Freshmen Can Participate In Co-ed Visitation

By Francis Gilliard

First semester freshmen will be allowed to participate in co-ed visitation this semester, according to Felton Bess, freshman class president.

Bess reported that one thousand, one hundred freshmen signed a petition early this week requesting permission to participate in co-ed visitation.

The petition was handed over to Dr. Jesse Marshall, vice chancellor for student affairs.

Dr. Marshall met with a committee to determine what would be done about the petition. The committee granted first semester freshmen the right to participate in co-ed visitation.

Bess reported that the first class meeting saw over 500 freshmen turn out. Co-ed visitation and fund raising campaigns were major topics discussed.

The freshman class treasury is practically empty, but Bess stated that plans have been made to remedy this situation. "In my opinion," said Bess "the freshman class has the potential to be productive, but it needs coaxing. This freshman class will see many changes made at A&T for the betterment of the student," declared Bess.

A&T Alumni Association Contributes Scholarships

By Francis Gilliard

Joseph D. Williams, director of Alumni Affairs, stated that the A&T State University Alumni Association raised $75,363.25 for the fiscal year 1974-75; $40,020 of this was transferred to the A&T State University scholarship program. Williams explained that the Alumni Association is responsible for its own operating expenses.

The A&T State University Alumni Association is the largest single source of unrestricted funds for the University student scholarship program. Fifty per cent of the amount raised by the

A&T State University Alumni Association is for operating expenses and 50% is for the student scholarship fund, said Williams.

Williams pointed out that A&T has over 13,000 alumni or graduates.

According to Williams, the Alumni Association is an arm of the University programs.

One of the Alumni Association's support areas is the alumni student recruitment program.

"A&T has many alumni chapters and alumni members who assist the University in student recruiting," Williams said.

He also pointed out that the University has alumni chapters that give students scholarships from the various areas.

The North Carolina Alumni and Friends Coalition that has an office in Raleigh, assists the University politically, Williams explained. That one situation would be the veterinary school. He stated that the Alumni Association took the lead in fighting for the veterinary school.

Williams pointed out the objectives of the Alumni Association. First, it supports A&T State University through annual Alumni Giving. Second, it provides information to alumni concerning the Alma Mater and fellow alumni. Third, it provides service and assistance to fellow alumni whenever needed or requested. Fourth, it provides events for fellowship for alumni with class reunions, homecoming (See Mr. A&T, Page 2)

Students View Job Possibilities

By Debra K. Daniels

Representatives from large businesses and industries, such as Dupont, Exxon, Dow, Duke Power and Southern Bell informed interested students on possible future jobs in the various firms during Career Day Activities last Wednesday in Moore Gymnasium.

The representatives desired engineering, mathematics, accounting, and business majors to recruit for employment after graduation.

Dr. Jesse Marshall, vice chancellor for student affairs, explained the main objective of the career day activities. "It's to let students look at various occupations in business, industry, government and others so that they can possibly see the relationships between what they are studying and what these firms require," he said, "and then follow it up and get a job after graduation."

He stated that it is also a means of exposure for students to careers and to discover what they will need to do in preparation for the careers.

Many students were present and ascertained valuable information from representatives pertaining to the firms and what they will need to do to be recruited by the firms represented.

Elaine Jones, a senior business administration major, commented, "It's giving me an opportunity to discover new companies and find out what's happening."

A&T Seniors Can Take GRE Free

By Benjamin Forbes

A&T seniors who plan to go into graduate study can take the first step by taking the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) which will be given free to those who apply now.

Ruth Gore of counseling and testing stated that, for the past 15 years, the GRE has been given to prospective graduating seniors free of charge. Mrs. Gore stated that students can save $10.50 on the Aptitude and Advance Test.

The Advance Test has a concentration in biology, chemistry, economics, education, engineering, French, geography, geology German, history, English literature, mathematics, music, philosophy, physics, political science, psychology, sociology, and Spanish.

Mrs. Gore indicated that students wishing to take the free

GRE should come to the counseling and testing center by November 1 to register. She added that students can also register for the Undergraduate Record Examination which will be given free. The Undergraduate Record Examination which is a fore-runner of the GRE, will be given early in November. Mrs. Gore stated that students applying for this test should register as soon as possible.

According to Mrs. Gore, students who take the GRE can have their scores sent to three schools free of cost. All additional scores must be paid for by the student.

The GRE will be given at (See Mrs. Gore, Page 2)

Rooms Are Meant For Two Says Scott Dorm Counselor

By Bobby Kearnes

Sundowning, which is three or more persons sharing or occupying a room meant for two, is against school regulations.

According to Clyde Harris Section-B, Scott Hall counselor, all Scott Hall rooms are meant for two residents and no more.

Harris mentioned that residents who practice sundowning could be charged with the responsibility of paying the guilty person's bill and are subject to severe penalty themselves.

Harris also stated that, with the shortage of on campus housing, residents could easily be a party to sundowning without realizing what they are getting into.

A Part-Time Instructor Obtains Highest Award

A part-time instructor at A&T has been named best TV investigative reporter in the United States and Canada by the Radio TV News Directors Association International.

WFMY-TV newsman Bob Kaplitz, who teaches television production and television news writing, accepted the award in Dallas, Texas, for a 3-month series of investigative reports about corruption in the High Point police department, which ultimately led to the firing of the chief of police.

The series had resulted in a $7½ million libel suit against Kaplitz, but the suit was dropped when his stories were confirmed by witnesses testifying under oath before the city council.

It is the highest award to be won in the history of WFMY-TV. In a separate competition, Kaplitz' series was selected as the best investigative work in both North and South Carolina by the Radio-TV News Directors Association of the Carolinas. He had won a similar regional award for investigative reporting in 1972 for a series about polluted Buffalo Creek.

Kaplitz' course in news writing (Eng. 640) is scheduled to be offered in the spring on Tuesday evenings.

The New York City native has a B.A. in psychology from the State University of New York and M.S. in communications from Syracuse University. His stories are frequently used by CBS News.

events, Sports Hall of Fame, and the alumni recognition awards banquet.

Williams stated that the Alumni Association will not sponsor the Mr. A&T Pageant this year.

Percentage wise the Alumni Association distributed its funds in this manner: 46% went to the student scholarship fund, 19% went to travel and lodging, 7% went to incentive awards, 2% went to clerical assistants, 11% went to publications and printing, 8% went toward special projects 1% went to N.C. Alumni and Friends Coalition, 1% went to auditing & accounting, 4% went to postage, and 1% went to others.

Concluding, Mrs. Gore stated, "I strongly urge all prospective graduating seniors to report to the counseling center to sign up for the Undergraduate Record Exam and fill out an application for the GRE."

There's a rumor going around that Virgos plus cake and punch times music equal, PARTY.

Munson Provides Party In Honor Of All Virgos

By Mary E. Cropps

The first of a series of parties honoring people born under a certain sign of the Zodiac was held Thursday evening in the East Lounge of the F. A. Williams dining hall. Those being honored with a special dinner and a birthday party were Virgos.

The event was sponsored by the Food Service division. Lawrence Munson, director of food service, said that the event was held because she wanted to do something different for the students aside from the usual special dinners held every semester.

He also commented that the party offered him a chance to meet the students and to get to know something about them and to create a rapport with them.

Approximately 160 Virgos signed up to attend the party in their honor. Cakes, punch and cookies were arranged on tables in the lounge and the students were allowed to help themselves. The cakes disappeared in a matter of minutes; the punch and cookies managed to survive somewhat longer.

After refreshments were served, those attending introduced themselves and indicated where their home towns are.

Munson plans to hold such an event every month until all the signs of the Zodiac have been honored. All of you Libras are next.

Marching Machine Is Moving

By Michael H. Hailey

The Aggies lost the football game 7-0 but the half-time performance was even closer.

There were many A&T supporters in Orangeburg, S. C., Saturday to watch the match on the gridiron field between the Aggies and the Bulldogs; and, when half-time came, most of the audience didn't leave to get refreshments because the Blue and Gold Marching Machine vs. the Marching 101 was a contest worth watching.

This was the Marching Machine's second performance while being only the first show for South Carolina (S.C. didn't play their first game due to an attack of mononucleosis to many of the football players).

The Aggies came onto the field first; and, after opening with a monstrous fanfare, they played "K-Gee" and then went into the tune "Dy-na-mite." After having the audience spellbound, the Machine slowed the modd with Major Harris' hit, "Love Won't Let Me Wait," featuring the first trumpet players along with the trombones.

The band scrambled, then went into Graham's Central Station's two hit tunes, "Release Yourself" and "Feel the Need." This dance routine held the audience's attention until the last note when a shouting ovation was given.

The Marching 101 was psyching themselves up along the sidelines as the Aggies were performing. When their turn came, they too showed very well in front of their home crowd.

After their fanfare was played, they proceeded to go into their precision routines which they specialized in.

They performed dances to tunes such as Earth, Wind, And Fire's "When You Wish Upon a Star", and the O'Jays "Give the People What They Want."

The Marching 101 is recognized as one of the Southeastern's best bands. Last year, it was the only band to outperform the Marching Machine.

The Aggies too are forming a reputation as being the best in this area while keeping in mind their motto, "striving to be second to none."

The next football game will be here Saturday and you can be sure that Mr. Robert Williams, marching band director, will have his band ready for Florida A&M.

We might have lost the game, but we won the show. photo by Sims Integration, Anyone?

Public schools have been given the grueling and awesome responsibility of integrating this country. I'm all for public school integration. It is right and proper, but why confine it to the schools? Why load it upon the backs of children and allow the other segments of society to go their merry way? Why not put some of the responsibility on housing, business, employment, churches, and all the other areas of life in this country?

These are questions that should have been asked and answered years ago. Certainly school integration is important, necessary, and vital. It must be implemented and maintained. It is extremely doubtful though that school integration, at its highest levels, will ever result in total integration of the nation.

There is now a weak and practically unenforced housing law. If one-tenth of the emphasis, stress, and strain had been, or were, focused upon this law, if the least bit of actual determination were marshalled toward its enforcement, the burden of school integration would be over. We would have the most talked about neighborhood schools (fully integrated) and one of the most important factors, racial understanding, would be well on the way to accomplishment.

There is also a so-called equal employment law that's just as weak and poorly administered as the housing law. Why doesn't the federal government take the lead in enforcing the law, with troops, if necessary? Men and women, living and working side by side, can do wonders in bringing people together.

I wouldn't dare suggest the use of force to integrate our churches. However, if the so-called, Christian churches ever could stop and give serious consideration to the meaning of Christianity, the churches would be in the forefront in the battle for an integrated America.

The fight to integrate this nation should and must be shared by all the components that go into the make-up of this nation. Racial intolerances, racial injustices, and racial alienations are basically, and in reality, the causes that prevent this nation from reaching the limits of its potentiality. When will America recognize the fact that it's hard to keep a man down without stooping down with him?

CAN I Have My old Job back...?

Misunderstandings Happen

Editor of the Register:

Indeed it is a pleasure to learn that Mr. Benjamin Forbes and all concerned took the trouble to introduce the NDUGUS "comrades" from Tanzania, East Africa, the Safari countries, to the Aggie family.

However, may I bring to the attention of Mr. Forbes and all concerned that the NDUGUS studying at A&T are nine plus one -- 10. Ndugu Donald Muganda, majoring in mechanical engineering, was not in the list published by the September 16 A&T Register. Most names were misspelled. The proper names are as follows: Ndugu Asio Kaluude Juma Koisuwi, Patricia Michael Chalamira, Admirabilis Vincent Haule, Karunde A. H. Kissawike, Donald Muganda, Titus Tobias Hegereize, Said Mustafa Sigera, Noel Daud Sembul, Raymond John Mbonika, and Benezchi Ng'wele Mokuwaia.

Not all the male students are married, but all the nine new transfers are inservice officers.

To avoid uncalled upon embarrassment in the future, please contact people concerned before publishing personal matters.

Ford Is Playing With Fire

By Benjamin Forbes

President Ford has had two attempts made on his life within the last four weeks. The two women accused of trying to commit this crime-Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme and Sara Jane Moore-were probably expressing the views of many frustrated Americans but in a more violent way.

With these two attempts, Ford still insists on making his public speaking and handshaking appearances. If Ford thinks he is going to be elected by means of handshaking, he has another thought coming.

Many Americans are tired of Ford's two-faced, half stepping ways. He demonstrates his support of the big businesses in Washington, but makes an about face when he decides to make a public appearance. Ford is playing with fire; and, as every one knows, when you play with fire, you get burned. Mr. Ford isn't playing with matches when I say fire, but he is playing with a "towering inferno."

Someone once made a comment saying that, when Ford was in college playing football, he played without a helmet. If this was true of Ford, then, it must be taking its toll on him now. He should have gotten the idea by now that there are certain persons in this country who think Ford shouldn't spend a minute extra in the oval office.

Ford may not be the best president or anywhere near that, but assassination isn't the best solution to the problem either. Ford probably knows that he is not satisfying the majority of the people, and he probably doesn't care. At Stanford University recently, someone brought up a good question, "Who elected you?"

Hopefully, Ford will change his image of being a "big business" president. If he chooses not to do so, he will continue to be a sitting duck, or maybe a "dead duck." It's all up to him.

Smith Seeks Help Through Drive

By Daryl E. Smith

Clarence Smith, recruiting counselor for veteran affairs is directing a drive for community volunteers for persons incarcerated at the Sandy Ridge Prison Unit.

Smith said, "60% of the inmates in North Carolina are Black people. I honestly feel that Black people should become more responsive to the needs of Black people."

He continued, "No longer are we involved in processing and recruiting veterans for the University; we are also interested in community involvement and work."

Smith said, "There are veterans from Sandy Ridge attending A&T as full time students and receiving benefits from the Veterans Administration."

He continued, "Many of the Veterans were not aware of the fact that they were eligible for benefits while still in prison, until they were visited by E. D.

Hargrove, director of veteran affairs, and myself in May of this year."

Asked if the people were hard-core criminals, Smith said, "The prisoners at Sandy Ridge are honor grade prisoners, which means that they are one step away from getting out. No armed guards are needed for the honor grade system."

He continued, "Presently there are 10 veteran inmates from Sandy Ridge attending A&T and five former inmates enrolled in school as full-time students."

Smith said, "Due to the success of this program the veteran affairs office is seeking to expand its services to veteran inmates."

He continued, "We are now interested in the sponsorship program that the Department of Corrections is offering. Under this program any one who is approved by the Department of Corrections as a sponsor will be permitted to take an inmate to an outing (such as football games, movies, or plays).

Smith said, "The Veteran Affairs Office has already contacted the Department of Corrections and received applications for sponsorships."

Asked what the requirements are for sponsorship, Smith said, "The criterion for being a sponsor is simply that the individual must not have been convicted of a felony."

He continued, "Individuals who would like to become sponsors, come to the veteran affairs office and complete the community volunteer application form."

Smith ended his comments by saying, "The drive for volunteers has not been an easy one and the program won't be a success unless there are Black men willing to take the responsibility of helping other Black men in trouble. The test of love and brotherhood is not provided by rhetoric but by positive action of one Black man for another."

MacCormack Stresses Flu Shots

RALEIGH AP- An outbreak of flu in North Carolina has been predicted for this winter, but a major epidemic isn't expected by state officials before 1978.

Dr. J.N. MacCormack, head of the state Division of Health Services communicable disease branch, said at a Thursday news conference that the risk of getting the flu is serious enough for some people to take precautions. He said those who should be inoculated before Nov. 1 are the elderly and those chronically ill with diseases such as diabetes, tuberculosis and lung, heart and kidney ailments.

"Big epidemics occur every 10 to 12 years. The Hong Kong outbreak was in the winter of 1968-69. So we are not expecting another one until 1978," MacCormack said.

I Exist, Therefore I Am

Athletics And Academics Do Mix

By Nicie Cannon

For some reason, it is popular to think that academics and athletic achievements can't be found in the same person. If you think that way, then obviously you may not know Orsure Wray Stokes and William Blue.

Blue and Stokes are just two of the outstanding members of the football team and high ranking students academically. Both are majoring in professional history. They also happen to be roommates and very close friends.

On the gridiron, Stokes is an offensive asset as he combines quickness and good hands to make himself a quarterback's favorite target, as a wide receiver while Blue poses a big threat to the opposition's offense in his middle line-backer position.

This year will bring an end to their football career at A&T and the athletes haven't set any specific personal goals to cap their careers.

Stokes simply stated, "I would like to have a good year. I'm thinking more about graduating."

In reflecting over the last three football seasons, Blue confessed, "I'm not satisfied with my performance. I think I could have done better by working harder and listening more."

Stokes expressed the same feelings. He explained, "I'm not satisfied at all, and it goes back to my freshman year when I broke both jaws. That took something out of me. Also, there have been changes in the system. There's a lot of dissatisfaction on my part."

Blue's career has been plagued by injuries. He's had what he terms as "one bad injury". This left the defensive stalwart paralyzed from the neck down and naturally part of his recovery included eliminating the fright.

"I had to get rid of the fear. I was scared to put my head in it," he said.

Apparently, the fear is gone and Blue is putting his head and heart into the team without getting too discouraged.

For instance, the loss to South Carolina State shook the confidence of a lot of students; but, luckily, it didn't lessen the morale of these two football players. Blue believes "the team is better than people think." He emphasized, "We need a stronger link of communication between the coaches and the players. We seem to be missing some of the things they want us to get."

Stokes also gave the team a high rating. "I think this year's team is at least 80% better than last year's because we're getting used to the new offense," he remarked. "I think the new offense will balance out the defense so it won't have to work as hard," he continued.

Blue agreed speculating, "We can win the championship..."

Continuing with some of the problems of the team, Blue suggested, "The main problem a lot of athletes have is the transition of positions. I had never played linebacker before in my life until I got to A&T. The transition from high school to college is really hard. I was a full back in high school and I like being a linebacker now, but I always had this fantasy of being a running back."

When the two were questioned about their post-graduation plans, both young men refrained from mentioning any aspirations to play professional football. Blue answered that he didn't think he had enough height to be a linebacker. He also made it plain that he had been "playing football 12 years and I don't think there's enough money to make me take the beating 12 more years."

At any rate, the two have no time for Pro football as Blue is on an ROTC scholarship and plans to spend the next four years in the Army to be followed by a career in law or counseling. Stokes will be in the Army the next two years before embarking on a dental career.

A&T Will Meet Florida Saturday

By Craig Turner

After falling to South Carolina State a week ago, A&T will entertain Florida A&M Saturday night here in War Memorial Stadium at 7:00 p.m.

Head Coach Hornsby Howell is planning for some marked changes in the A&T offensive lineup this weekend. Coach Howell pointed out the fact that his club was unable to move against its first two opponents on the ground. He has cited three new faces that will show up against A&M along the front wall.

"We are going to go with our second line defensive front to help beef up our blocking," stated Howell.

The three freshmen slated to start are George Small (6-3,240), Fred Marshall (6-2,230), and tackle Dwaine Board (6-5,242).

"They've looked very good in practice, but we'll still have to wait and see," added Howell.

The veer offense has been pushed to the side in favor of the

"I" this week.

"We have to get the double team blocks so we can spring some people. The offensive line has been nothing but sorry," stated the head coach.

A new starter in the backfield is expected as Larry Barham (5-10,210) replaced Ron Scott. Also Ollie Davis has been moved to the defensive secondary.

The new "I" will not change too much in the way of receivers although flanker James Lily has been moved to a slotback.

Defense excelled a week ago and no changes are expected. More youth will be used in the depth charts. The only sour note is that starting linebacker Willie Jones is out for the year with a knee injury.

The 6-4, 218 pounder underwent surgery earlier this week.

A&T is going to try to regain its "manhood" Saturday against intersectional rival Florida A&M.

The Aggies had been considered a top football threat going into last week's confrontation against defending MEAC champion South Carolina State in Orangeburg, S.C.

However, the Bulldogs allowed A&T only TWO YARDS total rushing and eeked out a 7-0 conference victory.

One has to wonder about A&T's offense at this point. After last week's embarrassment, A&T may find itself facing a grim future.

How does the league's second best offense of a year ago simply disintegrate? Obviously it is not because of personnel. A&T had 10 regulars to return this year. That dispels the excuse of no experience.

Size had been a problem before, but recruiting and depth took care of that. So that leaves only the "brains" behind this outfit to be questioned.

After observing the A&T Coaching staff, this reporter can truthfully say that something is lacking. Whether there is a breakdown on the sidelines or between the players on the field and coaches, no one can tell at this juncture. But, I have a feeling it won't get much better in the future.

The defense had plenty to be proud of despite a losing cause. The squad gave up only 87 yards in offense to South Carolina and rendered a single touchdown early in the game because of a missed tackle. That was all for the bulldogs.

It leaves a bitter taste in the mouth of the defense when it can force five fumbles deep inside the opponents' territory and the offense can't even draw a field goal attempt.

A&T's defense did everything a good defense could possibly do except score points. It looks like Coach Hornsby Howell might have to insert some new "plays" to make that possible.

As I said last week, someone had to lose and someone had to win. Well, Blannie and I came out on top, predicting true to form.

It seems like our freshman counterparts weren't quite so knowledgeable. Maybe they will get on the winning side this week. So here it goes for FAMU:

Mike Davis.....	A&T
Nicie Cannon.....	FAMU
Blannie E. Bowen.....	FAMU
Craig R. Turner.....	FAMU

A&T Has Two Male Cheerleaders

By Zavery McDougald

Two additions have joined the A&T cheering squad by way of two male cheerleaders. These cheerleaders are Michael Edwards and Major Coleman. Both young men are electronics majors from Jacksonville.

This reporter decided to inquire about student reaction to these additions. Orsure Stokes, senior history major from Greensboro and also a wide receiver on the football team, feels that everyone should do his own thing.

Reggie Moore, a physical education major from New Bern, states, "It's a change and, after a few more performances, everyone will appreciate them more."

Shirley Bullard, junior dietetics major from Lumberton, said, "I think it makes the squad look cute."

Mitzi Reynolds, a freshman psychology major from Mount Airy, commented, "I think it's great. It gives the girls something to sit back and admire."

Elton McKenzie, a senior business administration major from Whiteville, asserted, "It's a great idea, a change that shows A&T's progress."

All students agreed with Larry Blount, a senior business administration major from Rocky Mount, who stated, "All the larger universities have male cheerleaders and we all agree that A&T is a large institution so it is for that reason that I think it is a good idea."

So the next time you attend a game, check Michael and Major out.

Football Players Do Tap Dances

By Nepolia M. Smith

At 8:00 A.M. on Tuesdays and Thursdays the sounds of ticking, tacking, and clicking fill Moore Gymnasium. These are the sounds of the tap dancing classes held on the top floor of the gym.

Physical education majors and football players make up these tap dancing classes. Leading these students in their dances is Cassandra Nash.

Cassandra Nash, an assistant instructor, is also an Aggie. A graduate of the class of 75, a physical education major, and a resident of Greensboro, she is working on her Masters here at

A&T. Cassandra also specialized in gymnastics and was one of A&T's cheerleaders.

Upon observing the students in action, one sees Aggies having a good time whether it is doing a tap dance or the hustle. Looking even closer, one sees several "Fred Astaires" also on the floor. But the students are doing their own thing in the tap dance. They are interjecting their personality into the steps.

Cassandra revealed that tap dancing is a good exercise for building up coordination in the students.

The football players especially, needing excellent co-ordination for playing ball, get aid from tap dancing.

The dancing centers mainly on the moving and turning of the ankles. It is a dance for light movement on the feet. A student who is "heavy on the feet" may have difficulty catching on to the dance.

Most of the tap dancing classes consist of males. The few girls participating in these classes are P.E. majors. These girls, by catching on to the steps quite quickly, assist Cassandra in demonstrating the steps.

Cassandra stated that the tap dancing classes were coming along fine and the students were enjoying doing as well as learning the dance.
