Greensboro's Leaders Should Support A&T

HEW's recent decision to change its stand on the location of the proposed school of veterinary medicine has helped to strengthen my belief that the city of Greensboro doesn't really care about A&T at all. Not one city official has spoken up in behalf of A&T on this issue.

One would think that, with elections coming up next month, the city councilmen and other city officials would be ready to jump on A&T's side, if for no reason other than to enhance their chances of getting the city's Black vote. On the other hand, maybe they think they already have the Black vote regardless of how they stand on the vet school issue. Then too, maybe they think that they don't necessarily need the Black vote in order to be elected. Either of the latter two opinions would require that the officials have extremely warped minds.

However, re-election should not be the primary concern of the city officials. They should also be concerned with A&T for the benefit of the city's economy. Research has shown that A&T generates approximately $41 million to the Greensboro community. We all know that during these inflationary times, no city can afford to lose $41 million.

Then too, the Black city officials of Greensboro should be especially concerned about the welfare of A&T. Anybody should be able to realize that, without A&T, the city of Greensboro would have no appeal to Blacks at all. And, as the percentage of Blacks in the city decreases, so does the chance of a Black being elected to a city office.

The above stated reasons should make it quite evident that A&T is a very necessary part of the Greensboro community. It would be in the best interest of the city if the citizens saw to it that those officials elected in the upcoming elections were the ones who would serve in the best interest of A&T on future issues.

HEW - To Do Or Not To Do?

By Benjamin T. Forbes

University of North Carolina President William Friday said last Thursday that "I consider the (vet school) issue closed." However, Friday doesn't seem to understand that he isn't the only one the issue concerns. I am sure everyone here at A&T has noticed this flaw in Friday's statement.

This writer never thought such a decision by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW) would come as quickly as it did, but neither did I expect to see David Mathews, who was President of the University of Alabama become secretary of HEW. Mathews just happens to be a friend of Friday's.

Along with HEW's decision on the vet school issue there was another mild shock experienced by this reporter. This shock came in the form of a statement made by the federal Office for Civil Rights Director Peter Holmes, who mentioned that the decision was not based on where the vet school should be located, but instead on the ability of Black institutions to compete with predominantly white institutions for the same programs. Earlier in the year Holmes had insisted on withholding federal funds from the UNC system.

Someone said that, with Mathews being the new secretary of HEW and coming from the South, he would be more tolerant of UNC's situation. The person that suggested this was absolutely right. The slogan that "Birds of a feather flock together," certainly applies in this case.

The decision of HEW to withdraw its opposition concerning the location of the proposed school of veterinary medicine was a slap in the face to A&T; but, before this issue is settled, that slap in the face to A&T will become a pain in the neck to those persons who thought HEW's decision was "proper." HEW's definition of "proper" must be different from that of Webster's.

HEW's decision not only affected A&T, but Black institutions in North Carolina as well. The UNC Board of Governors now has to upgrade the programs at Black colleges in the state. Some may say that the UNC Board of Governors is doing as much as it can to do this. But such a statement is false in that it took a threat from the ABA (American Bar Association) to withdraw accreditation of North Carolina Central's law school before the Board of Governors met in an emergency session to grant the needed money to save the law school. Yet, the law school still needs more money to improve its programs. Surely the board isn't doing all it can to aid Black schools.

For those persons who think the issue is closed and settled, students at A&T and the four other predominantly Black universities (North Carolina Central, Fayetteville State, Winston-Salem State, and Elizabeth City State) can strongly reply, "We have not yet begun to fight."

An Aggie Homecoming
Pleases Everyone

As all of us should know by now, Monday will be the beginning of a week of homecoming festivities for the Aggies. The week will include such a variety of activities that everyone should become involved in some aspect of the celebration. There will be activities for Aggies of all ages.

One can rest assured that there will be more than enough "styling, profiling, mowing, and growing" during the week. But, homecoming wouldn't be quite the same without this element.

However, the thing that makes an Aggie Homecoming so appealing to everyone is the spirit we put into it. Everyone seems to be psyching himself up for the week-long celebration. Even the football players gain an extra incentive to win the homecoming games.

Exactly what is it that instills this mysterious spirit within us? Maybe it is the combination of all the events (reunions, social events, religious ceremonies, and the football game). All these things help make us remember how proud we are to be Aggies.

Homecoming is always an enjoyable and extraordinary event that everyone associated with the Aggie family (members and non-members) looks forward to.

Let There Be Education For All

By Daryl E. Smith

The elimination of racial duality in the educational system in North Carolina is the major problem Black students face today. The present system of educating leaders for this society has always been lopsided and in favor of the predominantly white institutions.

The growth potential for influencing racial changes has been set back another 10 years by the unwillingness of this state and the federal authorities to proceed with dismantling the dual educational system.

The burden of eradicating this duality should not be on the victims, but on the very people who engineered this system from the beginning.

Black institutions of education have suffered from lack of sufficient capital, quality programs which would attract all people and the development of library holdings for the students to enhance their minds.

Education should be for all people and not just for selected individuals.

City Council - Speak Up

By Benjamin T. Forbes

It seems that the only time the A&T family hears anything from the city council is during elections. Many of the candidates who solicit votes from students and faculty never come on campus. They (candidates) just send someone to the campus to litter it with their "vote for me" signs and campaign brochures.

We here at A&T don't need to be befriended with such candidates. If we can't receive their support when we so desperately need it, then we shouldn't bend over backwards to give our support to them. Not once has this reporter heard the members of the city council of Greensboro speak in favor of A&T in its struggle to obtain the much-publicized school of veterinary medicine. The lack of support from the city council has led me to believe that the city council has led me to believe that the smiling faces don't always speak the truth.

Although some to many of campaign signs are only on campus for only one day, one day is too long considering that the council probably wouldn't support A&T for that short period of time.

If A&T plays a major roll in Greensboro's economy, which it does, then the city council should be going out of their way to aid us in any type of improvements we attempt.

The city council may have supported the Aggies when A&T's basketball team won the MEAC Championship by honoring them earlier this year, but we need their support in other matters as well.

Maybe someday the time will arrive when the city council will strongly speak up in support of A&T. However, that day may be a long way off.
Harrison Players Will Do 'Porgy'

Before the Richard R. Harrison Auditorium at A&T decided to stage the drama, "Porgy," for their first production of the year, they relied heavily on some research undertaken by the university's speech department last year.

Miss Berenice Anderson and several of her students spent several days in and around Charleston, S. C., researching the old gullah language spoken by Blacks there.

"This kind of information has been very valuable to us in preparing for 'Porgy," said Dr. John Kilmanjaro, who will direct the play.

The play will open a four-night stand in the Paul Robeson Little Theatre beginning on October 14.

"We have had a lot of fun getting this play together," said Kilmanjaro, "and we are certain that it will be a first class theatre fare."

Like Kilmanjaro, the student actors are also excited about the forthcoming play. "It's definitely going to be different," said Baxter Griffin, a freshman speech and theatre major from Winston-Salem. "It has elements of humor and seriousness."

Although he had no significant experience as an actor in high school, Griffin has adjusted well to acting, according to Kilmanjaro.

Another newcomer who will appear in the play will be Sandra Jones of Winterville. Her background in high school was in modern dancing, but she said she chose theatre as a major at A&T "because I have always wanted to try my hand at acting."

"This will definitely be a show people can relate to," said Sandra. "It really shows you the inner feeling of Blacks."

The lead role of Porgy will be played by veteran actor Avery Verdel, while the role of Bess was played by Mary Logan. Reservations for the play may be secured by calling the box office at 379-7852.

The Port Authority Band, which plays at most colleges and high schools, was formed in 1970, is based in Washington, D.C. The band is said to specialize in soul and rock music.

Out Of The Mouths Of Black Folk
Henry Highland Garnet (1815-1882)

Although Henry Highland Garnet was born a slave in Maryland, he became a successful minister, teacher, editor, and missionary, as well as an eloquent speaker. The statement below, excerpted from his speech, "An Address to the Slaves of the United States of America," was delivered at a National Negro convention in Buffalo, and it is indicative of the militant attitude which was characteristic of Garnet.

"Brethren, arise, arise! Strike for your lives and liberties. Now is the day and the hour. Let every slave throughout the land do this, and the days of slavery are numbered. You cannot be more oppressed than you have been—You cannot suffer greater cruelties than you have already, Rather die freemen than live to be slaves. Remember that you are four millions!"
Homecomings Improve Annually

By Deborah Daniels

Homecoming is one of the main events students anticipate for various reasons of their own. Nevertheless, one can agree that diversity of activities occur to keep energetic students occupied and entertained throughout the celebration.

Many fantastic and outstanding attractions in the history of A&T have been impressed in the minds of witnesses of them. Since the theme is "A Blast from the Past," it seems appropriate to blast your mind with golden memories of the past during homecoming.

If you were here in 1972 you would have witnessed, during homecoming half-time, that the drum majors did not march on the field as they normally did. On the contrary, they flew on the field in a helicopter.

In the 1974 homecoming during half-time, the band had a treat in store: an Aggie Bulldog performed on the field. Naturally it was a man in a dog's outfit.

"Homecomings are better every year," Dr. Waverly Rice thinks. He says that in the past year, homecoming didn't have themes as they do now. Also he thinks the floats are better because they are made commercially instead of by students as they were in previous years.

"Styles are open now," a former A&T, Dr. Pearl Bradley of the Speech Department commented. "Homecoming has a set pattern and it hasn't varied much. But I can remember the times when there were fireworkss. But I enjoyed the reunions and games."

Miss Jean Beel of the English Department reminisce about an incident during an A&T Homecoming in which she and other members of the Fort Nightly Club participated. They had made a float with Anxious and Cheepa statues on it. As it was being pulled induring half-time, they had noticed, too late, that tools, such as hammers and saws, were left at the feet of Cheepra.

Asked why the donated equipment has not been fixed, Welborn said, "Dr. Ellis will only approve a purchase order for the minimum amount for parts, but not for emergency supplies used to back up the present system."

Aggies Defeat Smith's Golden Bulls 21-0

By Craig Turner

Utilizing the running of tailback George Ragland and the defensive prowess of end Jearold Holland, A&T coasted to a 21-0 win over Johnson C. Smith in War Memorial Stadium here in Greensboro Saturday evening.

A crowd of 8,200 fans looked on as A&T controlled the affair from the opening kickoff. After an apparent successful series by the Aggie offense, A&T moved from its own 21 to the Golden Bull 29. There, quarterback Elsworth Turner's pass was picked off at the three-yard line by Smith's J. D. Comer.

The Bulls punched out some much needed yardage to the 34. But then quarterback James Wideman was hit on the ensuing play and Jearold Holland broke through to recover a fumble at the Bull 32.

After two running plays, Turner tried to hit Dexter Feaster across the middle. But there was a collision between Feaster and the defender as the ball popped up. Tightend Walt Bennett angrily pulled in the deflected toss for an 18-yard gain. George Ragland went the final seven yards up the middle of the Smith defense for the score.

Wayne X. Walker's kick was good for the extra point as A&T led 7-0 with 6:12 to go in the first quarter.

This margin held up the rest of the half as neither club could put together an effective drive.

However, late in third quarter the stalemate ended. The A&T offense found some open seams in the Smith defense. Aid ed by a pass interference call, Turner skillfully moved his club to the five yard line of the Golden Bulls.

During that streak Turner went 5 for 5 in passing. Ragland ended the 83-yard drive by clicking right end untouched for the touchdown. Walker added the extra point for a 14-0 Aggie lead.

With a sizeable lead, A&T's defense began an awesome display of pass defense. It finally resulted in Jearold Holland's interception of a Wideman screen pass at the Smith 40, where he returned 20 yards.

From there the Aggies went to Calvin Hawkins. The freshman tailback smashed for gains of eleven, five, and finally two yards for the score.

Walker's kick was good for a 21-0 lead and A&T was well out of danger.

The victory raised A&T's record to 2-2 for the year. Johnson C. Smith fell to 3-2 for its efforts.

The next encounter for the Aggies comes Saturday against unbeaten and untied Norfolk State in Norfolk, Va.
