Students Should Apply For Aid

By Anthony Motley

It is time for students to obtain new Parent's Confidential Statements and Basic Educational Opportunity Grants for next year, according to Vance Gray, director of financial aid.

Students must refile these forms each year in order to be considered for financial aid. Gray urged that students pick up all materials available as soon as possible.

Gray said that a new state grant program has been initiated for this academic school year. It is the North Carolina Student Incentive Grant. To be considered for the grant, a student must be a legal resident of North Carolina and accepted for enrollment or enrolled in good standing in an eligible college or university, technical or vocational school in North Carolina. The applicant must have completed both a PCS and BEOG application.

Gray explained that his staff sent out over 1,000 applications during the fall to A&T freshmen but received only about 300 back. This is money that students will not have to pay back; therefore, they should take some initiative and obtain an application.

When asked whether there was sufficient aid for students, Gray said that there was not and will not be, because A&T depends primarily on federal funds and the allocations to the several programs are too small.

Students who desire aid for summer school must file a separate application and it can be picked up now. The financial aid office has a tremendous job to do with a staff of ten. Mrs. Carrie Harper, associate director of the Financial Aid Office, commented that students were very cooperative during registration.

Harmony Is Important
To The African People

Trying to assist developing nations, like those in Africa, by simply suggesting that they adopt Western economic models, often proves to be not the answer, a University of Michigan professor said here Wednesday.

Dr. Kenneth Shapiro of the Center for Research on Economic Development at Michigan told an economics seminar here that many times farmers using traditional methods are pretty efficient.

"If we introduce certain changes, they might cause social problems," said Shapiro, "and social harmony is important to the people in those nations."

The Michigan professor recently spent a year researching somewhat ancient methods of cotton production by small farmers in Tanzania.

He said he found out that, in many ways, the small farmers of that African nation were all allocating their resources pretty well although they were still tilling the soil with the hoe.

He suggested that outside nations, wishing to aid developing nations, should consider whether or not what the smaller nations are doing is rational.

"We should also try to minimize the introduction of mechanical inputs because machinery breaks down and the people in the developing nations aren't equipped to repair it. This can cause other problems."

"People are markedly different in how they can use new technology," said Shapiro. He said sometimes the best farmer in the area can be used to introduce innovations.

Shapiro's research was in an area near cities where A&T is assisting Tanzanians in their quest for increased agriculture output.

Several A&T students will leave in a few weeks to spend an internship in that country.

E.I. DuPont Company Awards Grants To A&T

The School of Engineering and the School of Business at A&T State University have been named the recipients of a total of $23,000 in grants from the E. I. DuPont de Nemours & Company.

The School of Engineering will receive $18,000 to assist A&T in its development efforts. The funds were announced by C. W. Theobald, vice chairman of the School of Engineering and the School of Business, were authorized under DuPont's 1976 program for educational assistance. The presentations, $18,000 to the School of Engineering, and $5,000 for the School of Business, were authorized under DuPont's 1976 program for educational assistance.

The grant funds will be deposited with the A&T University Foundation for use by the two schools for scholarships, equipment, faculty activities and for curriculum studies. The purposes of the grants, according to Theobald, are to help the schools maintain or enhance the strength of their programs and to satisfy needs and to engage in activities that assist A&T in its development efforts.

Fund Raising Chairman Appeals For Support

James E. Bridgett, Jr. '53, national fund raising chairman, recently issued an appeal for the more than 15,000 Aggies to lend their support to the $100,000 national fundraising campaign currently underway.

Bridgett, who resides in Columbia, S.C., made the following statement:

"This past year, more students were graduated from more programs than ever before. These students will soon be making their mark on the world around them. Still there are many more who must follow in the footsteps of these graduates."

Bridgett said student scholarships remain the top priority of the alumni,
ROTC Sponsors Jazz Concert

By Lynelle Stevenson

Students and faculty rocked to the music of the Elon College Jazz Ensemble as they were called, the Emanons, yesterday afternoon at 3:00 in Harrison Auditorium. The group has been in existence since 1962 on the campus of Elon College. The name Emanons is simply noname spelled backwards. However there is nothing backwards about their music.

The program began with a popular selection called "For Once in My Life," with Marie Curry as vocalist. The second tune, sung by Chuck Utah, was "My Cherie Amore". The remaining tunes were "Gospel Johnie," "Troubled Waters," "Once You Get Started", "Love Will Keep Us Together" and the final selection a tune from rock singer Led Zepplin's album, "Physical Graffiti." The audience showed its appreciation with frequent injections of applause throughout the program.

The Emanons have been to New York, Washington, Puerto Rico and Europe. They are soon to make another trip to Europe.

In the hustle of packing up equipment at the show's close, Jack White had this to say: "We enjoyed the concert and I'm glad to say the audience looks like they enjoyed themselves too. I hope someday we can come back.

Campus House Offers Activities

By Debra Daniels

Offering a variety of activities for this spring semester are the Lutheran Student Center located at 1015 Bluford Street and the United Christian Campus Ministry on the second floor of Harrison Auditorium.

Mrs. Doris DuRose, supervisor of the Campus House, has centered the activities around the total needs of the students on campus and the encouragement of students to visit the Campus House at his leisure and see for himself how this atmosphere, similar to one's home, can be conducive to attaining an attitude of love and cheer.

A diversity of games to be enjoyed by everyone will be set out every Tuesday night at seven o'clock. Every Tuesday and Wednesday at 12:00, students unite in a circle of prayer to make supplications to God as well as give Him thanks. It is called Noon Day Prayer.

Thursday is designated for people who are concerned about their weight. Beginning at 8:30 guests will discuss their problems, talk about food nutrition and special diets and observe their progress in obtaining the size they desire. Students with sewing abilities can further enhance their talents by joining the sewing circle slated for Saturday mornings from 9:00 to 12:00. Each Sunday evening from 5-7, Bible Studies will be conducted by pastors of various churches at the Campus House.

The United Christian Campus Ministry, with Reverend Elden McCoy, director, and Reverend Earl Wilson, assistant director, is open for counseling and Rev. McCoy and Rev. Wilson request active participation from students in the various organizations.

On Monday nights at 7:00, Reverend Wilson conducts Rap Sessions and Bible Study concurrently.

The Rap Session's primary purpose is for reflection and probing for answers to questionable and controversial issues and searching the scriptures for insight and wisdom. By relating their own experiences, the students can also apply what they learn Wednesday nights, Midweek Devotion engages in devotional services by inviting young student ministers, choir and gospel singers on campus to participate.

Each religious organization is responsible for rendering services each week by providing a speaker and entertainment. All the Campus Ministry Activities are held in Harrison basement.

On Sunday mornings the University Sunday School is held at 9:30 and Campus Church starts at 11:00.

Each center extends a welcome to all students to partake of the many activities designed to be interesting, exciting, informative and rewarding for each individual.

State Supported Schools SGA Asks For Equal Allotment

By Maxie McNeill

The petition which the SGA has been circulating around campus is in support of equal money to be allotted for all state supported schools.

Michael Mason, SGA president of Winston-Salem State University, appeared before the Board of Governors January 16 to ask that it review the funds to the Black colleges of North Carolina. The meeting which will be held February 20th in Chapel Hill will determine whether or not the Black colleges have a legitimate complaint.

The five tax-payers on North Carolina have a right to know where their money is going, said Mason. If the distribution of their money has any racial attachment they also have a right to know, he added. According to Mason, these accusations were drawn up by the Black institutions of North Carolina, but the petition was more or less A&T's idea. He said the SGA may solicit more signatures but at the moment it isn't pushing them too hard.

association's efforts, and that 50 percent of all monies raised in the campaign will be used for that purpose.

"But the university needs more than scholars," added Bridgett, "With enough money, we can get scholars. What we must look at now is how to keep them and what can be done to make their stay enjoyable and worthwhile." If the current campaign is successful, the association could realize $50,000 for scholarships, $35,550 for alumni operations, and $9,450 for other alumni concerns.

"I am sure that we are all proud of A&T and what it has become," said Bridgett, "but being proud is not enough. The university needs our financial support too. We need to put our money where our pride is."

The brothers of the Esquire Service Fellowship, Inc. conducted the Sunday Worship Service, Jan 18, at Harrison Auditorium.

The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Earl Wilson, Jr., director of the Woody Foundation. Music was rendered by the Woody Gospel Combo. The combo is composed of eight A&T students. The Esquires also paid a special tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

In such functions as these the brothers of Esquire are attempting to exemplify the true meaning of service. Other and similar activities are planned by the brothers in the near future.

Let's Beat WSSU !!!
Cafeteria Hours Will Not Change

By Maxine McNeill

The cafeteria hours will remain as they are for the remainder of the semester, according to Lawrence Munson, food service-director. The hours are breakfast, 6:30 a.m. to 8:30 a.m.; lunch, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.; and dinner, 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Last semester lunch and dinner were served to mostly university students. The reason the hours were changed was that the students asked for being served during lunch and dinner can be served differently, added Munson. All those students have to do is show some proof that they can't eat at the regular hours. They can be served lunch from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and dinner from 5:30 to 6:15.

The hours were changed was because the students asked that they be changed back to the way they were originally. The cafeteria was rendering service to mostly university students and I try to find out what is most convenient for the students," said Munson. Munson also stated that he has been a registered dietician for 15 years. The meals served in the cafeteria are well balanced. The Rev. Mr. Chavis served a writ of habeas corpus to start serving long prison terms. The Rev. Mr. Chavis served a writ of habeas corpus to start serving long prison terms. The Rev. Mr. Chavis served a writ of habeas corpus to start serving long prison terms.

According to Munson, only 30 percent of the students in the cafeteria made suggestions and not all of those were constructive. A number of students didn't complain about the straight meal hours though. "The students who didn't want the hours changed didn't speak up," he added.

Another thought that year's suggestion box was that a softer soda with less acid be served. Munson said that was one of the reasons for the new soft drink machines in the cafeteria. Also, remarked Munson, some of the foods the students asked for are being served.

If the students decide they want the old hours back, all they have to do is go talk to Munson. He said he will put a list up in the cafeteria, and if 75% of the 2500 students sign it the hours will be changed back. The only thing Munson sees wrong with the old hours is that the longer hours cost more money. He said this is because more personnel is needed.

Students who have classes during lunch and dinner can be served differently, added Munson. All those students have to do is show some proof that they can't eat at the regular hours. They can be served lunch from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and dinner from 5:30 to 6:15.

Munson mentioned that a lot of students complained about the meals. He said if any student doesn't want to eat in the cafeteria all he or she has to do is get approval from Dr. Marshall and he'll be glad to stamp it. He also stated that he has been in the planning of the students' meals too. Munson wants to assure the student body that he won't try to force anyone to eat the cafeteria meals.

The reason the lines are so long is because of the students, stated Munson. He said all the students can't be fed at the same time and they should realize that. As the semester continues, he added, the students will start coming less frequently and the lines will shorten. Also, one reason the lines are so long, he said is that the students waste time when trying to decide what they want to eat.

Chavis Will Continue Fighting

RALEIGH—As-while pleading to continue his fight for freedom, the Rev. Ben Chavis said earlier this week he and the rest of the "Wilmington 10" would surrender next week to assure the student body that he won't try to force anyone to eat the cafeteria meals.

"This Supreme Court is continuing to carry out his attack on basic political freedom in this country," the Rev. Mr. Chavis said during a news conference at which he was joined by the other nine defendants. Eight of them are young Black men who were in high school during the Wilmington riots. The tenth, Mrs. Chavis' attorney James Ferguson of Charlotte has said he will seek another line of appeal. We Don’t Need Ford

A great number of us probably heard President Ford’s State of the Union Address. Many of us probably thought that either we had been cast into a time tunnel and whirled back into the past or that the television station was showing a rerun of a show we had seen before.

Ford even had the nerve to stand up and tell us that the nation was not doing very well. This was an insult to the whole nation. Now, what sane person, living in this nation, would be thinking otherwise? I don’t think anyone would be of another opinion except maybe a few overly optimistic politicians. This fact has been world renowned for quite some time.

Sticking true to form, Ford told of his plans to cut down on government spending. He talks of this practically everywhere he goes. This writer is eager to know when he will put his plans into operation.

The President seems to think that cutting government spending means doing away with programs to help members of the minority and low income groups, such as the food stamp program, and increasing the number of law enforcement men in order to fight crime in the streets. If there are plans to cut down on government spending, why is there a need to increase taxes?

As the President admitted, the nation is in bad shape, and it needs a chief executive who is both willing and able to whip it back into shape. This task calls for a man who is willing to work and not just give us lip service. The nation was not doing very well. This was an insult to the whole nation. Now what sane person, living in this nation, would be thinking otherwise? I don’t think anyone would be of another opinion except maybe a few overly optimistic politicians. This fact has been world renowned for quite some time.

Observing Some Sounds Of A&T

By Patricia Everett

Nonchalant, heavy sounds pump out of the jukebox and young bodies instinctively move to the beats which rhythmically clip the air. The Student Union’s canteen is filled with smells of french fries and crackling sounds of frying meat. The entire atmosphere seems to be a cool, dark, celebration of youth . . . of life.

Hungry students with stern eyes are bent over the counter “jivin’ly” snapping at the cook to hurry up with the food so that he or she can make it to a class across campus. Or, some young man is trying to use his charms to talk the cashier cut of a book of matches.

People at the table seem to be looking at nothing in particular but seeing everything that flows in and out of the doors of the canteen. And from somewhere, laughter can be heard mysteriously coming from the throats of some anonymous group of friends.

The feeling of happiness just hangs all over everything and all the sounds and scenes merge. And then, the view is perfect . . . a beautiful Black picture is painted . . . of a typical day in the canteen of A&T’s Student Union.

Professionalism Is Objective

By Daryl E. Smith

The history of the A&T Register has been one of continued consistency towards promoting complete awareness about national, international, state, and community news which directly or indirectly has the potential to influence the students at A&T.

The dedication of the staff and the cooperation of the students that are willing to donate their time and energy towards the development of a student business operation which constantly strives for improvements and perfection along the lines of professional journalism are commendable.

The work is often long and tiresome, with little consideration given to those whose only objective is to serve the students and the entire Aggie family.

There are many sleepless nights in which staff members portray a dual role on this campus, first as students and then as public servants to the A&T community.

Despite some criticisms about The Register, our student newspaper is one of the best Black Collegiate newspaper in the nation. Complete awareness for complete commitment is the basic foundation of The Register and the esprit de corps is still viable and strong.
Agency Sponsors Students
To Participate As Interns

Curtis Gywnn, an A&T senior economics major, is one of ten students selected from various Black colleges and universities throughout the Southeast to participate in a cooperative work-study program sponsored by the Agency for International Development (AID) of the State Department.

The students are presently in the first portion of the three-part program and are spending five weeks at A&T doing intensive study of three economic courses. The other two portions include five weeks in Washington, D.C. becoming acquainted with AID, and a five-month overseas stay in which time they will actually be helping AID and native personnel to solve economic problems in each of their appointed countries.

Speaking of the previous successes of the past several years, Dr. Sidney Evans, chairman of A&T’s Economics Department, commented, “The U.S. AID internship program has resulted in discovering many academically competent and bright Black students from various schools across the country who have a better than average potential of pursuing a rigorous graduate program in economics. Many of the past interns have successfully pursued graduate work in economics and have performed outstandingly in employment situations.”

One of the main objectives of the program is to strengthen the students’ academic training and to provide them with work related experience. When Gywnn, who has been assigned to the Ivory Coast in West Africa, was asked how he felt about the program, he said, “I feel like it is really interesting and exciting. Also this program will help me to decide on what I want to do in the future.”

The intern from Wilberforce University, Shirley Erves, also feels the trip will be rewarding. Asked how she liked her stay at A&T, Shirley said, “I like it here at A&T.”

After completing their course work here, the students will go to Washington for orientation and education about the country where they have been assigned. Then around the first of April the students will depart for their destinations. There, they will work in an AID office through August.

Exchange Program Continues

By Catherine Speller

This academic year, 1975-76 is the fourth year that A&T has participated in the North-South Student Exchange Program with the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse.

The exchange program is part of many mutual activities between UW-La Crosse and two predominantly Black Universities in North Carolina.

Students from UW-La Crosse have the opportunity to grow in their understanding of American institutions and society by attending a semester in a totally different academic, cultural, and social life style other than that of their present background.

The program stresses the problems which the exchange students will encounter and, by realizing that these problems exist, the students become more aware of why the problems are issues in America today.

The students must be sophomores or juniors to participate in the exchange studies program. A letter of recommendation and a current transcript of academic work are required before the student is selected.

After the students have been accepted, they are technically enrolled at the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse and, therefore, avoid out-of-state charges. At the school the student must go through the regular registration procedure.

Presently there are two students on campus from the UW-La Crosse. They are Ione Scheibe and Bonnie Thompson who are both sophomores.
Banquet To Salute Champions

More than 500 persons are expected to attend an awards banquet on Tuesday, Jan. 27, for the championship A&T State University football team. Sponsored by the university and the Greensboro community, the banquet will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Holiday Inn-Four Seasons.

The banquet is being called "A Salute to the Champions," and will honor the Aggies who tied S. C. State for the championship of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference title.

"We are hoping that all of the university family and their many friends will join us in honoring this outstanding football team and its coaches," said Joseph D. Williams, Sr., A&T alumni director and chairman of the awards banquet.

Speaker for the banquet will be Dr. C. D. Henry, former athletic director at Grambling College, and currently assistant commissioner of the Big 10 Conference.

Other program participants will include Woody Durham, WFMY-TV sports director, master of ceremonies; Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, chancellor of A&T, head coach Hornsvay Howell, Dr. Roy D. Moore, chairman of the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation; the Rev. Howard A. Chubb, pastor of Providence Baptist Church, and the Rev. Lloyd Green, pastor of St. James Presbyterian Church.

Reservations for the banquet ($10.00 per person) will be accepted in the A&T Athletic Office until Friday, Jan. 23. Williams also said that group reservations are being accepted.

The A&T football team last fall won eight of its final nine games after losing the first two games. Two members of the squad George Ragland, and Walter Bennett were named to All-America teams, and Coach Howell was named the MEAC's "Football Coach of the Year."

Reynolds' Ability To Win Continues Unquestionable

By Blannie E. Bowen

Warren Reynolds inherited a championship team in 1972 from the coach who had surprised A&T basketball foundation. Reynolds placed his large frame in the hot seat and he has not relaxed since.

That was the image which Aggies had grown accustomed to, and had to be maintained when Cal Irvin retired following his 401 victories.

Reynolds' ability to win is now unquestionable after two MEAC titles in the seasons as well as a coaching record of 60 wins and 20 losses.

The 1972-73 season saw MEAC schools playing major college basketball, thus stiffer competition. Seven Black colleges play major college basketball and in 1972, 75 percent of a team's schedule must be played against major colleges.

Playing white colleges was the only alternative. "Pressure comes not from beating white schools, but pressure comes in building A&T to the big time," Reynolds explained.

Reynolds and his Aggies eagerly seek national recognition because the coach says "basketball is a big business." The chore of achieving the big time seems monumental at times. "We have seen improvements, but our basketball has not generated the funds yet, but our new gym will help us grow," Reynolds added.

The era is rapidly approaching where A&T has to beat the big white schools in order to be competitive on the national scene. This has not happened yet, but the Aggies have come close, awfully close on many occasions.

"They're a Division I team! Well, they can't compare with teams like Maryland or Vanderbilt! They lack two [See Coach, page 7]"
It is not often that a sports reporter gets emotionally involved with a basketball game, even if he has personal ties to one of the combatants.

But Tuesday night it was very difficult for this reporter to stay neutral while watching A&T's women's basketball team play Bennett.

The game started as most women's games usually start, with a lot of nervousness and turnovers.

But, beyond the shallowness of human error, I saw an element among the women missing from a great many of the male-dominated teams at A&T. That element was emotion.

Rarely will one detect emotion in today's world of college sports. The trend in most coaching seems to be to keep a cool head no matter what the situation.

However, there is a minute line between coolness and apathy. If the "coolness" factor is too often emphasized, then the line is breached and team spirit is nullified.

How does a true athlete, coach, fan, or writer with the aforementioned ties dissociate himself from a sporting contest? It's truly hard indeed.

Despite what may happen in Winston-Salem Friday, a word should be mentioned about officiating in general. There has been a lot of talk about officials deliberately calling games one-sidedly for the host team.

It may be debatable for some time to come but it may be true that this actually does happen. If it does, then appropriate action should be taken to guard against it such as the establishment of a review board.

Coaches will say they are the best judges in determining if a referee is biased. Players claim that certain players are protected because of their reputation.

If writers remain neutral as they should, referees will remain in their minds their own best judges or so they will say. Perhaps the most logical solution would be to say if a referee is biased. Players claim that certain players are protected because of their reputation.

A&T kept its unbeaten string against Bennett intact last Tuesday evening by posting a 51-46 come-from-behind win over the Belles.

The Aggiettes overcame an early six point deficit with just over three minutes remaining to overtake the Belles.

An enthusiastic crowd of about 700 looked on at Bennett's gymnasium as neither team could muster much of a lead through the first half.

The final situation weighed heavily in the easy going as evidenced by the fact the Aggiettes were in a bonus situation with 15.04 left in the half.

But, despite that advantage, A&T found itself behind 43-41 at 4:16.

Offensive rebounding was an instrumental factor in giving Bennett what appeared to be a commanding 41-35 margin with 6:54 to go.

It was then that A&T began to assert some defensive prowess as Patterson riddled the Bennett zone underneath. Her short jumper in the lane put A&T ahead for good with 1:10 to go at 47-46.

A&T sealed the win as it came up with two steals and converted both for easy layups in the closing seconds.

Leading the way for the winners was Eva Patterson who hit a career high of 31 points. No other player approached double figures.

The Aggiettes next scheduled game is Saturday night against Guilford College in the Greensboro Coliseum Saturday night. Game time is 6 p.m.

Aside from his professional responsibilities, Reynolds is the father of three children and a veteran of the armed forces. He also holds a certificate in corrective therapy dealing with the rehabilitation of muscles.

A smooth and stylish dresser, Reynolds has lost a few hairs from the top of his head and he may have picked-up a few gray ones as well, but his tall body has remained fit and trim.

Despite all the pressures of being a young head coach, Reynolds has virtually removed all memories of the former A&T coach. Everyone loves a winner especially Aggies.

New Gym Costs $ 3.4 Million

By Archie Bass

The Aggie fans and players will have something to cheer about and play harder for next year with the new construction of the A & T Gym directly behind Moore Gym.

According to Gerard Gray, the physical plant director, the expected completion date will be sometime in August of 1977. The approximate cost of this facility is $3.4 million dollars.

The site will house 7,500 spectators for basketball games, classrooms, hand ball courts, locker rooms for men and women, a visiting team locker room, dance studio, swimming pool, and several offices.

Coaching must be innovative.

Some of Reynolds' other innovations include the diamond defense as well as the mismatch defense with zone principles.

Aside from his professional responsibilities, Reynolds is the father of three children and a veteran of the armed forces. He also holds a certificate in corrective therapy dealing with the rehabilitation of muscles.

A smooth and stylish dresser, Reynolds has lost a few hairs from the top of his head and he may have picked-up a few gray ones as well, but his tall body has remained fit and trim.

Despite all the pressures of being a young head coach, Reynolds has virtually removed all memories of the former A&T coach. Everyone loves a winner especially Aggies.

New Gym Costs $ 3.4 Million

By Archie Bass

The Aggie fans and players will have something to cheer about and play harder for next year with the new construction of the A & T Gym directly behind Moore Gym.

According to Gerard Gray, the physical plant director, the expected completion date will be sometime in August of 1977. The approximate cost of this facility is $3.4 million dollars.

The site will house 7,500 spectators for basketball games, classrooms, hand ball courts, locker rooms for men and women, a visiting team locker room, dance studio, swimming pool, and several offices.

Leading the way for the winners was Eva Patterson who hit a career high of 31 points. No other player approached double figures.

Aggies Will Meet Rams Tonight

By Craig Turner

A&T, posting an impressive 10-1 overall mark and an undefeated conference slate, will venture outside the MEAC Friday night to face Winston-Salem State in the Winston-Salem Coliseum.

The Aggies will also end a torturous four-game road schedule Saturday as they return to the friendly confines of the Greensboro Coliseum.

The Rams of Winston-Salem State were an early 73-65 victim of the fourth-ranked Aggies in December. But, since then, Winston has been a devastating force in the CIAA.

Coach Clarence "Big House" Gaines' club has reeled off a 10-4 record with its last six wins in a row. The colorful coach was available late Tuesday for some comments on the upcoming game.

When questioned about the emergence of star guard Tom Paulin, Gaines was not sharp with adjectives. "Anyone who averages 27.5 points per ball game can't be overlooked. We'll go to him when we get the chance. You almost have to," explained Gaines.

"We know that (James) Sparrow and that crew have a fine ball club and can do a lot of things. They ran us off the floor over there. So there is a revenge motive," Gaines said.

The Bulldogs of South Carolina State will invade Greensboro the following night. A&T came away with a surprising 80-72 victory a week ago in Orangeburg, S.C.

Tim Autry's club is led by All-MEAC guard Harry Nickens (6-1) and center Carl Green (6-8). Alex Barron has had a disappointing year thus far, but remains a threat still.

Game time for both contests is set for 8 p.m.
