Callot, Piranesi, Blake, Renaisan, Tobey, Peeterli, Hayter, Richard Hunt and many others. Also in this collection will be a number of Japanese woodcuts from the Ukiyo-E School along with numerous wood engravings by Henry Wolf which are proofs from the Wolf estate.

Area artists represented are Peter Agostini, Ken Beran, Herb Jackson. All works are available for purchase and range in price from $5.00 to $5,000.00 (total value will be over $50,000).

The Lakeside Studio publishes editions each year by many artists from all parts of the country and all of these prints are in the collections of major museums both in this country and Europe. Editions are printed not only by the Lakeside Studio workshop facilities, but also those of the Landfall Press in Chicago, Fox Graphics in Boston, and Robert Cale's new workshop in Stonington, Connecticut. Each year the Lakeside Studio conducts workshops specializing in printing techniques. This past summer, Jack Lemon, director of the Landfall Press, held his second successful workshop dealing with the techniques of plate lithography.

Also this summer, Jerry Rothman, who teaches at the California State University at Fullerton, held a workshop in ceramics using the facilities available at the studio. The artists worked with clay taken directly from Lake Michigan, built a kiln, and also fired in an open pit. With over fifteen years of experience in the graphic arts, John Wilson, the director of the Lakeside Studio, who will accompany the collection, will be glad to answer questions both historical and technical.

Sports Notebook

The 1974 Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference race goes into full swing this weekend when some of the top teams take to the gridiron.

Two of the biggest games of the year will be played this weekend at Robert Kennedy Stadium in Washington, D.C., South Carolina State College travels to D.C. Friday night to try the Howard Bison.

Grambling College comes to the city Saturday afternoon to take the Bears of Morgan State College to the gridiron. Both of these contests should be filled with the glamour and excitement which has been missing in both of the Aggie games this far.

When Howard and State meet Friday night, this contest could turn into one of the biggest games of the year for both clubs. The Morgan-Grambling game has gotten the attention of most writers, but Friday night game could easily be the best game.

The two clubs come into this contest with identical 2-0 records, but Howard has the more impressive statistics of the two. Howard has scored 61 points in its two games and has gotten a lone touchdown and an extra point for a mere seven points—simply amazing.

State has scored 20 points and has given up eight while attaining an identical 2-0 record. The impressive item about State is the coolness and consistency which the team plays with.

Howard blew everyone out of eight straight games last year and then lost the MEAC title to North Carolina Central on the final day of the season when the Eagles defeated our Aggies, as they seemingly always do.

Speaking of the Aggies, it is about time we discuss the predicament they are now in. Well, when I look at the MEAC race, I see Howard, State, Delaware State, NCCU, Morgan and then the Aggies.

Yes, A&T has hit with the sixth spot along with Maryland-Eastern Shore, both with 0-1 slates. It will take a while before A&T can move up any since the next conference game comes in about three weeks.

Coach Howell has promised some changes will come for the Aggies, and although I appear to be disloyal Aggie at times, I believe you this time, Coach.

** * * *

The Register now has some sinners as well as winners when it comes to predicting football games. Check last Friday's edition and you will find the sinners are Linda, Craig, and Nicie. Deborah and I got lucky and are now winners, for one week at least.

This week looks something like this:
Blannie E. Bowen, FAMU
Deborah Brown, A&T
Nicie Cannon, A&T
Linda Dalton, FAMU
Craig Turner, FAMU

The safest way to predict games is to wait until half of the game is over and then decide. Unfortunately, our deadline is Thursday evening at 5 p.m.

A&T's New Gymnasium Will Seat 7,500 People

By Linda F. Dalton

It is very hopeful that in the near future, there will be a new gymnasium to occupy the space right of the present Moore Gym. The site has been chosen and the construction of a new street is now in progress.

After plans leave Property Control, it will take approximately 60 days to start construction. The new gymnasium will seat around 7,500 people. It is also hopeful that the gym will be in use by 1976.

The gymnasium will have a ceiling height of 22 feet. There will be an amplification system for record player and microphone, basketball backboard, two with retractable, electrical control, floodlights for badminton and volleyball, electrical scoreboard, a clock, and a number of tennis tables.

The swimming pool area will consist of telephone jacks, electrical scoreboard, fiberglass (See Plans, page 8).

Vets And BOSS Are Winners

By Deborah Brown

The Holland Bowl in front of Holland Hall was the scene for very exciting and entertaining action last week. This sport was intramural football.

Many of the fraternities and various other groups have formed football teams to try to win the Flag football championship.

The first game played was between the Vets and the P.R.'s'. Darrel Thompson made the first touchdown which sealed the victory for the Vets.

In the second game, Randy Lovette made the first touchdown for the BOSS which gave them the win over the Buckeyes.

In the next set of games BOSS again scored a victory over the Hell-Raisers with the score of 60.

Wilton Camp of the Vets scored two touchdowns to freeze the Kappas out of their first win.

The Iota vs Omega game proved to be the most exciting, drawing a crowd of 500 or more. Although no one scored a touchdown, the Omegas got 6 points because they had only one yard left for the touchdown.

Walter Camp of the Vets scored two touchdowns to freeze the Kappas out of their first win.

The officials for these games were James "Tick" Priggen, Ernest "Red" Gaskins and William G. Sheffield.

More exciting games are scheduled for the rest of the intramural season.

Players Suspended

Artis Stanfield, Paul McKibbins, Len Reiford, and Darrell Glover were suspended indefinitely from the A&T football team for violations of training regulations.

Internships Are Offered

The General Assembly is offering internships this year for juniors and seniors in the social sciences.

Each internship is worth $1,000 and 12 hours of transfer credit for the student involved.

The internships will be offered for the spring semester of 1975, sponsored by the North Carolina General Assembly and the Department of Politics at North Carolina State University.

Applications are to be filed by October 25, 1974. They may be obtained from the Department of Political Science, or by writing directly to Ms. Lucy Hancock, Acting Director, 201 Tompkins Hall, NCSU, Raleigh, N.C. 27607.

NOTICE

On Saturday at 10:00 a.m: Bennie Glover, SGA president will speak at the 'International Student Retreat'.

This two-day affair, which begins on Friday, September 27, features activities for the University's foreign students.
