Job Recruiting At A&T Will Begin September 26

By Daryl Smith

A&T State University’s faculty, high school and area college students will have the opportunity to learn about career interests of the 70’s and 80’s from more than 150 special representatives of business, industry, and governmental officials. Thursday, September 26, in Moore Gymnasium.

W. I. Morris, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center at A&T, said, “We are receiving calls from parking workers and we will implement this program later on this year. We feel we will have as many recruiters here this year, as we had in 73-74.”

In answer to the question as to why A&T suffers cancellations by recruiters last year, Morris said, “The economic squeeze was the overriding factor in that no government recruiting efforts last year. From all indications, the economy is still not the best.”

Security Force Gets New Man

By Neoplia M. Smith

A new face has joined our A&T security force. Officer D.E. Lenzy from the Police Recruiting School of Oxford has been on the security force for a month.

To protect a campus the size of A&T is a full-time job. Norwood McMillan, head of security on campus, stated that it would take 28 men to cover the campus. McMillan also said that, if the campus of A&T were to have 8 more men for the force, the cut backs in every department, only one new man would be acquired.

Presently with the added new recruits, the security force consists of 14 full-time officers and 5 guards. These guards have resumed their old positions outside the female dormitories.

McMillan feels that one of the major problems will be dealing with the traffic. McMillan feels confident that most of the difficulties encountered last fall and during the spring semesters will be avoided, even though he is highly understaffed.

McMillan revealed that most of the security guards are going to Guilford College and G.T.I. (Greensboro Technical Institute) acquiring more training through the Police Training Program. After finishing these programs, continue on to advance Police Training Program.

During the first two weeks of registration A&T security was aided by an outside security agency in controlling some of the congestion in the Financial Aid Office.

Even though McMillan has great hopes for better security services this year, he commended that the students of A&T will also have the opportunity to help.

Campus Has Traffic Problems

By Maxine McNeill

“The need for more parking facilities is partly because of the excess number of students driving on campus,” said Norwood McMillan, director of security. McMillan continued by saying, “If students would read the maps given to them concerning where they can and cannot park and follow the laws and regulations the traffic committee set up for them to follow, there wouldn’t be as much chaos about parking.”

The most immediate solution at hand is not to allow the freshmen and sophomores to have cars on campus,” said McMillan.

Whether this practice will be adopted here at A&T anytime soon is not presently known. The traffic committee which is made up of members from the faculty, staff, and students will get together sometime in the near future and decide.

McMillan went on to say that the job of the campus police is to see that the students and faculty members follow the laws set up for them. He also said that the police haven’t started towing cars away because the university hasn’t got registration out of its system.

“A $15 wrecker fee is charged to anyone whose car is towed away. If a car isn’t towed away, but the wrecker is called, there will only be a $7.50 wrecker fee charged,” added McMillan.

Dance Company Excites Crowd

By Zavery McDougald

On Monday evening, Harrison Auditorium was the site of a cultural experience. The Ishangi African Dance Company performed before a very large and responsive audience.

The company performed authentic African rituals such as the washing dance. Dressed in their traditional garb, the performers demonstrated the basic techniques of the African method of washing clothes. Other dances performed were an African Pantomime Dance for the Harvest and an initiation dance for young men entering a society.

The audience responded to these dances with a high degree of enthusiasm, which was evident through the large amount of applause the dances received.

Even the audience was allowed to get into the act, when they participated in an African chant.

Al Attles Will Speak At A&T’s Convocation

Faculty and students are reminded that all reservations for the September 17 banquet in honor of Al Attles must be made by Friday, Sept. 12, in the office of information services, the alumni office or the athletic offices.

Attles, who last spring coached the Golden State Warrior to the championship of the National Basketball League Association, will also address the annual fall convocation at A&T, Sept. 17, at 10 a.m. in Moore Gym.

Members of the planning committee announced Monday that students wishing to attend the banquet may secure special discount tickets for $5.00 from Richard Moore in the information office, Room 203 Dudley Building, Greensboro. Cost for the banquet and reception is $10.00 per person.

Why Use Drugs?

Following the crowd seems to be the thing that is "happening" at the present time. More and more people tend to follow the crowd, even to the extent of destroying themselves.

The thing that is sweeping the country now is the use of drugs, especially the hard ones. The user doesn't seem to be aware of the problems resulting from such actions. Either that or they just don't care. Use of drugs could result in problems that may be medical, legal, social, or financial.

Even during these days of inflation, drug abuse is not dwindling. People receiving welfare checks are even indulging in the drug habit. Needless to say, their incomes could be put to better use. Exactly where do these people place their priorities? Surely they don't expect the drugs to enrich the quality of their lives or to help them to be more socially acceptable persons.

The only thing I can assume that one gets from the abuse of drugs is trouble. The longer one uses these drugs, the more trouble it will cause him. If he decides to stop being a user, he will run into medical problems. Hazardous problems will be greater in proportion to the length of time he has been a user.

If the user does not decide to quit, he may encounter legal problems. There is always the risk of getting caught. In spite of these and numerous other disadvantages of drug addiction does. First, it captures the mind. Then it destroys the mind. Once the mind is destroyed, the man is"bound" to his body builds up tolerance to the drug, and medical expenses will be great if he is to be rehabilitated.

In spite of these and numerous other disadvantages of drug abuse and addiction, people are still letting themselves get "hooked". I can see no logical reason why people would try so hard to bring about their own destruction, which is all drug addiction does. First, it captures the mind. Then it destroys the mind. Once the mind is destroyed, the man exists no more.

Bussing Issue Rides Again

By Benjamin Forbes

Forced bussing is a problem that has faced many cities in both the North and South. To some it is seen as a threat to their quiet traditional racist life style. This reporter is neither an advocate nor opponent of the bussing issue. What concerns this writer is the traumatic effect this situation will have on the most important people involved, the children.

It is difficult enough for these children to get up early enough to catch a bus across town to a strange school. When they finally arrive at the school, they are then faced with the threat of violence.

There are some parents who are actually concerned about the type of education their children get, while others are mainly concerned with instigating violence the violence now occurring in Louisville and Boston can solely be blamed on the parents more so than their children.

Bussing is by no means the only way to achieve a racial balance within a school system. As a matter of fact, a racial balance should not be the main motive of any school system. However, bussing could concern themselves with trying to provide a quality education for everyone, regardless of race.

If parents are really concerned with the quality of education their children are receiving, they should try to improve conditions by constructive means rather than destructive means. It is good to see that most Blacks are not involved in these destructive means. The fighting that has erupted in Louisville is mostly attributed to members of the white community of Louisville. Those persons who are violent opponents of bussing are the ones who feel threatened by the fact that others of different races will be receiving the quality of education they so rightfully deserve.
Aggies Trip Panthers 25-21

By Craig Turner

A&T capitalized on five Virginia Union turnovers to stage a comeback victory over the Panthers, 25-21, in the season's opener at Memorial Stadium Saturday night.

A large rain storm moved into the Greensboro area a couple hours prior to kickoff and continued throughout the evening.

However the slippery turf did not hamper either offense as the crowd of about 9,000 fans watched several scoring plays.

A&T got things going early on the strength of its specialty units.

Mike Howell punted deep to Union's All-America Anthony Leonard near his own 20. Leonard circled wide evading a host of Aggies, and simply outran the Panthers, 25-21, in the season's opener at Memorial Stadium Saturday night.

Fullback Bobby Gibson carried 18-7 lead at 2:33 to go.

A&T then sneaked over from the five to end a 41-yard drive.

Wayne Walker's point after was muffed and A&T held an 8-0 advantage with 5:37 left.

The Panthers star fumbled the kickoff and linebacker Clint Bostick fell on it at the 15.
