A&T Sponsors First Aggie Day

A&T students, faculty, alumni, Aggie Boosters and Aggie Boosters will sponsor the first annual Aggie Day on Wednesday, March 26, at 4:30 p.m. in Moore Gymnasium.

The celebration will be in honor of the university's three recent Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference champions: the basketball team, the baseball team and the wrestling team.

“We want this first annual celebration to be an outstanding event,” said James E. Garfield, chairman of the planning committee. “We are asking all members of the Aggie family to wear blue and gold throughout the day and to participate in the mammoth rally in Moore Gym.”

The occasion will begin with a pep rally led by the swinging Aggie pep band and the cheerleaders. Invocation will be given by the Rev. Cleo McCoy, director of religious activities, followed by tributes to the teams and their coaches by Bennie Glover, president of the Student Government Association; Cal Irwin, athletic director; Dr. A. P. Bell, chairman of the Faculty Senate; and Joseph D. Williams, director of alumni affairs.

Special championship awards will be presented to the teams and their coaches. Special awards to the most valuable player of each sport will be presented by Mrs. Catherine Bonner, secretary-treasurer of the Boosterettes; and S. R. McLendon, president of the Aggie Boosters.

Concluding remarks will be made by Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, chancellor. Following the rally, an Aggie championship feast, featuring a garnet-colored blue and gold cake, will be served in the new P. A. W. Williams student dining center.

Members of the Greensboro community interested in attending the celebration may secure reservations from the Office of Public Information, Room 203 Neville Building.

NCCLU Report Reveals Rights Of Students

By Benjamin Forbes

In a report concerning student rights in the March 18 edition of The Register, many of the statements made were not exactly clear. There were also some statements that might have been misleading.

This writer did some research and found some of the statements contradicting an article on Student Rights published by the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union and American Friends Service Committee Center for Student Rights.

In the publication, the American Bar Association Commission on Campus Governmental Student Participation by Code of Student Rights and Responsibilities states, “Students have the same rights of privacy as any other citizens.”

“Students have the same rights of privacy as any other citizens,” according to the article, if anyone wants to search you or your property, the person should politely and clearly state his objection to the search. A person should not physically resist, but he should make it clear that he does not consent to the search. This will not imply that rights by becoming members of the adult community.”

Noted Attorney Speaks At Convocation

By Mary E. Cropp

The annual Honor’s Day Convocation was held Wednesday morning in Moore Gymnasium. The speaker for the occasion was Julius Chambers, attorney-at-law, president of the North Carolina Board of Governors.

In speaking to the students and faculty members present, Chambers reminded them that America still finds ways to “tell us we are all still Black.”

Chambers pointed out that he had seen “Racial” practices of discrimination not only in the Deep South but in North Carolina and that issues of the past could still be seen in 1975.

Chambers said that, in the past, Blacks did not have the opportunity to get a degree. The Black schools were underfunded and were not able to be as good.

Although much has been done to aid the cause of desegregation, Chambers pointed out the fact that racism is still present in all aspects of our society today.

As examples he cited the cases of several Black schools that were already becoming part of white institutions. As an example of what was happening in North Carolina, Chambers cited the issue of the veterinary school that A&T made a bid for last fall. He said that A&T did not get the school because it did not have the resources to make the school comparable to other schools.

School Officials Cannot Pry

the person is guilty, but that he has a basic right to privacy. If anything is in plain view, it can be seized. It is better, for this reason not to throw anything away, for persons can not object to a search or seizure of anything thrown away.

Continuing, the article points out that school officials have the right to ask a person questions concerning his name, address, etc., and about his actions and information he may have that concerns school business, but they don't have the right to pry into that person's private affairs that don't concern the school. If the person is being charged with breaking the law, he has the right to remain silent until he has consulted with a lawyer.

When a person is threatened with suspension from the university, he has the right to due process, as guaranteed under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution. If a school authority makes a decision that takes an effect or takes away a student's rights, the student has the right to be heard. Such a right is known as "procedural due process."
The Fourteenth Amendment states, "All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law."
The only thing left is for the students to take every opportunity to use these rights.

law school at North Carolina-Chapel Hill with much less money appropriated for it.

Chambers compared the law school with the medical school at East Carolina where he said "the sky is the limit". Programs at other schools in the system have been cut, in order to build the facility he said but the school does not have its first Black student or faculty member yet.

Continuing Chambers pointed to the recent increase in student fees at A&T. He said that A&T had been planning to build a stadium for the past four years so an increase in fees was approved for this purpose. At a white school, he said, funding for the project would have been increased instead of fees.

Chambers felt that the minority students are not being properly supported. "As desegregation increases, we see some Black facilities go by the wayside," Chambers asserted. "And, if the students, faculty and administration at back, we will have no one to blame if A&T or NCC loses another school."

In the future, Chambers does not expect to see the State support all-Black schools.

Chambers said, while recognizing our history and problems, Black people must set a goal that can be accomplished. Such a goal should not be an "all-Black school. Instead, Chambers felt, we must preserve Black accomplishments.

Concluding his statements, Chambers told the audience that they could all be as proud of their own accomplishments as the students who were being honored.

The science of moving things or how to get from here to there

That's right!

GRUMMAN's real business is the science of moving things... men and machines in purposeful patterns within a great diversity of origins, destinations, tactical situations and logistical demands. Speed is often, but not always the answer. Performance—in spite of many interfaces, is the thing!

At Grumman the technology extends from automotive (motor homes), maritimes (hydrofoils and yachts) through advanced aircraft and lunar vehicles (Lunar Module) and space shuttles. It's hard to think of any single company in the world with a greater range of technology.

Obtain Grumman literature, or arrange an on-campus interview by contacting your College Placement Office.

If an on-campus interview is not convenient, send comprehensive resume to Mr. Thomas Rozzi Jr., Manager, College Recruitment.

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)
For over 130 years we've been using the word "quality" in our advertising. Once again, we'd like to tell you what we mean by it.

Blue Ribbon quality means the best tasting beer you can get. A quality achieved only by using the finest ingredients and by adhering to the most rigid of brewing standards.

In Milwaukee, the beer capital of the world, Pabst Blue Ribbon continues to be the overwhelming best seller year after year. Blue Ribbon outsells its nearest competitor nearly five to one. That's why we feel we've earned the right to challenge any beer.

So here's the Pabst challenge: Taste and compare the flavor of Blue Ribbon with the beer you're drinking and learn what Pabst quality in beer is all about. But don't take our word for it. Taste our word for it.

Pabst. Since 1844. The quality has always come through.
Racism Grows Stronger

The pattern of thought that was introduced to the students and faculty at Spring Convocation was dedicated to the realization that Black students face an old problem, that of growing neglect by the media, colleges, for their welfare in education and future employment.

Attorney Julius Chambers informed those students at the Convocation that North Carolina is practicing segregation in the state's educational and employment structures.

Although the conditions might not be the same as they were some thirty years ago, the methods of institutional racism and negativism directed toward Black students are growing stronger and more evident in our daily lives.

The motivational drive for change and the collective unity among Black students have all but disintegrated.

There are numerous organizations in and around predominately Black schools and in various Black communities which can be described as dedicated nuclei, struggling to enlighten the people around them, about how the American system is functioning and, in some cases, declaring their livelihood.

To understand the complicated problems of our society, making a Black society and a white society, is one thing.

Trying to institute volunteers for the final confrontation is another, and opening lines of communication between ourselves will never be accomplished until jealousy and other petty differences are absolved from Black students and Black people.

Aggie Alumus Enjoys Broadcasts

Editor of the Register:
This letter is to inform you that the broadcasts of A&T's games are being heard clearly in this section of Maryland, Delaware, and W. Va. W.B.I.G. is to be congratulated for its efforts, also the benefactors for bringing these games.

Our school is the only school in the MEAC with such a long-distance radio program and it is enjoyed by A&T Alumni members and others alike.

I am proud to be an Aggie. Now that we are in the MEAC, champions of Wrestling and Basketball it makes me even prouder to say, "I'm an Aggie born, Aggie bred, and when I die, I'll be a good Aggie dead."

Yours truly,

Point Versus Counter Point

By Rosie A. Stevens

Dean William Goode (Register, March 18) makes a statement that seems to reflect on attitude by society that students are non-persons, i.e., they give up their rights to privacy, free speech, and other rights by virtue of their student status. The statement attributed to Goode, that the first, second, third, and fourth amendments of the constitution do not apply to students, seems to imply this.

However, it seems senseless to say that these amendments do not apply to students on a college campus. Court rulings over the last five years illustrate this. Example may be cited. The first amendment, guaranteeing the rights of freedom of speech, petition, assembly, and the press was successfully upheld in the case involving the 'Campus Echo' of North Carolina Central University. This case, it may be noted, involved alleged racial discrimination.

Only recently, a case was before the courts involving the suspension of students from the university. The ruling of the U.S. Supreme Court in this case held that students, once granted the right of obtaining an education, do not give up the right without a hearing of the evidence against the accused student. Consequently, a college or university may not suspend a student for any reason without giving that person a proper hearing. This applies whether it reflects badly upon the image of the said institution to keep the student around.

Much of the mentality of the institutions of society dealing with students arose in the late 1960's when people who bore the status were looked upon as privileged characters who did not know the meaning of work, or as hippies attacking the value system of responsible people, or as Black militants trying to destroy the system. The images were stereotypes and, like all stereotypes, seemed to justify the treatment, i.e., wounding, maiming, and killing, of innocent people, along with depriving them of other rights.

Then there was always lurking in the background the old "in loco parentis" doctrine permitting universities to act in the stead of parents for college students. In some cases, this meant behaving as parents behave at their worst.

However, court rulings have begun to reverse much of this and, in time, things will change, it is hoped. At the same time, it must be said that the only times the first four amendments do not apply are the times students fail to understand and exercise those rights.

CRISIS

and, immediately after passing Greensboro National Bank, make a right turn into the parking lot of the Long Building. Now you only need to go upstairs to find a simply furnished office where some very complicated decisions are being made.

Parkway Janitorial, Inc., has located there in a small three-room office; and as Parkway President Edward Evans, noted in an interview, “A substantial number of students have found their way to Parkway in quest of employment.”

authors’ materials. Other points brought out by Hirsch included the actual variations in I.Q. scores due to race. This amounts to only 6.3%, at the most, of the total variation in the scores. Other variables such as socioeconomic status, sex, etc., account for the other variation in the scores, he implied.

Another area dealt with by Hirsch was the “publish or perish” doctrine, a reference to policy governing faculty at most large, research oriented institutions. One must, according to the policy, publish material related to one’s professional area, or face problems related to one’s tenure status.

Using Jensen, whom he calculated to write “300 words of garbage” per day, as an example of the dilemma a university gets into with such a doctrine, Hirsch went on to say that the financial problems and some other problems were a possible result.

In an off-the-cuff remark, Hirsch quipped that the current state of published material was such that the scientist could afford to sit writing for two years and read what was already published. Hirsch received his Ph.D degree from Berkeley. He has done post-doctoral work there, and currently, he is at the University of Illinois. He has worked in the field of behavioral genetics for nearly twenty years.

He was brought here as a part of the North Carolina Fellows Lecture series.

Parkway Janitorial Service Aids A&T Students

By Chris Bredwin

You leave A&T's campus, go down Friendly Avenue towards town, make a left turn onto Murrow Boulevard, keep straight until you cross Market Street.

Ironically, beyond the administrative help we received from Mr. Richard Moore and the support of some faculty members, A&T has left us in the dark, how much support A&T is willing to give us and in what form is unknown to us. If nothing other than encouragement comes from our school, we'd like to hear that.

But we won't stop if we don't get it, he said.

Evans also noted that his company now has obtained new equipment to handle big contracts; he cited the Coliseum as an example of his company's ability to handle large buildings. He then ended his conversation by rephrasing the appreciation of Parkway to everybody who has supported our Program since its existence.

Seemingly the office at 106 S. Murrow Blvd. holds a lot of hope for a lot of people. And the hope that Parkway stresses is that it will show how business can merge with community need and business productivity to spell success.

After college, will you get the job you deserve?

Let's face it, things aren't equal in today's job market. Even with a college degree. But the Air Force has jobs that fit your college education, on an equal opportunity basis.

The Air Force is deeply involved to provide understanding for its people about the sensibilities and sensitivities of others. Doing its part to make things better. We're not perfect—yet. But brother, we are getting there.

There are many job opportunities open to you as an officer in the United States Air Force. You may consider being a pilot or navigator.

NIT Overlooks Black Schools

by Craig Turner

The National Invitational Tournament is about to draw into its semifinal round this weekend in a sea of controversy.

The upset stems from the absence of a predominantly Black College basketball team in the list of participants. Several groups have voiced their disapproval including the N.A.A.C.P.

Jesse Jackson, the organizer of PUSH and a former A&T football player, denounced the official selection board for its negligence. Jackson stated that outstanding Black teams such as Jackson State A&T, Norfolk, and Southern University were completely overlooked.

A selection committee representative declared that he had looked into these schools' records and schedules, but he felt that their competition was "inferior." However, the MEAC, the conference of which A&T is champion, is a Division I conference, according to the N.C.A.A.'s standards.

Head Coach Warren Reynolds was greatly disturbed and stated that the reasons for the division were the crowd drawing factor, the money obtained from A&T's appearance and the location of the school. There was no mention of discrimination or political reasons.

The only previous invitation to a Black school in the Madison Square Garden affair went last year to MEAC winners, Maryland-Eastern Shore which had a 22-4 regular season record. A&T finished the year with a 19-7 record.

800 schools and the Army are making college a reality for more young people.

About eighteen months ago, the Army began to develop a bold, new concept in cooperative education. Project Ahead.

The program began at one university in the Midwest. Interest was so great the Army decided to expand it across the country. Today, the program involves more than 800 colleges and universities. And it's still growing.

Project Ahead’s structure is basically simple. But its benefits to young people and their parents are enormous.

First of all, it is a unique individualized education plan. One that allows you to choose, if you qualify, an "alma mater" before you enlist. (Normally a participating school in your home area.) So no matter which college or colleges you attend while in the Army, you'll know before hand the courses you'll need for credit at the school you want to graduate from.

Secondly, the Army provides financial aid. College courses are available to you while you're in the Army. And the Army will pay up to 75% of the tuition for these courses. (After your enlistment's over, you'll be eligible for 36 months of financial assistance under the G.I. Bill.)

Project Ahead

For more information, call your Army Representative at 271-382 Greensboro.
Tournament Selection Committee, said he could not select an MEAC team because he could not tell if the conference was major college or small college.

This was 1973-74 and I could not blame Dr. Scott for his actions. Now, let’s look at 1974-75. A&T won the MEAC title. But, the MEAC’s Marvin Webster and Morgan State were still listed as small college. To add further insult, Morgan played in this year’s Division II Tournament.

Even further insulting to the MEAC is the fact that Morgan lost the first game and came back and lost again in the consolation tournament.

The MEAC is split between Division I and Division II. We will never get any place taking one step to major college and one step to small college. It’s a damnable shame the MEAC cannot get itself together.

As long as we allow Dr. Scott some holes to crawl into, I cannot blame him one bit if he does not select any MEAC teams for anything.

Through the actions of A&T’s Dr. Jesse Jackson NIT will put two Blacks on its selection committee and select one Black college each year.

Since we are keeping ourselves out of any major tournaments by allowing schools such as Morgan to hold us back, the MEAC should expel all schools wanting to be small college and proceed from there.

If this does not occur, A&T should become independent. One other possibility is a Black College tournament about this time next year at the Greensboro Coliseum or some other major city.

Yes, get the top three MEAC, CIAA, SIAA and SWAC teams, plus four top Black independents for a 16-team National Black Invitational Tournament."
"It's hard to top the challenge and reward NUPOC offers."

It's true. The opportunities you'll have as a Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate are far from ordinary. Just ask Lieutenant Junior Grade Charles Collier, from Baltimore, Maryland. Chuck's a nuclear trained Naval Officer taking advanced studies in the field of nuclear submarine operations. It's tough, but he thinks it's worth it. Because Chuck's next assignment will be in a nuclear powered Polaris submarine. Destination: the world.

Do you think you have what it takes to become a NUPOC? First, you have to be a college senior, or graduate with a good knowledge of math, physics, or engineering. You'll also need talent... ability... and character. All the things it takes to be a leader of men and to deal with the challenges of "innerspace".

The graduate level training you'll receive in our NUPOC program will prepare you for supervising the operation of our nuclear propulsion plants on either nuclear surface ships or submarines. You'll work alongside a hand picked crew of experts. And remember, it's a Nuclear Age. The knowledge you get today will be in demand tomorrow.

You get a lot in return, too. You receive a Naval Officer's commission. Have a guaranteed income while you're learning. And a chance to travel and have some fun. Talk with your Navy Officer Recruiter today about our NUPOC program, or call toll free 800-841-8000. (In Georgia, call toll free 800-342-5855). NUPOC: it means Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate. But it spells opportunity!

The opportunity is for real... and so are we. NAVY
