Location Will Not Affect Educational Segregation

By The Associated Press

Locating a school of veterinary medicine at North Carolina State University in Raleigh would neither impede nor advance desegregation efforts in the state's system of higher education, an official of the University of North Carolina conceded Wednesday.

Dr. John Sanders, UNC vice-president for planning, testified several hours in a U. S. Middle District Court lawsuit brought by persons seeking an injunction against location of the school at the Raleigh campus.

The plaintiffs, including civil rights representatives, contend the veterinary school should be located at predominantly Black A&T State University.

Otherwise, they contend, educational segregation would be perpetuated.

Sanders, testifying for the state and UNC system, said the Board of Governors' decision to establish the school at N. C.

State was made out of "educational considerations" and not racial considerations.

The board was concerned about "where the best school could be placed," he said.

Regardless of the school's location, its enrollment would be overwhelmingly white, Sanders said.

If that were true, responded, plaintiffs' attorney David James, placing the school at A&T would cause an infusion of white students to a predominantly Black campus and "enhance the disestablishment of a dual system" of education.

Sanders replied that a program's beneficial effect on a campus "is only one of the considerations" in trying to decide where to locate the program.

The hearing concluded Wednesday. Judge Eugene A. Gordon gave each side until Jan. 15 to file final written briefs on the motion for an injunction.

UNC President Friday Removes Name From List

CHAPEL HILL (AP)-University of North Carolina President William C. Friday has asked that his name be removed from any list of possible cabinet appointees in President-elect Jimmy Carter's administration.

Friday said in an interview at his home earlier this week that he relayed the request to Joseph D. Duffey, an assistant to Carter aide Hamilton Jordan.

Friday said Duffey called to talk with him Monday and "I expressed to him at that time that I wanted my name

April Distribution Expected

Yearbook Meets Deadlines

By Maxine McNeill

The yearbook staff has met all its scheduled deadlines on time and expects the 1977 book to be ready for distribution April, said Dr. Jesse Marshall, vice chancellor for students affairs and advisor to the yearbook.

"Because of my personal interest in seeing that the book is in print and returned on time, I have been working very closely with the editor and yearbook staff to see that we get a high quality book, and also, that we produce the book in the confines of the budget allotted," said Marshall. "From what I see so far, I believe the students will be pleased with the yearbook we plan to have in their hands during the month of April," he continued.

According to Dr. Marshall, the staff has experienced only minor difficulties producing the yearbook. He said the production of the book was delayed briefly but the staff worked hard and made up the time.

The staff is presently facing a Dec. 17 deadline. Afterward, Jan. 14 and Feb. 14 deadlines are scheduled for the staff.

One thing which held up the progress of the yearbook was the negligence of students and organizations to meet assigned dates for pictures, Dr. Marshall said the staff hesitates to omit anyone.

"This year's book should be good because the staff is well organized, skillful and knowledgeable about the contents and knows about the interest of the students and what students want in the yearbook," said Dr. Marshall.

Blue, Gold Marching Machine Records Long Playing Album

By Lynelle Steven

The Blue and Gold Marching Machine under the direction of Robert A. Williams recorded a long playing album Thursday night.

"To my knowledge this is the first long playing album ever recorded by this band," said Williams.

"The recording took place in the Paul Robeson Theatre at 8:30 p.m. and will consist of tunes performed at football games.

The recording was done by Ray Perry and Associates but will be on the label of Tom Britten Associates out of Montana, Ala.

Subscriptions will be distributed before the holidays begin.

Also the band will be performing in the Inaugural Parade of the Honorable James B. Hunt, Jr., as Governor of North Carolina.

The parade will be on January 8, 1977. All band members are asked to return on January 4.

The dorms will open at 9:00 a.m. and there will be band practice at 5:00 p.m. All band members are urged to attend.

1977 Selection Of N.C. Fellows Is Next Month

The 1977 Selection of fifteen (15) North Carolina Fellows will take place January 7-9, 1977. All freshman students who are interested in applying for membership may request an application from Mrs. Carolyn Crosson in Room 10, East Gym or call 379-7708.

The North Carolina Fellows Program is an extra curricular program for students with special talents. The activities include bi-monthly meetings, discussions of major issues with leaders of today, tours of areas of special interest in the United States, summer internships, and others. These activities are financially sponsored by major private corporations for the personal development of talented students.

"I indicated to him I would do work like I did this summer," he said, referring to his chairmanship of Carter's task force on education.

"This is the kind of work university people do in and out of government," said Friday, who was an adviser to Presidents Johnson and Nixon on education and campus unrest.

Numerous reports since Carter's nomination however, indicated Friday most likely would be named to head the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

things. This is especially true for our youngsters. To them this is the time of the year for Santa and his merry reindeer.

Students at A&T's child development center recently discussed what Christmas means to them.

Shawn Shepard, a five-year-old, stated, "Christmas means getting toys from Santa Claus."

"You get toys and go see Santa Claus and decorate the Christmas tree," stated five year old Njeri Baker.

Navae Barbee said, "If you are good, Santa will bring you lots of toys."

"If you have been mean, Santa will punch you and if you have been good he will bring you toys," stated four-year-old Chris Hams. Lonnie "Tre" Spinks, four years old, said, "It means time for Santa to bring the children their toys."

No matter what Christmas means to you, you can be sure it means happiness.

Entertainment:
Nelle's Corner
 By Lynelle Stevenson

Well, Aggies, here I go again. I hate to do this, but it's eating me up.

This time I'm referring to the level of student and faculty attendance at the various programs offered in the Lyceum series.

These programs are planned, paid for and provided just for your enjoyment and you won't even take the time to attend.

Famous people come from all over to offer you an evening of entertainment and have to perform to an audience of roughly fifty people.

I speak not only to my fellow students but to the instructors as well. You, who are always telling us (students) that we need to be exposed to different things.

The only students and faculty members who are consistent in attending these programs are from the Music Department in Frazier Hall.

So what is this saying? Is it saying that the only people who are interested in exploring different aspects of music or entertainment for that matter, must be music oriented?

If this is true, then what is it saying about everyone else? Is it saying that all they want to hear is popcorn and boogie music? Or even worse, that they are not interested?

I don't want to believe that. I hope that this many people aren't that closed-minded. I refuse to believe that.

Here is the schedule from the calendar of events for January.

-Tuesday, January 11, 1977: Lyceum Series Recital, Chicago Brass Quartet, Harrison Auditorium, 8:00 p.m.

-Monday, January 24, 1977: Lyceum Musical Theatre Production, Voices Inc. "Journey into Blackness", Harrison Auditorium, 8:00 p.m.

Now you have no excuse. You can't say you didn't know.

Open your minds and check into it. You might like them; then again you might not, but you'll never find out unless you go.

Cheese Eating Won't Help Now

By Bonnie Newman

With the time of exams drawing nearer, students are beginning to suffer from a variety of maladies which are anxiety, blues, and constipation.

Anxiety is caused by fear of not making a passing score on the exam. Blues erupt from not knowing enough to pass and constipation is a result of "eating too much cheese" at the last moment.

The term "eating cheese" is common among students at A&T, especially at this time of year. Eating cheese is done mostly by students who have made no effort to improve their grades throughout the semester and then suddenly at the last minute are very much concerned. Therefore, they will go to their instructors, look humble, and proclaim of various excuses such as their grandmother's death in September, their grandfather's heart attack in October, and so forth.

Besides eating cheese, there are other students who use other methods to try to obtain passing grades. Some will start cramming with the hope of learning enough in one night to get them over, while others will do what they have been doing all along—cheat. Then there are those who simply don't care and won't do anything to improve their grades.

As to the cure for these maladies, it is suggested that students begin preparing for their finals at mid-term; that is if that person has an instructor that is willing to aid them by preparing for it ahead of time.

Obviously, the instructor cannot do the student's work for him and cannot simply give him a grade, unless of course that instructor succumbs to the cheese. In the end, the final result of a student's grade should be determined by him or her alone.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS

Here We Go Again

If you thought the veterinary medicine school case was over, think again. There are some who feel the decision to place the proposed school at N. C. State was a mistake. These people are now in court fighting to keep the school out of Raleigh.

Though this writer did not feel the same at the time when the first decision was reached, it now seems that the Board of Governors might have made the right decision to locate the school in Raleigh. With all the recent talk and reports about the administration being unable to or just not keeping good financial records, it only seems just that the state be a little skeptical about locating the school here. Money is very hard to come by these days.

Some of you reading this editorial may be a little, if not a lot angry with my opinion, but too many questionable things have happened this year for this writer to continue believing A&T is the best choice.

We all can talk about how A&T has been mistreated by the state in the past. We can talk about it until we are truly black in the face; but, by the same token, are we not mistreating ourselves when we are not totally united to fight for the school?

Many may wonder how I have arrived at this conclusion. It has been rumored ever since the vet school issue came to light that some officials did not really want the vet school. I will not call any names. The sources from which this writer got that information are very reliable.

A&T does not have a clean slate, but neither does N. C. State. However, it seems State does have a united front.

If A&T should win the battle, then maybe a few changes for the better could be made around here. If it should lose, which seems to be the case, then things will remain the same.

Letters To The Editor

Department Needs Chairman

Editor of The Register:

It is high time a university of the stature of North Carolina A&T State University, stop letting its students down by allowing the Speech and Theatre Department to stumble along without a chairman.

For the past 18 months, the department has not had a permanent chairman. Because of this, students have not received the proper and necessary guidance and counseling. For example, Bernadette Anderson served for one school year "as temporary coordinator" of the Speech and Theatre Arts Department. The students of course turned to her for guidance because she represented authority.

She made evaluations, judgments, and recommendations on her authority. She subsequently left the university to study, leaving the department and the students in limbo.

Students now find that what they were told by their coordinator last semester no longer applies because that coordinator is no longer here to enforce her promises, evaluations and decisions.

Now, some students are being told that they must take courses that they were previously informed they would not have to take. Needless to say, this disrupted many students' schedules.

There is no immediately accessible counselor available; therefore, the administration or the proper officials in charge should designate a permanent chairman.

Students Express Wishes For Christmas Season

Dear Santa:
 c/o The A&T Register

In order to conserve paper, we have compiled a list of the basic needs of all the A&T students in this one letter. For Christmas we would like the following:

-New band uniforms, which we were supposed to have received years ago.

-Improved conditions in the cafeteria, such as (a) better food, (b) a more efficient system of serving.

-Better living conditions in the residence halls: (a) extermination of all pests (those having more than one set of legs...ants, roaches, etc.).

-A dormitory to alleviate the overcrowdedness of the residence halls.

-A rush order for our own legal olympic size football stadium and track field.

A Time To Share

By Mary E. Cropps

The Christmas season is one of joy for many of us. It is a time in which we celebrate the birth of our Savior and in which joy and peace are spread throughout the world.

The Christmas season is also a time for sharing not only joy but material things as well. There are many people in this country who cannot afford the staples of daily life much less toys and good times for their families.

Most of us here at A&T have known the joy of a Christmas filled with toys, good food and good times. Although we now complain about living conditions in the dormitories, most of us have comfortable homes to return to during Christmas break.

So now, let's think about someone else. Let's take this time of the year seriously and share some of our material goods.

Several organizations on campus are sponsoring food and clothing drives. Boxes have been placed in dormitories all over campus. Students have been asked to donate food, clothing and toys, but for the most part, these boxes have remained bare. No one has taken the time or trouble to sort out their old, unwanted clothes or to buy a can of green beans and put it in the boxes.

The food and clothing that will be collected will be distributed to needy families in the community. No worthier cause can be thought of. And this is an excellent way for A&T students to get involved in the community and to help the community. Remember, we are a part of the community. So please pitch in and help. It will make you feel good and then you will surely know the joy of Christmas.

Many organizations on campus already know the joy of this season. They have done many things to help the community such as visiting homes for the elderly and giving Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets to the needy. Now is a good time to salute them, so we salute you, who are involved.

To all Aggies, the staff of The A&T Register wishes you a most joyful and warm holiday season.

More Letters

Tyson Comments On Issues

Editor of The Register:

Wednesday night, December 1, 1976, the Student Government Association held its third meeting of the semester along with numerous rallies. Only about 50 students were present to hear the reports presented.

It was also mentioned in November 30 edition of the A&T Register that "the SGA promises a great deal."

First, as President of the SGA, let's back up with my campaign for holding a position in office. I never made any promises to students, faculty, or administration concerning my duties in office. However, I did state that I would do my best to carry out my duties as President if I were elected. Thus far, we have struggled and are continuing to struggle to fight the many battles facing A&T. Just to mention a few---cafeteria, dormitories, parking, etc...

Now, concerning entertainment to be sponsored by the Student Government. I can surely say that we have not been too active. However, let me share a little down-to-earth talk with you. The SGA budget was only $50,600 for the entire year, of which only $20,000 is allocated for 'social and cultural activities' for the entire year. We requested three different amounts for the SGA budget 76-77 during summer school. They were (1) $92,000 (2) 80,000 and (3) $72,000. If we could have received any one of the previous amounts, then I am sure we would have had the type of homecoming desired by many students. Maybe, you should question your administration in Dudley Building concerning the money you have paid for such activities. I think the article written by former SGA President, Ted Mangum, is quite factual and something everyone should look into.

SGA 75-76's budget.....$55,000. SGA 76-77's budget.....$50,600.

Why a decrease in 76-77's budget with the enormous increase in the student body and not to mention the increase in inflationary prices and the cost of living? Why do we have to pay every time for security, janitorial, services, use of facilities such as Moore Gym or Harrison Auditorium when an organization wishes to sponsor an event? Have we not paid for security, janitorial services, use of facilities through tuitions, and activity fees? I have often heard many students say, "we would be glad to pay more than $1.00 or $2.00 to have a better concert or show for homecoming." Have you ever stopped to think that you are being charged twice? The money that you pay for activity fees is utilized to bring concerts and shows on campus; then we charge you again to be admitted to this concert.

After paying this to the university, we hardly have enough money left to sponsor a week for homecoming festivities. Thousands of dollars were paid for convocation, coronation, building the stage in Moore Gym, Brief Encounter, Ramsey Lewis, Tavares, disco, speaker, choirs, rental of sound equipments, transportation, experts in tuning instruments and other matters never mentioned or thought about that made up this $20,000 for homecoming. Does this somehow make you feel a little sick?

Traditionally, the SUAB would sponsor the Friday night show. This is the first year that the SGA had to sponsor both nights. We are lucky to say we had a homecoming based on financial status. We invited all organizations on campus to sponsor the Saturday night show, but none of the organizations was financially able. The SUAB could not sponsor a Saturday night show because of a clause or a law that forbids it from this type of event and can have basically activities in the Union.

I think it is most essential that we all awake to situations facing us at this outstanding Black institution. A&T has graduated many successful people, and I can assume that they went through some of the same hassles students today are confronted with but they survived. Black colleges or universities are the only higher institutions concerned with educating Blacks specifically. If they are abolished, Blacks will have no place to turn to for higher education. In the past, these strong Aggies fought for what they believed in through demonstrations, rallies and conferences.

In conclusion, we have not giving up the battles to win the war. Our offices are still open to everyone to discuss and listen to the problems confronting you.

"Sonny Hill Is On Again?"

NEW YORK — AP — Sonny Hill's off-again role as CBS' pro basketball editor is on again . . . or is it?

"I have not spoken to anyone who has told me what my job will be," says Hill. "Bob Wussler president of CBS told me everything was going to be all right, that I was back on the team. Maybe the word hasn't filtered down yet."

Hill, in his third year with the network, is in limbo as CBS gears up for its National Basketball Association (NBA) coverage. The network starts regular Sunday games Jan. 2.

Hill is on the CBS team again, in theory anyway, but how much he'll contribute remains to be seen. He appeared often the past two seasons as the third man on national telecasts, conducting interviews, analyzing teams. "And now, here's Sonny Hill, our pro basketball editor. Tell us, Sonny what about these Seattle Super-Sonics . . ."

But as the new season approached and CBS decided to go with four regional games on Sundays instead of one national game, Hill was told, in essence, that he wouldn't be needed until the playoffs. "We went to a regionalized concept and budget-wise we could not afford to use a third man on the air," explains Barry Frank, a network vice president. "Sonny wanted to be a color analyst, but I did not feel he had all the qualifications I was seeking as a color analyst."

Hill, a Black who reports on a sport in which most of the players are also Black, contacted the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the noted Chicago civil rights activist and director of Operation Push, a program designed to aid Blacks in business. Jackson has been waging war with the networks in an effort to get more Blacks in meaningful roles.

"None of the networks has a Black sports editor," said Jackson. "None of the major newspapers has a Black sports editor, for that matter. Sonny had begun to achieve a level of acceptance. He has done a marvelous job. If they can cut Sonny without any community response, then they can cut lesser folks."

Jackson's argument is that most of the athletes are Black and most of the commentators are white. "Blacks should have the opportunity to interpret events in which they are so much involved," he said.

Jackson met with Wussler, the man who hired Hill three years ago. Wussler said it was all a mistake and put Hill back on the team. "My impression is that he will have an even broader role," said Jackson.

"Bob Wussler and I have agreed to expand Sonny's role somewhat," said Frank.

Did Jackson pressure CBS into reinstating Hill? "I used nothing but moral pressure," said Jackson. "I would not try to impose a faulty talent on him."

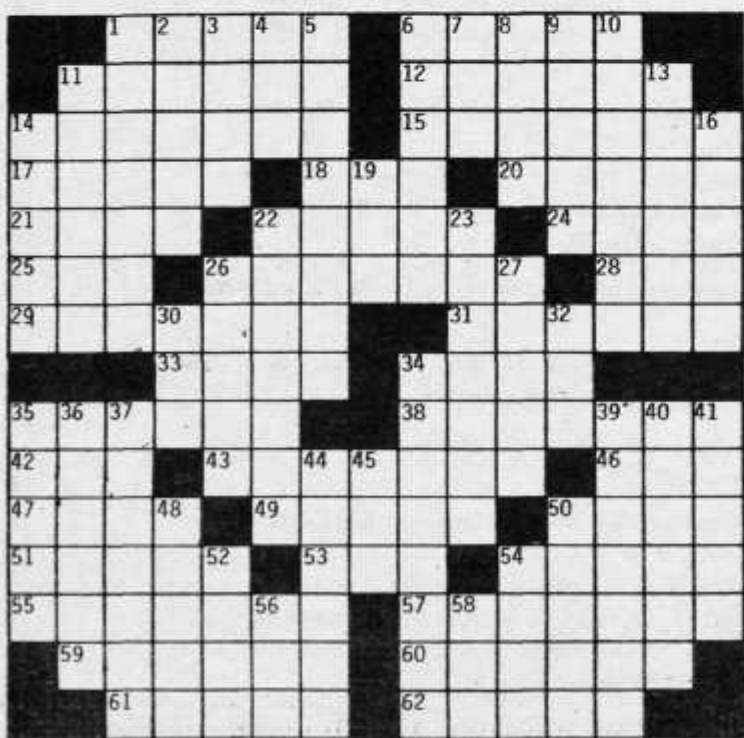

So Hill is back, but how far back remains to be seen. Frank says Sonny will appear on the "Sports Spectacular" show sometimes, occasionally appear on one of the regional telecasts and will somehow keep an eye on the NBA situation despite a "very limited travel schedule." Frank, meanwhile has been branded the villain of the piece in some segments of the Black press for having made a decision he believes in the best interests of the network.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

By Craig R. Turner

Bragging rights, best conference, best fans, and even arguments over coaches will be at stake this Saturday.

Winston-Salem State comes to the Coliseum to do battle with A&T.

The A&T - Winston affair always has excitement as its trademark and usually records don't mean that much.

But this season has been the exception to the rule. A&T has started off in the worst possible way for a young team.

With four lopsided losses to look back on, team confidence seems to be a major point of concern.

This reporter spotted this Tuesday as the Aggies seemed unsure of themselves.

They did not take open shots, make tight passes inside, or even attempt to run a fast break when the situation presented itself.

They seemed to be afraid of making errors, mistakes, and fouls that might cost them the game.

The only word of advice I have is to take some of those risks.

Try to run the break when the opportunity arises, take those open shots, and try to move it around to create some isolated situations.

Young as the Aggies are, they do have a great deal going for them if they just have confidence in their own ability.

Can A&T beat Winston Salem? Well, yes and no. Yes, A&T can if it controls the tempo and the board play.

The Aggies must force Winston to slow it down and play deliberate ball.

This will frustrate a running team into turn overs and bad shots.

But Winston has the experience factor on its side; and with a big game like this, pressure will always be on the younger team.

Up until now, the Aggies are too early into the year to show that kind of poise. It's just too early.

But anything is possible. Whoever wins the battle of nerves will probably win the game. Winston is proven. A&T is not.

Bicentennial Bowl Game May Be Defensive Battle

ORANGEBURG, S.C. (AP)—Coach Willie Jeffries calls Malcolm Montgomery "one of the most outstanding freshman field goal kickers I've ever seen in my 14 years of coaching."

That makes Malcolm Montgomery special and he has proven during South Carolina State's 1976 football season that he can kick.

He has connected on 13 of 25 field goal attempts and 26 of 29 extra points for a total of 65 points, the third ranking scorer in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

Montgomery's longest field goal was 49 yards, second best in conference history.

If Saturday's Bicentennial Bowl in Richmond, Va., turns out to be a defensive struggle, Montgomery's foot could decide whether the Bulldogs win or lose to Norfolk State.

He also kicks off and his kicks play a big part in the Bulldogs' defensive effort.

"I try to get them all into the end zone," he says.

Adds Jeffries, "We haven't had any runbacks against us. We've been able to kick into the end zone or very deep and keep opponents deep in their own territory. This is one of the most valuable assets you can have on a football team."

The 6-foot-1, 192 pound Montgomery can also punt if necessary, but usually acts as a backup to punter Anthony Evans.

Norfolk State, on the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, has compiled a 10-3 record this year, while South Carolina State is 9-1.

Aggies Will Face WSSU Rams

By Craig R. Turner

One of the wingiest teams in Division II history will enter the Greensboro Coliseum Saturday as Winston-Salem State tangles with A&T.

The Rams, coached by Clarence "Bighouse" Gaines, enters the game with a 4-1 record. Their only loss came at the hands of South Carolina State last Monday night.

Gaines, the winningest active coach in the nation and second on the all time victory list, has put together one of his first offensive units in quite some time.

The Rams are led by 6-6 center Carlos Terry. The Lexington product is the prime ingredient in the Rams' rebounding formula.

The forwards will be 6-5 Stenson Conley and 6-6 sophomore Mike Brown. Conley is a tremendous defensive forward and Brown is a potent outside shooter.

The backcourt was a worry for Gaines earlier in the year because of injuries and the graduation of All-America Tom Paulin to the pro ranks.

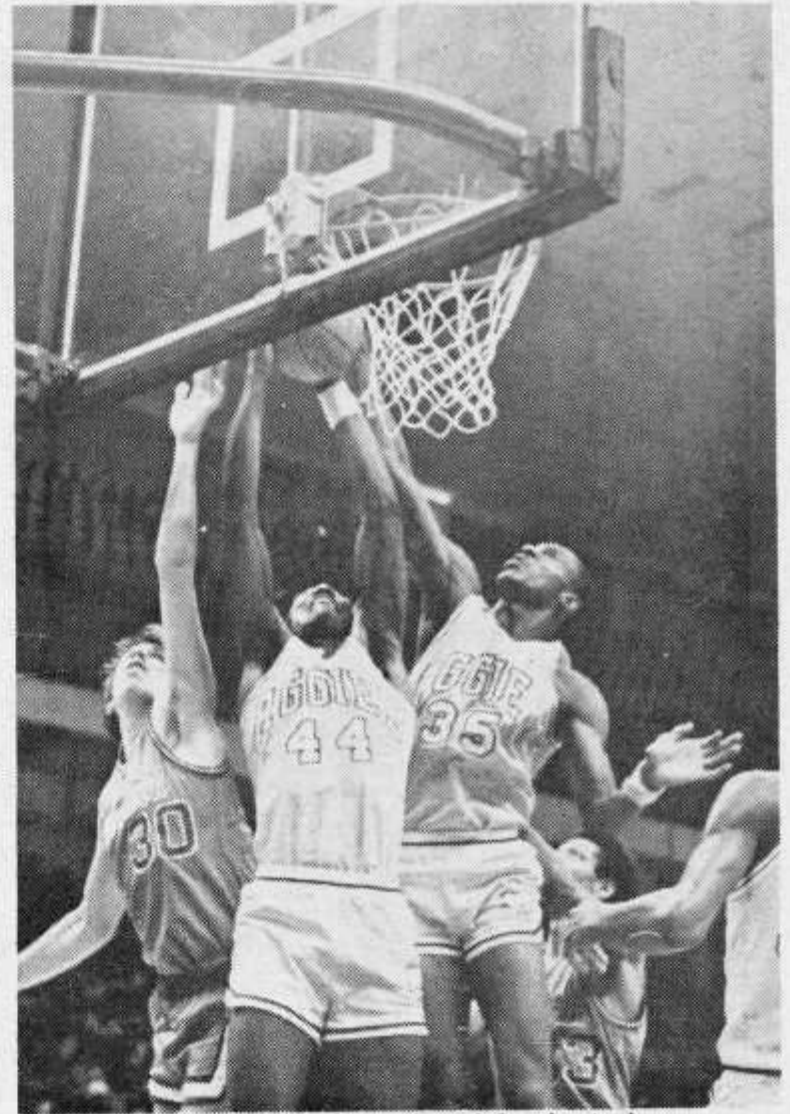

Gaines will rely heavily on 6-2 guard Donald Helton. Helton averaged 16 points as the point guard last season and now moves to the scoring guard position.

The Rams, although lacking a true center, will use a highly mobile fast break whenever the chance arises.

Winston-Salem finished second in the CIAA for two consecutive years to the Spartans of Norfolk State and is picked for that spot again this season.

The Rams are ranked eleventh in the NAIA poll this week and twelfth in the NCAA poll.

Gametime is set for 8 p.m. in the Greensboro Coliseum.

Western Spoils Opener For A&T With 70-52 Win

A&T was unable to get its offense untracked as Western Carolina spoiled the Aggies' home opener 70-52 Tuesday evening.

Western was paced by sizzling shooting of forward Ike Mims as the Catamounts grabbed their first win of the season against two losses.

A&T held minute leads throughout the first seven minutes primarily on the shooting of L.J. Pipkin.

However, Western countered with a sticky 3-2 zone and took control just before the half at 27-23.

The Aggies pulled to within one point at 33-32 with 13:54 to play but never got any closer.

Western used a half court zone press that completely disrupted A&T's ball handling and caused several turnovers.

Meanwhile Western's Mims and Tim Wilson began to move inside for easy shots underneath.

Pipkin collected his fifth foul at 10:11 into the second half. Western held a 44-33 advantage at that stage.

The Catamounts used their fast break offense and Coach Fred Conley instituted a pressure style backcourt zone.

That was the telling factor as A&T's guards were unable to penetrate and the frontcourt was held off the offensive boards.

L.J. Pipkins led A&T with ten points as did Joe Stark. Center Steve Cassell added eight and Keith Davis contributed seven.

Ike Mims led Western with 23 points, and Wilson added 14 to the winning effort.

Winning Season Starts With Wins For Matmen

The Aggie Matmen started on the winning start Tuesday as they defeated Barber Scotia and Livingstone Colleges. In match one, the score was 50 for the matmen and 0 for Livingstone.

In match two the competition was both tough and rough; despite one pin by Barber Scotia, the matmen took over and controlled the remaining matches.

The competition picks up again January 8, 1977, as the Aggie matmen take to the road heading for Chattanooga, Tenn. to meet Tennessee; University of Missouri, and the University of Tennessee.

Now comes Miller time.
