Vet School Tops SGA Agenda

By Mary Cropps

During the SGA student body meeting held Thursday evening, Bennie Glover, president, stated he hoped that this would be a progressive semester. Admitting that the SGA had made mistakes, Glover said they learned from their mistakes.

Beginning with the veterinary medicine school issue, Glover pointed out to the large audience the occurrences which had preceded the Board of Governor's proposal to locate the school at North Carolina State in Raleigh. He told them that the team that evaluated A & T and N.C. State had given A & T only 400 points while giving N. C. State over 1000.

Glover stated that the SGA and various other organizations had voiced opposition to the decision but nothing had been accomplished.

Continuing with the vet school issue, the SGA president informed those present that three Black members of the Board of Governors had voted for A & T's acquisition of the school while the remaining Black members had voted against A & T.

The Chairman of the Board gave several reasons as to why A & T did not get the school, Glover said. One reason was that in order to run the school, A & T's budget would be increased and it was felt that the administration could not handle such an increase, whereas N.C. State was accustomed to a large budget.

Glover felt that the students of A & T should rekindle some positive action on the issue and fight to eliminate discriminatory practices in the state.

Citing the SGA's plans, Glover said that they were considering filing a lawsuit. He pointed out that the money for such a suit would have to come from the student body.

Moving on to other issues, the SGA president informed the audience that the board fee may be increased because the cafeteria workers have been placed on the state payroll. Previously the workers had been employed by a private cafeteria service, and they had few fringe benefits.

Although the catering service had made a profit of around $100,000, Glover said the students may still have to bear the cost. Glover did not know where the profit went or why the students should have to pay increased fees.

The coed visitation policy also was discussed at the meeting. Glover said that proposals would be submitted to the administration. He mentioned the possibility of setting up separate dormitories for those who want visitation and those who do not.

Drop-Add Period Will Begin

The University-Wide Drop/Add period is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday, January 22 and end at 4:30 on Thursday, January 23 in Room 109 Crosby Hall. The last day to add a course for the spring semester is Thursday. Also, Thursday is the last day for late registration.

Schedule cards necessary for making schedule changes may be picked up from the lobby of Crosby Hall beginning at 8:30 a.m. on January 22. The validation station will be open from 1:20 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday and from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., including the lunch hour, on Thursday.

Students desiring to make changes in their schedules must bring their validated cashier's receipt and their original validated schedule card with them. In order to add a course, students must go to the appropriate department and obtain a class card for each course to be added to their schedules. The schedule cards must be filled out and all courses must be entered on the cards. The cards will be validated in Room 109 of Crosby Hall.

Students who registered for less than 12 hours and are increasing the number of credit hours must go to the cashier's office for fee assessment before reporting to Crosby Hall for validation.

Students desiring to drop a course must obtain their class cards for the particular course to be dropped from their instructors. Schedule cards must be filled out, leaving off the courses dropped.

Those students who registered for 12 or more hours, but reduced their total number of hours to less than 12, should go to the cashier's office after the credit hour change has been validated in order to receive financial credit. The last day that a student may receive financial credit for credit hour reduction is Thursday.

All seniors who expect to graduate at the end of the spring semester must file application for graduation with the Office of Registration and Records. The deadline for submitting applications is Friday, February 14. The necessary forms can be picked up in the Registrar's Office.

Financial aid this semester is tight. After waiting an hour these students got in the door.

Noted Economist Lectures AT Economics Department

A noted economist from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology said here Tuesday that President Ford's proposed tax relief plan "is a little light."

"The redistribution of income taxes favors the rich," said Dr. Charles Kindleberger who teaches economic history at MIT.

"The only thing that President Ford's plan might do is to help the auto industry by providing some quick money to buy cars."

Kindleberger was a visiting lecturer at A&T State University's Department of Economics. He spent much of the day conferring with students and faculty members.

The MIT professor said it might be better to lower the social security deductions but that many persons are against that move to stimulate the

Students And Teachers Offer Tax Service

For the fifth consecutive year, students and teachers of the Mathematics Department at A&T State University will offer free income tax service for elderly citizens and low income residents of the Greensboro area.

Originally initiated as a class project, the service will be available for state and federal income taxes.

The initial session will be held today from 10:30 am to 2 pm in Room 205 - 206 Merrick Hall and on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursdays throughout the tax period.

Beginning the week of Feb. 3, additional service will be provided on Monday nights from 6:30 to 9 p.m. in Merrick Hall and on Wednesday from 6:30 to 9 p.m. in the Council House at Morningside Homes, 770 Bingham Court.

Miss. T. E. Bradford, teacher and coordinator of the project, said materials for the service are being provided by the Internal Revenue Department of Greensboro through the Teaching Taxes Program.

Persons seeking additional information about the project may contact Miss. Bradford at 379-7822 in Merrick Hall.

connection with the Miss Black North Carolina pageant. He said that a meeting of all campus organizations will be held Wednesday to set up guidelines for the contest.

Linwood Pollard, vice-president of the SGA, brought up the issue of SGA elections. The elections will be held in the latter part of March.

Pollard also pointed out that the student legislature had been having little cooperation from its members. He said that those persons who had not been attending the meetings might be ousted from office if they do not come to the next meeting.

Several students brought up the issue concerning security and the conduct of the security police. There was much discussion from the students concerning coed visitation and the jurisdiction of dormitory counselors.

Glover said that the SGA had received no complaints and to hear from the students was the purpose of the student body meetings.

The last issue discussed at the meeting was the spring show. The students were asked to suggest groups for the show, staying within the budget of $14,000.

Ford Calls For 12 Per Cent Cut

President Ford has called for a $12 billion cut in the amount of 1974 taxes paid by individuals. This would be accomplished by cash rebates of 12 per cent of the 1974 tax payments up to a maximum of $1,000.

"I think that President Ford is smart to get his plan out fast," added Kindleberger, "but it is not clear how he is going to recycle the increased taxes to be levied on energy."

He said that, instead of a new levy on energy products, he would like to see the United States try a plan where oil exporting nations would have to bid on an oil importing license.

"This kind of plan would probably serve to force down oil prices because this would be a sealed bidding," said Kindleberger.

Placing emphasis on the economic operations of the Dutch's early markets, the renowned economist explained the gradual movements of the people toward specialization in various areas of the economy. In turn, this specialization developed and later broadened the national market.

Kindleberger told the Merrick Hall audience that the market system was a de-centralized mechanism which signaled the direction of growth in the economy.

The MIT professor casually admitted during the earlier part of his lecture that he had not visited a lesser developed country, nor will he visit such a country. The economist said his view of economic history was based on an "armchair operation" which enabled him to analyze the problems with an open mind.

 program. The students had a broad range of major areas, from sociology and psychology to electrical engineering.

From the twenty-five Prospective Fellows, some will be chosen to become North Carolina Fellows.

What are North Carolina Fellows?

Well, a start would be to rule out what North Carolina Fellows are not. They are not all male as the term Fellow would imply. Many of the "fellows" are female, with major areas ranging from Business Administration to Electrical Engineering.

Though many people tend to confuse North Carolina Fellows and Presidential Scholars, a Presidential Scholarship is not a prerequisite to becoming a Fellow. At the same time, many Fellows do enter the University as Presidential Scholars. Academic achievement is rated very highly, along with leadership in extracurricular organizations.

The North Carolina Fellows Program was set up to identify potential leaders and to develop leadership skills in those students.

Since its inception in the fall of 1970, a class of Fellows have graduated, and others continue to enter the program.

Express Your Views And Not Yourself

If there is one overwhelming negative by-product of this generation of Blacks being raised during an era of mass demonstration, loud rhetoric, forceful demands, and mass media, it is that questions are no longer asked in order to obtain an answer; instead questions are now asked in order for the inquirer to gain applause, popularity, laughter, or some other reaction that has nothing to do with an answer. Furthermore, the unfortunate thing about it is that we use these tactics (weapons) best against ourselves.

Last night after many months of frustrating efforts, the SGA finally got what it was asking for, a sizable turnout at a student body meeting. But this morning they must at least be asking themselves, "Aren't small crowds at least controllable?" What does 1975 look like for A&T? We can only begin to answer that by looking at the students; and if Ford thinks that he has problems because of the economy, a tape from Bennie Glover of the meeting we had last night would make him feel blessed.

A student, asked a question and without waiting for an answer or to see if there was an answer, leaned over another student to get "five" from still another student for asking that "bad question". Another student stated, in reference to co-ed visitation policies, "We are adults," but she should have added "Who can't even conduct an orderly meeting among ourselves. Still another student wanted to know "If the SGA can't deal with these problems, what is the SGA for?" You should have heard the applause -- which was all that most people heard because very few were interested in the answer. The SGA, while it is a "policy proposing" organization, does not represent the final word in "policy making". And even its ability to propose policies is heavily dependent upon something that they've had to do without, student support. In short, the SGA is the voices, opinions, and desires of the student body. Bennie Glover does not receive Dr. Dowdy's nor the Board of Governors' salary, but he hears all the complaints that the student body should be voicing to them. He cannot get a substantial amount of student support, but he can get all the student criticisms.

The fact remains that, had there been no movie (free) last night, there would have been no students. Most students were coming to their first student body meeting, but you'd thought that some of them showed up at every meeting and were experts at asking all the right questions to all the wrong people and not supporting the "wrong" people when they attempt to get the right answers.

If applause, and laughter were any indication of our ability to enjoy "entertainment", we should have a very rewarding talent show, dances, or year for shows period. But if you're looking for answers rather than applause and publicity, 1975 might represent the beginning of our ends as we continue to "do unto ourselves." And the final applause won't be heard by us either.

Recession Is Causing Problems For Parents As Well As Students

Keith Williams

College students are being hurt by the national economic recession.

Those of us who have apartments or cars need not be burdened with further financial strains.

Many students returned from the holidays only to find out they had been laid off their part-time jobs.

This is really frustrating when the rent is due, not to mention added expenses such as food, clothing or toiletries.

Unless things change soon, record numbers of students will be trying to get dormitory rooms in the fall of 1975.

For those of us who are used to the luxurious apartment life, a return to dorm living would be quite a transition to make.

Not only are things bad for students, but blue collar workers are feeling the pinch also.

Millions of laborers have had their hours cut back or they have been laid off indefinitely. Statistics tend to show that unemployment is associated with a sharp increase in the crime rate.

With the new year just beginning, North Carolina has recorded its sixth bank robbery.

Convenience stores and small markets are also being robbed at alarming rates.

But the real question that arises is should these people be prosecuted as common criminals?

In most cases these crimes can be attributed to physiological needs which means people steal because they are hungry, need clothing or have other family-related financial problems.

Unless the economy gets better we can expect a new type of criminal to invade our society,

Economic Crunch Affects Blacks

By Rosie A. Stevens

The week has been phenomenal in one aspect. Never before have so many students been unable to register before late registration. Never before has late registration been extended until the second week of classes, either; this has not happened in the writer's previous experience.

The lateness of everything signifies an economic crunch. Congress has mounted an effort to supply secondary education with adequate funds, while curtailing post-secondary funds, and rendering these funds almost obsolete on the graduate level. Then, too, the economic crisis has had direct effects upon employment of parents who finance at least partially the student's education.

What does all of this mean for Blacks? There are two effects here.

First, it means that access to higher education will be limited for Blacks. One national policy-maker predicts that economic trends, if continued, would render education a distinct luxury. Since most Blacks are not in the position to afford luxury, this could have dire effects for Blacks.

The inference to be drawn from this is that graduate education, especially in the liberal arts, will be even more limited for Blacks. Some universities have been recently deemphasizing the arts and sciences, which require graduate study to achieve any level of autonomy in the disciplines. Instead, they have promoted business and the professions at the bachelors degree level. It provides training to make a living, but does not permit any level of autonomy.

This trend is also dangerous, dangerous because it does not provide necessary values to fight for freedom. With the growing climate of genetic inferiority pervading the thoughts of some policy makers of the Jensen and Shockley school of thought, a battle of the minds must be waged to combat racism. It is not enough to train a nurse to give a needle. The syringe might contain poison. Neither is it sufficient to train a doctor to treat an illness. What can he or she do to eradicate disease producing poverty? No, the need is for educated rather than trained people to deal with a hostile society.

This is crucial to our survival.

Anyone Can Make A "Foolish" Mistake, But . .

Anyone is capable of making a "foolish" mistake. Then what distinguishes the ordinary person from the "fool"? The difference is that, while anyone can make a foolish mistake, a "fool" consistently makes new or repeats old mistakes. A fool is either incapable of learning from previous mistakes or he chooses to ignore the lessons that he has learned.

An isolated statement relating to a specific event implied that, in the case of this particular incident, "A&T" didn't produce any fools. The statement published in the sports section of the Greensboro Daily News on January 5th read "Business Deal: A&T played here on a doubleheader with Carolina (vs. Utah) Dec. 28. It sold two (2) tickets, turned the balance in. That's $14."

Now, whether the writer for the GDN was attempting to be sarcastic by calling it a "Business Deal", I can't say. But anyone from Aggeland who had gotten "jipped" two weeks before when A&T played on the same card with N.C.State, can only testify that (1) the seemingly lack of support in no way was a reflection on our support for our basketball team, (2) if white people who put the package together are so interested in "Business Deals", then they should treat us more like for exploitation and consumer victims.

Granted, a large number of students had already left Greensboro for the Christmas or two people. And, as the amount of money and the two seven dollar - non-student tickets indicate, the students that were here, weren't about to repeat a "foolish" mistake.

How foolish was the first mistake? Imagine paying $3.50 or $7.00 for a seat only to herded to the ends of the coliseum behind the backboards before or soon after the A&T game ended, depending upon how early or late the white people from N.C.State arrived. Granted all seats were "reserved" but how were the seats reserved? Anyone who was there or who was Black from A&T would think that the N.C. State chapter of the Ku Klux Klan was in charge of issuing out seats.

Our Athletic Department is to be questioned and our students and supporters congratulated for not repeating a "foolish" mistake.

Various Forms Of Aid Can Be Acquired

By Daryl E. Smith

As reported in the January 14 edition of The Register, a lot of students are having considerable difficulty in securing financial aid.

Here are a few hints that might help some people, if they have the time or patience to follow through on trying to rectify their financial difficulties.

If you're not familiar with the Basic Education Opportunity Grant, stop by the financial aid office and ask about their application.

There is a grant titled

Supplementary Educational Opportunity Grants, which primary purposes are for students with "exceptional financial need"; that means students whose family income is less than $9,000.

The average grant is for $670, but there have been many cases where students have received as much as $1500.

There is another grant called the Guaranteed Student Loan program which is available for students whose family income can go as high as $20,000 before being classified as un-eligible.

Some Important Tips In Acquiring Financial Aid

You start at the financial aid office and from there you are shuttled to the proper bank where you might receive as much as $2500, a maximum loan. But usually the loans are for $1200 to $1400. These loans usually carry a seven per cent interest charge, and you'll be obligated to begin payments nine months after graduating from school.

The only drawback to this grant is that some banks tend to frown on minority students and women. To combat these tactics, you can ask about the National Direct Student Loan, which comes straight from the financial aid office; usually the interest charged is only three per cent.

In the past, these loans have benefited freshmen and low income students who have been rejected by loan offices at banking institutions.

The College Work Study program is another avenue to which students may apply.

If the Financial Aid Office is overflowed, write to your state's Department of Education for details.

One area in which help is available and students very seldom contact is their home town clubs or churches. Such business organizations like the Kiwanis, Rotary, Elks, Lion's Clubs and some PTA's can be very helpful.

Another route to try is to ask your parents about scholarships for children of company employees.

A little publicized Social Security program provides a monthly income for students whose mother or father is deceased or receives benefits for disability or they are retired.

A lot of students turn away from the ROTC program, but a solid financial foundation is available. If none of these suggestions fits into your individual program, then go to any library and look for books listing grants given to students under a particular race, nationality, or the particular vocation that you're interested in.

Scholarships, Fellowships and Loans list available cash that is categorized according to your major.

The National Register of Scholarships and Fellowships and the Annual Registry of Grant Support list many financial aid programs, including thousands of financial aid programs, with deadlines and detailed eligibility requirements.

If you're able to locate these publications, don't use any book that has been published before 1972; foundation grants change dramatically through the years.

One of the most up-to-date listings of financial aid is in a pamphlet called "Need a Lift?" which only costs $.50. Forward your $50 to the American Legion Educational and Scholarship Program, Indianapolis, In. 46206.

For those students who can invest $40, you can receive services from the Scholarship Search Corporation.

This company is the only one of its kind in the country that feeds your application into a computer stocked with data on 250,000 scholarships.

The Scholarship Search

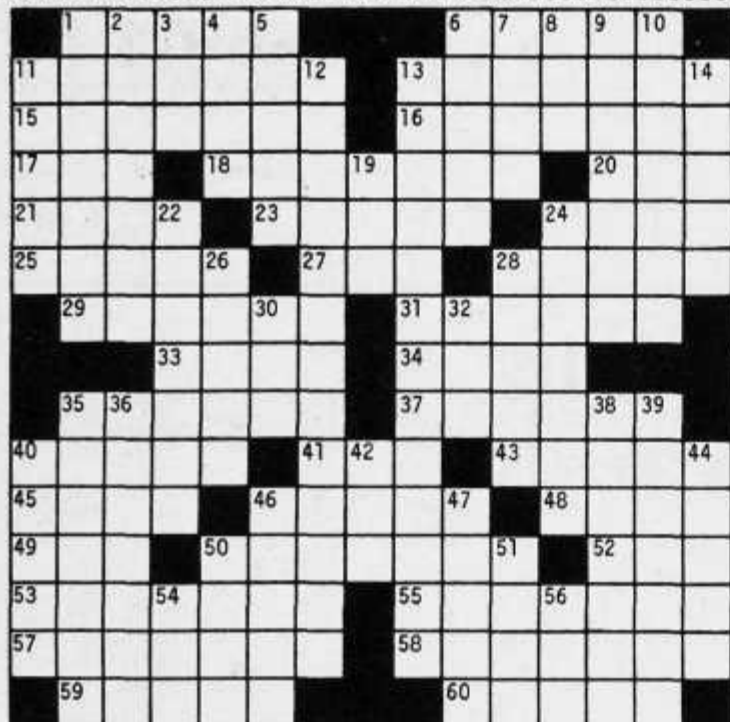

Corporation guarantees at least five scholarships for which the student is qualified and a maximum of 25.

No state or federal program is listed among their data.

Forty per cent of the students who apply to this particular corporation apparently win financial aid, according to the National Student Educational Fund. For further information, write to the agency at 7W. 51st St., New York, NY 10019.

The most important factor concerning financial aid is time. The deadline for most financial aid applications comes between January and February.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

By Blannie E. Bowen

History was made this past weekend by a member of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference. This member school was Howard University of Washington, D.C.

The Howard Bison traveled to Chapel Hill Saturday night to face the University of North Carolina Tar Heels. It was not just a case of two universities meeting on a basketball court.

This may become the case in the year 2000, but not in 1975. Howard is a predominantly Black institution; Carolina is predominantly white.

The result was almost a total disaster for seven schools of the MEAC and Howard as well. Carolina blasted the Bison 109-67.

The MEAC is in the first year of competition on the Division I level of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. All of the other member schools of Division I are predominantly white.

Howard was paving a road for other MEAC schools to follow since 75 per cent of a Division I team's schedule must be played against Division I schools within the next three years.

The Bison already play two-thirds of their schedule against Division I schools this year. Howard is by far the school in the conference playing the most schools of this division.

There is nothing wrong with Howard taking the initial step for the MEAC. I am only concerned with the teams that grace the schedule of the Bison.

Howard is rated only a so-so team even in our league. The Bison went 4-8 against teams in the MEAC last year. The tallest player on the Bison team is 6-feet 6 inches.

Carolina had five players taller than the tallest Bison. The Tar Heels are noted for playing "chump" teams to pad their record.

Not that we would win, but A&T has been trying to schedule Carolina for three years. It is simply a matter of principle. Are the Tar Heels afraid of Black Schools which are noted for having good basketball teams?

Imagine the fan interest which could be generated if Carolina would play A&T at the Greensboro Coliseum or Morgan State at the Baltimore Civic Center instead of playing in their crowded, cozy "Blue Heaven", Carmichael Auditorium.

It is evident Howard hurt its pride and our chances of getting a game at the same time. Both schools should be more selective in choosing opponents.

Howard was out-classed against Carolina; but very skillfully and tactfully, I must admit, the Tar Heels found a hole to crawl into.

Carolina does not have to play A&T, Morgan, or Delaware State since all of these teams are in the MEAC, and thanks to Howard, we are now considered out of their class.

It is simply a matter of principle.

Aggies Losing Statistics Battle

Blannie Bowen

Through 10 games this basketball season, A&T has 5-5 win-loss record. In the statistical battles, A&T has a losing record.

The Aggies have been far from equal to the opposition when it came to shooting accuracy. A&T has hit 41 per cent of its field goals, but the opponents have hit 45 per cent.

Opponents have hit 64 per cent of their free throws and A&T has connected on 60 per cent. A&T and its opponents have collected an identical total of 43.6 rebounds every game.

One area where the Aggies do lead is fouling. A&T has had 224 to 216 fouls. Aggies have also excelled in scoring points. A&T gets 80.2 a game to 77.5 for the opposition.

A&T leads in points scored, but the Aggies have taken exactly 101 more shots than the opponents to gain the total.

Allen Spruill leads the team in scoring with a 17.8 average while hitting 39 per cent of his shots. James Sparrow has hit 49 per cent of his shots while scoring 13.6 a game.

Ron Johnson has made 47 per cent of his shots in scoring 11.4 points a game, but he has had a problem staying in the games because of fouls.

In the last five games, he has collected 22 fouls while playing for more than 20 minutes a game only once. When he does play, his statistics are outstanding.

In the last two games the Aggies played against Catawba and South Carolina State, Johnson collected 27 points, 13 rebounds, but he played only 37 minutes in the two games combined.

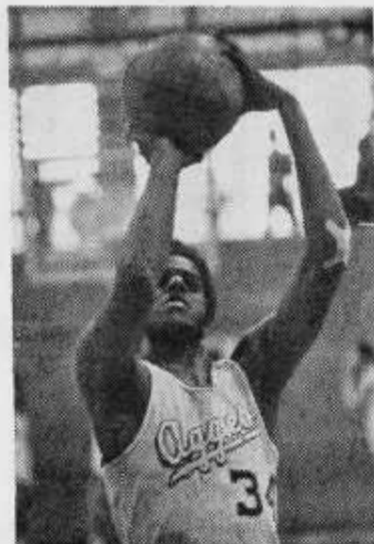

Lon Smith has hit 32 per cent of his shots while scoring 10.8 points and rebounding 9.6 a game. Sinclair Colbert has hit 42 per cent, scored 8.2, and rebounded 10.0 a game.

Smith has blocked 19 shots and Colbert and Johnson have five each. Stanley Parham has played the most minutes, 335, and he leads the team with 24 assists and 22 steals.

Some of the team highs for the year include 36 points by Spruill against North Carolina Central; 17 rebounds by Colbert against UMES; 32 team turnovers versus UMES, and seven assists by Parham against St. Augustine's.

Despite polishing the bench for the most of the time, Raymond Perry has scored 43 points in his last two games.

Perry is the most accurate free throw on the team with 82 per cent.

95-79 TRIUMPH

Aggies Defeat Golden Bulls

By Craig Turner

The Aggies of A&T traveled to Charlotte to face CIAA powerhouse Johnson C. Smith at the Park Center. Coach Warren Reynolds cagers came back strong in the second half for a convincing 95-79 triumph.

This marked only the third win outside of conference competition and it was by no means easy.

The Golden Bulls jumped with great dispatch to a solid 20-9 lead behind a seemingly unbreakable man-to-man press and devastating board play.

The Bulls' George Cooper, a 6-9 all conference performer, thoroughly intimidated the Greensboro five by rejecting layup after layup.

After a timeout the Aggies employed their three guard offense consisting of Charles Chamberlain, Allen Spruill, and Stanley Parham which upset Smith's inside attack.

When the smoke cleared, A&T had closed the gap to a minute 41-39 margin. It was then that the Aggies began to play as their preseason reputation had said they could.

The "rotational" type offense began to click early in the second half when numerous A&T players either found open shots or easy layups underneath.

Coch Warren Reynolds was quoted after the game saying, "Our guys came through tonight and showed the poise and maturity needed in our program."

Allen Spruill topped all scorers with 26 points. More creditable performances came from the likes of Ron Johnson, Lon Smith, and Sinclair Corbett who established the A&T rebounding strength.

The Aggies will now face a crucial conference game against league-leading South Carolina State. The Bulldogs defeated A&T last week in Orangeburg.

Tipoff for the MEAC tilt is set for 8 p.m. at the Greensboro Coliseum Saturday night.
