Vet Tutorial Program Begins

By Anthony Motley

The tutorial service for veterans at A&T is underway for this semester. According to E.D. Hargrove, the tutorial program is designed to assist vets in succeeding in their college work.

The veterans administration will reimburse vets for any funds that they spend for tutorial help up to $60 per month for a total of 12 months over a four year period said Hargrove.

Hargrove explained that the tutors are chosen from the various departments on campus. The veteran counselors send letters to the heads of the departments or to the school deans. They in turn select qualified juniors or seniors and send the list to the veteran's office on campus. After the list has been compiled, stated Hargrove, the vet has several persons to choose from for assistance.

The program is structured on an individual basis thereby giving the vet a chance to meet with his tutor at varying times. The vet and the tutor enter into a contract in which the vet pays $2.50 per hour to the tutor. A tutor can be selected from the community but it will probably cost more, remarked Hargrove.

Hargrove said that the program was started in 1972. In the creation of the vet program it was realized that vets in service, especially those in wars, were trying to survive and now they need help in making a transition. Therefore, the veteran's administration was based on full time recruitment and outreach, counseling, and tutoring.

The 1974 bill was updated to insure that each qualified veteran and dependent would receive $720 towards his education.

Last year there were 210 vets in the tutorial program. At the end of each semester that vet's grades are averaged to see what progress is being made. The program has been considered a success at this point.

Urban Affairs Assistant To Speak Wednesday

Arthur A. Fletcher, assistant to President Ford for Urban Affairs, will speak in the ballroom of the Student Union, Wednesday, October 13, at 7:30p.m.

Sponsored by the Memorial Union, Fletcher will address students on the need to keep abreast of urban problems.

In his capacity as urban affairs assistant, Fletcher monitors the administration of policies and programs that impact the nation's urban affairs areas and makes policies and program management recommendations for the President's consideration.

Prior to his current assignment, Fletcher was the president and Chief Executive officer of Arthur A. Fletcher and Associates, a Washington, D.C., based employment standard in Government relations consultant firm.

Some of Fletcher's other professional experiences include serving as the Executive Director for the United Negro College Fund where he mobilized a drive for the nation's Private Minority Institutions of Higher Learning. In addition he served on the American Delegation to the 26th session of the United Nation General Assembly.

From May 1969 thru September 1971, he served as Assistant Secretary for Employment Standards at the United States Department of Labor. Prior to that, he was a Special Assistant to Washington State's Governor Dean J. Evans, where he was responsible for coordinating relations between local committees and state government.

Fletcher joined the War on Poverty Effort in the mid 60's as Director of the Manpower Development Project in (see Arthur page 2)

About Cafeteria Protest

Tyson Finally Reveals Plan B

By Maxine McNeill

Tony Tyson, SGA president, introduced a Plan B as an ultimatum to the administration during the protest against the cafeteria a few weeks ago. Now Tyson is ready to reveal plan B but feels it is immaterial.

"Plan B consisted of informing all the alumni, national and local, and the parents about the things that were happening at A&T," said Tyson. "If things regress, we will still mail the letters out."

Tyson feels that most of the grievances are being answered. He said Dr. L.C. Dowdy, chancellor, was unaware of the inconveniences the students face at A&T. When Dr. Dowdy was informed, Tyson said he acted immediately.

"I would like to hear what more have to say because they have a lot of input in A&T," said Tyson. "Parents are very effective. Without them, a lot of students would not make it."

Tyson wishes students were more serious about their stay at A&T. He wishes students would rely more on the SGA representatives.

"I wish the students would take things more seriously," said Tyson. "I would like students and all other people who are interested to stop by my office more. My office hours, along with the other officers' hours, are posted on the door. I don't mind answering questions but they would be more effective if the students came by my office."

Tyson said his theme "unity conquers all" still stands.

A&T Security Encourages Students To Label Items

By Tyrone McLean

The A&T police force has a new way of trying to keep students from losing their valuables by labeling them. Norwood McMillan, director of campus security, said that anything that is valuable to the student should be labeled. Items such as T.V.'s, tape players, cameras and record players just to name a few, should be labeled.

The labeling process is going on now in many of the dorms. "When the announcements are made, bring down your valuables and get them labeled," said McMillan. They will be labeled with your license number; then a

Morrison Gets New Counselor

By Carlese Blackwell

One of the new faces around A&T's campus is that of Ms. Angela Swan. Ms. Swan is a new dorm counselor in Morrison Hall.

A native of Burlington, Ms. Swan says that she has never worked as a counselor, in this sense, before. However, she has worked as a counselor for both the retarded and with the prison system. This work, she stated, was done in South Carolina.

When asked how her employment at A&T came about, the young counselor explained, "I was interested in doing graduate work here at A&T, and I was also seeking employment. Thus, someone referred me to Dean Piggott, and I got the job."

As for problems related to Morrison Hall and its residents, Ms. Swan says that she finds them to be fewer than she had expected. She stated, "The act of getting to know students, seems to reduce many problems."

Ms. Swan is a graduate of Spelman College in Atlanta, Georgia. In addition, she is working on a masters degree in school psychology here at A&T.

Concluding, Ms. Swan says that she is very much satisfied with the work here because it satisfies her interests very much.

Civil Liberties Union Vows To Help Ku Klux Klan

DENVER AP-The American Civil Liberties Union says the Ku Klux Klan is "obnoxious," but it is rallying to the white supremacist organization's side against what it calls threats by Denver District Attorney Dale Tooley.

"Tooley doesn't get to decide who gets to stay in Colorado," state ACLU Director James H. Joy said Friday. "He went beyond his bounds."

"We find their organization obnoxious. But, until it can be shown that the Klan plans illegal action, they have the right to organize."

Tooley had summoned visiting Grand Wizard Jerry Dutton to his office on Thursday and told him that he and the Klan were not welcome in Colorado.

"I explained to him that under the First Amendment, he has a right to be here, but not a right to be welcomed," Tooley said. "I wanted him to know that what he does in the South he may not be able to do up here number then a number will be given to you so you can have a way of tracing your articles."

"Many of the students on campus think that all the policemen do is go around giving traffic tickets but it's more to it than that," McMillan said. "They care about your safety. Many times they put in long hours, usually on their own time and without pay, just to try to keep this campus safe for students."

The labeling process is just another way in which the campus police show they care, said McMillan.

Nelle's Corner

As part of their current tour "Chicago" will be appearing at the Greensboro Coliseum on Monday, October 18.

The first rule of success is to introduce a concept and dilute it until it becomes palatable to large numbers of people.

Ever since a spectacular entrance into the chart-bound experience in the late 1960's, Chicago has continued to evolve musically, personally and spiritually.

Classically trained, the members of what became Chicago after a time known as Chicago Transit Authority (CTA), moved to Los Angeles to quickly establish themselves as the creators of what was truly a new music for its time and began to present this music to the public.

If any one person has been closely tied to Chicago's success, it is Robert Lamm, the band's singer-songwriter and keyboard player.

The woodwind mainstay credit goes to Walter Parazaida, who feels that music has always been a part of his life.

Danny Seraphine, drummer, feels that to be a good

Honorary Art Fraternity Reorganizes Once Again

By Evelyn Massey

Kappa Pi International Honorary Art Fraternity, which has been inactive on A&T's campus for some time, was officially registered on A&T's campus September 24. It is an honor fraternity for Art majors only. Though called a fraternity, Kappa Pi accepts males and females as members.

The organization has been rekindled for the purposes of promoting higher scholastic achievement among art majors and to aid them in the development of more goals toward professionalism. More unity within the Art Department as well as more contact with other departments are also objectives of Kappa Pi.

Eligibility is based upon academic achievement as well as a student's work in the visual arts. Besides being an art major, candidates for Kappa Pi must maintain a better than average overall grade point and an exceptional average in their major. They must also be nominated by a member of Kappa Pi, in good standing.

Officers of Kappa Pi are Lorenza Smith, president and treasurer; Leanice Smith, secretary; and Thomas Davis, parliamentarian.

Anyone interested in knowing more about this organization should contact any of the above officers or one of the faculty advisors, Leroy Holmes in Frazier Hall, or Mrs. Eva Miller, in the Taylor Art Gallery in Bluford Library.

I HAD CANCER AND I LIVED.

Gene Littler

It's possible to go into an annual checkup feeling terrific. And come out knowing something's wrong. It happened to me. The doctor found what I couldn't even feel... a little lump under my arm. If I had put off the appointment for one reason or another, I probably wouldn't be here today. Because that little lump I couldn't feel was a melanoma, a highly aggressive form of cancer that spreads very quickly. It's curable—but only if found in time.

So when I tell you, "Get a checkup," you know it's from my heart. It can save your life. I know. It saved mine.

Have a regular checkup. It can save your life.

First Meeting Of Art Club To Be Held October 21

The Art Club was officially registered on A&T's campus September 24. This club is designed for Art majors, minors and people with a genuine interest in art.

The purpose is to promote the visual arts on campus and interest the community in some of the things going on in art on A&T's campus.

The officers of the Art Club are Thomas Davis, president; Debbie Thomas, vice-president; Barbara Whittaker, secretary; Veronica Johnson, treasurer; and Lorenza McCann, parliamentarian.

Anyone interested may contact the above officers or come to the meeting which is scheduled for October 21 at 6:30p.m. in Frazier Hall in Room 115.

Cadet Captain Thomas Price Leads 'Run For Your Life'

By Charles Perry

The Department of Military Science is sponsoring a run-for-your-life program every Tuesday and Thursday morning. Activity begins at 6:15 with a variety of exercises for warm ups before the mile to two-mile run.

The Program's purpose is to benefit anyone who wants to keep in good physical condition. Run-for-your-life is commanded by Cadet Captain Thomas A. Price.

To participate all one has to do is sign up at the Department of Military Science, Campbell Hall.

There are presently 41 students enrolled in the program. Upon completion of 50-100 miles the participant is awarded a certificate and a colorful patch.

Enough Is Enough Band Members Voice Problems

Injustice against Blacks still exists in America. The most recent case (if it can still be classified as recent), is that of one member of the "Scottsboro Boys."

For over 30 years, Clarence Norris, one of the men tried in that case, has lived with the horror of someday being sent to jail for a crime he obviously did not commit.

In that particular case, Norris and seven other Black young men were accused of raping two white women. The eight men were tried and convicted. Later, in a second trial, they were convicted of the same crime even though the two women who accused the men of rape confessed that they had lied about the incident. A third trial was held with the outcome unchanged.

Norris, who now lives in New York, runs the risk of being sent back to prison if he comes back to Alabama to ask for a complete pardon. According to one Alabama official, Norris will not be considered for a pardon as long "as he remains a fugitive from justice." This writer wonders if he meant 'just us.'

What does the man have to do to prove his innocence? This is surely an unjust decision on the part of the judges and jury. "You don't have to eat a whole pig to know you are eating pork." Why can't the state of Alabama see this?

The "Scottsboro Boys" and their families have suffered long enough for alleged crimes that should never have gone to court. I say let these poor harassed people alone. Enough is enough!

President Ford should intervene in this case. Surely Mr. Norris' "crime" is good enough for a presidential pardon. Ford made it his business to give a complete unconditional pardon to Nixon. Norris already has the support of New York's Abraham Beame. NBC-TV thought enough about the case to make a movie about it. Surely the President can do something.

If Mr. Ford should decide to pardon Norris, it may give him a few extra Black votes in the upcoming November general elections. If he can't do it for humanitarian reasons, then he should do it for the sake of a few votes because he needs all the help he can get and then some more.

REPRESENTED FOR NATIONAL ADVERTISING BY National Educational Advertising Services, Inc.
 360 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10017

To the student body of A&T State University:

As vice-president of the Blue and Gold Marching Machine, I feel that I am qualified to speak for all band members.

We are tired of making excuses to you, our classmates, about past performances that "you" feel were not up to "your" standards and expectations.

First of all, let me say for the final time we are working, in every sense of the word, under a number of serious handicaps. It's no joke to have to wear a uniform having some parts more than 12 years old. Greensboro does not produce enough safety pins, needles and thread for each band member to be secure in his uniform each week.

Secondly, while Bob Williams, our director, should be in his office writing music and originating patterns, he has to be in the Dudley Building fighting for funds that have been allocated to us; but, because of "Dowdy and his dastardly doers", we are not receiving these funds.

Thirdly, the quality of our instruments is beyond "poor." Some students can do no more than merely hold their instruments together during a half-time show let alone play them.

Lastly, if we have no support from you, the student body, whom are we going to get it from? You go out and practice three to four hours a day,

Monday through Friday and sometimes Saturday and Sunday, in the rain and cold and mud, you put on a uniform with a hole in the crotch as big as the one you put your leg into, you try to play a drum with a torn head and splinted sticks, you try to dodge rocks and other physical abuse following a performance, you try to do an effective half-time show with these handicaps and then see how much you would gripe.

To the student body I say, keep up the complaining and you may not have to worry about seeing us perform at home; see how much fun you have snapping your fingers at the Homecoming half-time!

Warren "Toby" Bryant
 Vice-president, Blue and Gold Marching Machine

Love Is... Is Homecoming Theme

To love is an intensifying experience that befalls one at least once in a lifetime. Being in love is an experience proclaimed by those gratifying few who see life as the essence of everything beautiful. For is not love beauty and beauty love? Both, in turn, enhance and complement one another.

So is our theme for Homecoming 1976, the beginning of a new time, a new year, a new era; LOVE, LOVE, LOVE..... "the threshold of everything beautiful."

In order to promote total student participation in the planning phase of the Homecoming activities, the phrase, "Love is..." will be left open to be completed by all campus organizations, clubs and dormitories involved in the decorations and coronation and coronation festivities.

All organizations and clubs are asked to complete the initial theme to their understanding of what "LOVE Is". Parades floats, dormitories and cars are asked to be decorated accordingly.

Alphas Initiate Fund Drive

Editor of The Register:

Members of Beta Epsilon Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Incorporated are members of only one organization of many who recognize the need to fight against sickle cell anemia.

The Alphas initiated a fund raising campaign at last Saturday's game against Norfolk State for this worthwhile cause which was a success. The brothers wish to thank especially the student body, faculty and friends of A&T. Special thanks go out to the people of the Greensboro area for their participation in the sickle cell drive.

We feel that the donations that were received will be a great financial asset to aid in research for a cure for those that stricken by the disease called sickle cell anemia.

The Alphas are contributing $170 to help in this research. Once again, Alpha Phi Alpha wishes to express its sincere gratitude to those who contributed to the fund raising project.

They Were Freshmen Too!

By Maxine McNeill

When freshmen enter A&T, they have several adjustments to make. These adjustments include their new surroundings, dormitory life, and the unfriendliness of some upperclassmen.

Many upperclassmen act as if being a freshman is a disease. Instead of trying to help the freshmen, they would rather laugh and criticize them.

Criticizing a person is easy, but it seems to take a lot out of a person for him or her to help someone.

Though many upperclassmen try to forget it, they were once freshmen. They did not always know where all the buildings on campus were located, and the other things they needed to know in order to function at A&T, one of them being, of course, how and where to party.

When these upperclassmen graduate and attend graduate school at other universities, if they plan to, they will be in the same predicament the freshmen were in when they first arrived on A&T's campus.

They were naive in the sense that they did not know anyone or exactly how to act but not naive to the degree that no one will want to know or help them, this reporter hopes.

Minister Opposes Death Penalty

The Associated Press
 Many persons who might oppose the death penalty are not taking a stand on the issue because they do not believe execution will actually begin if there is no public outcry, a Tennessee minister who opposes the death penalty said here Saturday.
 "But it will happen in three Southern states in January unless something changes, and it won't take long for the wheels to turn in North Carolina," said the Rev. Joseph Ingle of Nashville.

Ingle, director of the Southern Coalition on Jails and Prisons, addressed a "strategy conference" which is aimed at blocking re-enactment of North Carolina's death penalty.
 Ingle, who said he is in the 89th day of a fast protesting capital punishment, said he thinks the general public in North Carolina "doesn't want to see people executed."
 His group hopes to delay the General Assembly's vote on a new death-penalty law when the legislature convenes in January.

Ingles, who says "killing is killing, and the state has no right to kill anyone," said that although his coalition opposes capital punishment on moral grounds, it also argues that society does not need the penalty for protection.
 "We're getting along without it very well. I think we can get along without it forever," Ingle said, adding, "Have you noticed any increases in murder since the court struck down this state's death-penalty law three months ago?"

Mrs. King Speaks On Inadequacies

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)-Corretta Scott King, wife of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr., said high national unemployment, economic injustice and inadequate education plague the country.

 She said the country has lacked moral leadership for eight years and urged the audience to vote in the November general election.

 The KKK played a major role in Colorado affairs back in the 1920's, said an expert on the state's history. "They had Denver pretty well sewed up," the 85-year-old historian said.
 Nollie Mumey said the Klan was controlled by Grand Dragon John Locke back then, and his influence resulted in the election of a governor, a U. S. Senator, Denver's mayor and many local officials.
 The stranglehold was broken, Mumey said, when Roman Catholics and Jews organized and refused to buy from businesses owned by Klansmen.
 "We stared them out," said Mumey, himself a Catholic.
 "The ACLU doesn't agree with any Klan views, except their right to exist," Joy said. "Nonetheless, we will offer our services to them if they face any official harassment."

Black Fugitive Asks For Pardon

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—After living as a fugitive in the North for 30 years, a man believed to be the last surviving member of the "Scottsboro Boys"—symbols of Southern racial injustice in the 1930's is seeking a pardon.

Clarence Norris, then 19-years old, was one of eight Black youths sentenced to death in the electric chair in 1931 for allegedly raping two white women on a freight train traveling through north Alabama.

The youths became known as the "Scottsboro Boys" for the small north Alabama town where their first trial was held. After a series of highly publicized appeals, the defendants were retried in Decatur, Ala., before Circuit Judge James E. Horton.

Despite the fact that one of the alleged victims, Ruby Bates, told the court that she and her companion, Victoria Price had fabricated the rape story, the jury found the defendants guilty again.

Judge Horton promptly set the verdict aside and ordered a new trial.

Interest in the case was renewed last spring by an NBC movie, "Judge Horton and the Scottsboro Boys," based on the second trial.

The third trial of the "Scottsboro Boys" also resulted in convictions, which were upheld. Four of the defendants were released from prison outright by Gov. Bibb Graves in 1937 in the wake of persistent public pressure.

Norris was paroled seven years later, but returned to prison to serve a two-year sentence for parole violation.

When he was paroled again in 1946, he fled the state.

In petitioning the Pardons and Parole Board for a full pardon for the 65 year-old Norris, his attorneys said he has been living quietly in New York City for 23 years, with his wife and two teen-aged daughters.

Board Chairman Norman F. Ussery said this week he would not even consider a pardon for Norris "as long as he remains a fugitive from justice."

If Norris returns to Alabama, Ussery said he would have to be jailed without bond. After which, the effect of the apparent parole violation on his case would be considered.

In an August 5 letter to Ussery, Alabama Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley cited the "overwhelming evidence of Norris' innocence" in recommending a "full and complete pardon so that in these later years of his life he will not bear the unjust stigma of fugitive."

Baxley said he believes Norris "never should have been charged," and "that his 15 years spent incarcerated in Alabama prisons can only be termed tragic."

Joining Baxley in supporting the parole request are Mayor Abraham Beame of New York, U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits.

After the broadcast of the "Scottsboro Boys," a Union Gap, Washington woman claiming to be Ruby Bates filed a $2.5 million damage suit against NBC and two of its Alabama affiliates charging invasion of privacy.

'Bloom' Makes Gamble Pay Off

By Craig Turner

When scouts take a close look at Joseph Bloomfield, they will often times write the Rockingham senior off because of his minute size. There are simply few centers in college football who stand 5-10 and weigh 225 pounds.

But A&T took the risk and recruited this undersized lineman when Bloomfield left high school four years ago. That gamble has paid off with numerous dividends as Bloomfield is now considered to be the finest center in the MEAC.

"Bloom," as he is nicknamed by teammates and friends, came to Greensboro primarily as an offensive guard. "When I first came to A&T, there were six offensive guards so I didn't get much playing time at first," recounted Bloomfield.

Eventually, injuries began to take their toll in the interior line of the Aggies and Bloomfield was switched to center. "I would play as a guard so there I was as a volunteer when center opened up."

Bloomfield gradually worked into the starting slot in the fourth game of the Aggies' 1973 season and has been there ever since.

A&T has become one of the most prolific offensive football teams in Division II. No small amount of credit belongs to the offensive line and Bloomfield was very appreciative of his teammates.

"All the seniors have a great deal of pride in their blocking. We all worked real hard in the weight program this summer.

Guys like Greg Roberts, Ron Aiken, Wheeler Brown, and the rest make it a lot easier for the entire unit."

Becoming a top center is not an easy piece of work, according to Bloomfield. "You know the center gets popped every day. It doesn't disturb me anymore. I know I'm going to get hit, so I just concentrate on the snap and not the man. If you don't, then you'll fumble. I haven't done that in two years."

The industrial technology and electronics major explained about the difference between the two Aggie quarterbacks, Ellsworth Turner and Gary Alliniece.

"I am so used to Turner and his cadence that I can tell when he wants the ball. I don't get to work that much with Alliniece so our counts usually are pretty readable."

Bloomfield not only is a fine center he is also one of five co-captains on the 1976 Aggie squad. "It's a great honor that I never thought about or expected. I guess I've always been a good follower. I'm thrilled to death about it and I'll try as hard as I can to do the job," said Bloomfield.

Bloomfield's final comments were indicative of all senior Aggies players. "We are number one right now. After the two bad seasons we had when we first got here, we've been after that championship. Last year we got there and now we feel like we want to go out winners."

No matter what lies ahead for

A&T this season, whether it be a championship or something else, Bloomfield will leave A&T nothing less than a winner.

A&T was embarrassed last Saturday night against Norfolk State. That's right. Despite winning 13-7, A&T looked like the team that lost rather than the victor.

The A&T offense, after four straight weeks of consistent performance, looked like they had never played a football game before, until last weekend. The performances by some individuals were almost laughable.

Coach Hornsby Howell was correct in his statement that "We stunk up the place. We didn't play worth a damn." The only really bright spot of the evening was the defense. It seemed that this unit came of age against the Spartans.

The win can be directly attributed to the defense because of the blocked punt that occurred in the first quarter that gave A&T the lead and its winning margin. There can be nothing but a pat on the back for a young secondary that pulled together after the Florida A&M loss. Again the line play was superb.

Howell was also correct in his comments that he coached a bad game. He did do some things in the Norfolk game he wouldn't ordinarily do. There were a few foulups that he himself took responsibility for. He won't get an argument from this reporter. I agree.

Howell also promised that some things are going to be different this week when the Aggies host winless Maryland-Eastern Shore. If that statement is indicative of past history, then A&T will be in for some rough times in practice. UMES will be in for an even rougher time Saturday.

There is one side note of interest. The Maryland-Eastern Shore-Morgan State game set for Princess Anne, Md., last Saturday was rained out.

Now rarely is a college game rained out, but the Maryland field was under six inches of water Saturday afternoon.

It really doesn't matter that much. The Hawks are 0-4 this season, 0-21 over two years and haven't scored a point this year. I imagine the crowd there would have been the same without the flood.

Aggies Defeat Spartans 13-7

By Craig Turner

A&T played perhaps its worst game of the season, but still managed to defeat a strong Norfolk State team 13-7 last Saturday night in Memorial Stadium.

A disinterested crowd of about 8,000 looked on as both teams squared off in what was billed beforehand as an offensive show. A&T played ball control throughout much of the first half although it wasn't the offense that gave the Aggies the lead.

After the A&T offense was stopped just short of the goal line on a fourth and short yardage situation, Norfolk gained possession.

The Spartans were unable to advance any further than the three-on-two plays. Norfolk then decided to kick on the third and long yardage.

Defensive end Dwaine Board broke through the Spartan line to block the punt. Jerome Simmons then recovered the ball in the endzone with :46 to go in the first quarter.

The Aggie defense stopped a serious Spartan drive early in the second quarter when freshman back Tony Currie recovered a Norfolk fumble at his own 44 second quarter when freshman back Tony Currie recovered a Norfolk fumble at his own 44.

A&T drove 44 yards inside the Spartan ten but elected to go for a first down on a fourth-and-two situation rather than an easy attempt at a field goal. Fullback Ron Scott was stacked up, and the ball went over.

Norfolk almost scored late when Jackie Simmons' kick was ruled wide from 26 yards out. Halftime stood 7-0.

There was very little action in the second half except for the two scoring plays of the half.

A&T's cause was helped considerably early in the third quarter on a diving interception by freshman Earl Ricks.

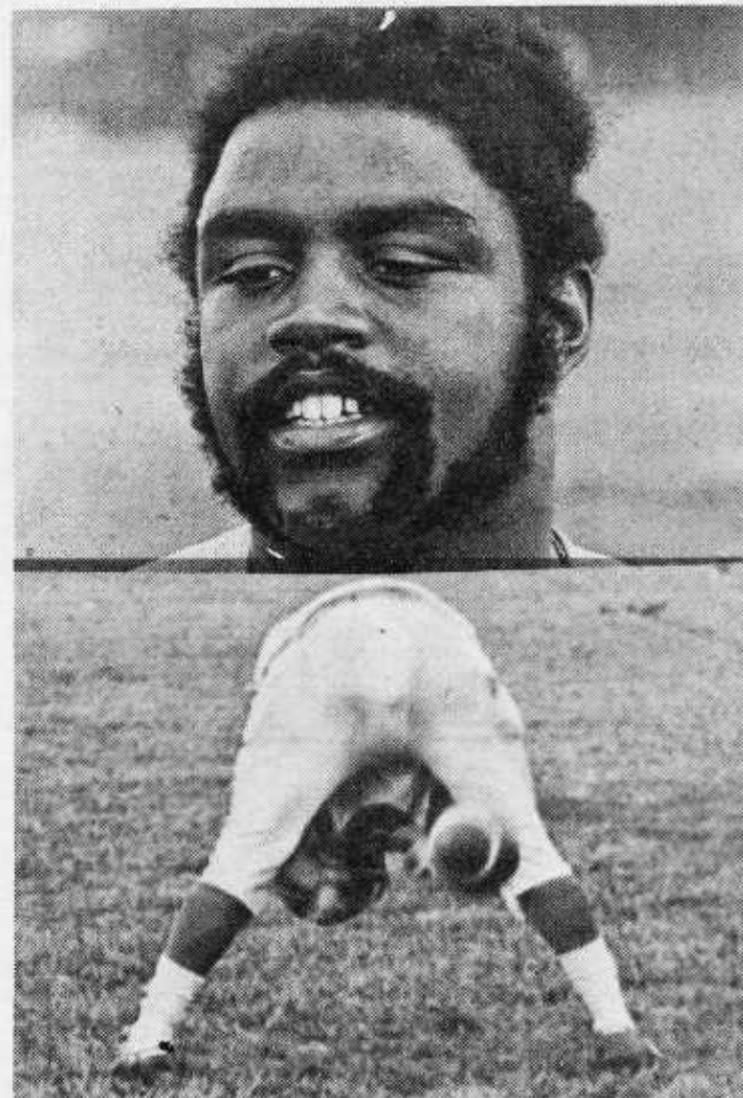

The Aggies used plays to go 49 yards for the score. Turner went three of four in the passing department in this march.

Sophomore George Small scored the third touchdown of his career on a two-yard dive. The point after was blocked at 12:55.

Norfolk got its only points early in the fourth quarter on a 22-yard scoring pass from Henry Sheppard to tightend Ronnie McCoy. Simmons added the point after with 14:57 to go in the contest.

It appeared that the Spartans would make a contest of it, but a young and budding A&T defensive unit shut down the passing of Sheppard and the running of Lurue Harrington to claim its fourth win of the year against one loss.

Golf Club To Begin On Campus

By Tyrone McLean

Golf, anyone? Yes, golf is finally coming to A&T and all interested persons both male and female students and faculty members are invited to come organize a club.

Richard Watkins, a High Point College graduate now working on his master's at A&T in the field of physical education, sees the need for a golf club. He said that it's time for Blacks to get involved in what once was called a white's man game.

Watkins said it will take time to get fully organized but he would like to know how many interested people there are and then the program could grow from that group.

There will be a meeting at 4:30p.m., October 14, in Moore Gym. All interested people are asked to support one of the newest sports to hit the Aggie family.

AGGIE SPORTS

Basketball Season Coming Soon

By Archie B. Bass

With football at its mid-way mark, slowly but surely, eyes are looking at the 1976-77 basketball squad.

The Aggie basketball squad is under the leadership and guidance of Warren Reynolds. Reynolds as head coach has exemplified his ability as a coach by producing championship teams three out of the four years he has been at A&T.

With the loss of seven players from last year's squad, only three lettermen return—L.J. Pipkin, Steve Cassell, and Caleb Johnson.

"It is difficult to replace individuals like Ron Johnson, Ray Perry, Dexter Boone, and Sinclair Colbert because they had experience as players and were acquainted with the overall team concept," said Reynolds.

"Even though we lost seven lettermen, Sinclair Colbert will be the hardest to replace because of his defensive and offensive play, particularly in rebounding," Reynolds continued.

Reynolds noted that the big man is a key factor. "Last year we got recognition because we had the big center in Sinclair Colbert at 6'10" and James Sparrow, the big guard, at 6'6," he said.

One of the weak factors about the Aggie basketball squad this year will be the lack of experience. Reynolds explained, "This is the youngest team I've coached since I have been here at A&T, in terms of experience of the system we have here at A&T, and in terms of the conference."

In summation Reynolds optimistically said, "We are one year away of producing another outstanding team, perhaps winning the MEAC title three consecutive years."

The Aggie coach recruited heavily in the guard position and in the center. Some standouts in the guard position are Earl Davis, Willie Robertson, Ricky Reynolds and Mike Gillespie.

"We feel we have recruited the best center in terms of talent that has ever been here at A&T," said Reynolds. This statement applies to the heavily sought after prospect, Melvin Palmer, 6'10, 205 lbs. Daryl Samuel, 6'11 will also give the Aggie attack immediate help in the pivot.

Reynolds suggested that he had recruited more swing men. Caleb Johnson heads the list as a returning veteran, co-captain Joe Starks, Gregory Evans, and Charles Wright. In fulfilling the forward position, the Aggies appear to be in good shape with players like Edward Vickers, 6'5, Joseph Starks, 6'5; Steve Cassell, 6'7; L.J. Pipkin, 6'10; Kenneth Smith, 6'8; and Daryl Sanders 6'11.

Reynolds stated that each individual on the team has the ability as a player, but feels the mental pressure that will be put up against them is the key thing to overcome.

The inexperience of the team is displayed with the selection of the co-captains, L.J. Pipkin, and Joe Starks. "This is the first time in the history of Aggie basketball that two sophomores have been co-captains," said Reynolds.

Reynolds expressed his views in playing tough foes like N.C. State and Oral Roberts, "as an experience, even though there is tremendous pressure not only on A&T but in representing other Black universities.

Also whenever we are given a chance to compete against these schools, we see signs of progression to our overall programs at A&T."

Asked about James Sparrow's absence from the team, Reynolds stated, "He will be missed not only in his greatness in terms of ability, but in the interest of the crowd which he entertains so well."

"In spite of all the opposition, you must keep on to be a winner," added Reynolds.

Reynolds expressed his philosophy as coach by saying, "One's mental attitude, physical attitude toward the winning concept—hard work and dedication—develop winners."
