Student Related Crimes Blemish School's Name

By Maxine McNeill

The following is a two-part series on student theft. Today Judge Elreta Alexander comments on the undesirable image this problem causes A&T.

"The increasing crime rate among the students of A&T State University has risen to such an alarming rate that it reflects discredit and dishonor upon the entire university and its constituents," said District Court Judge Elreta Alexander. "Sometimes I feel embarrassed to say that I am a graduate of the university."

said Judge Alexander. The crimes she cited were shoplifting, drugs, telephone fraud, worthless checks, breaking and entering and assaults.

Judge Alexander listed two possible solutions to the problems that plague A&T. The first solution involves having two additional courses added to A&T's curriculum.

"I strongly suggest the university add a mandatory course for the first-year students on political rights and responsibilities," said Judge Alexander. She also feels an elective which would allow students to audit the courts should be added.

Judge Alexander feels that A&T students should take it upon themselves to try to curtail the problem. "The students of this university have a responsibility to police themselves before the courts have to deprive them of their liberty," she said.

The majority of A&T students are not contributing to the rising crime rate, according to Judge Alexander. She said A&T's image is being ruined by only a few students.

"The image of A&T is being so badly blemished by a few students who engage in criminal conduct which invades the rights of other persons' property."

The second possible solution Judge Alexander urges is having the names of the persons convicted of a crime listed earlier printed in the campus newspaper.

"I strongly endorse the idea that the Register appoint a reporter to attend court and list the names of students convicted of crimes," Judge Alexander said. "I am not suggesting that victimless crimes be reported."

Benjamin Forbers, editor of The Register said, "I have no sympathy for the student who steals. If printing their names in The Register will ruin the chances for a career, then I would not advocate it."

White Is Elected To Board

NEW ORLEANS—Dr. Frank White, Dean of Arts and Sciences at North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University, was elected Friday to the Board of Directors of the Association of American Colleges at the annual meeting here. His election was announced by Dr. Fredric W. Ness, president of the Washington-based association.

The Board of Directors of AAC composed of leading educators from colleges and universities across the United States under the chairmanship of Dr. Paul F. Sharp, president of the University of Oklahoma. AAC is a national association of more than 600 institutions which serve as settings for humane and liberal learning.

Before becoming dean of Arts and Sciences at A & T State in 1973, Dr. White was chairman of the History Department there. He has also served on the faculties of Bishop College, Texas College, Jackson State College and Shaw University. He has also been the Director of several National Defense Education Institutes in History.

Dr. White is a member of the Board of the Council of Colleges of Arts and Sciences and a member of the American Conference of Academic Deans, the American Historical Association and the Association for the Study of African-American Life and History. He is also chairman of the Greensboro-Benin (Nigeria) Sister City Committee.

Students Will Travel To Howard Conference

Five A&T students will travel to Washington, D.C. Thursday to attend the Sixth Annual Communications Conference.

The conference, sponsored by Howard University, will be held at the Mayflower Hotel, February 17-20. Those students attending are Mary Cropps, a senior in the English Department; Archie Bass, junior speech major; Lucinda Moore, senior English major; Johnny Hunter, junior speech major, and Rhonda McPhatter, senior speech major.

According to Omega Wilson, coordinator of the mass communications program at A&T, the conference has several purposes. He said the major purpose of the conference is to expose mass media students to professional media representatives from throughout the country. He added that there will be representatives from radio, television, newspapers, and

Fund Raising Drive To Start

By Benjamin T Forbes

It is possible that the A&T football team could be playing some daytime games in the proposed new stadium by November.

Dr. Albert E. Smith, vice chancellor for development and university relations, said, if construction on the facility is started in May, it would be possible for some football games to be played there in the fall.

Although official plans on the stadium have not been released, Smith did say construction and completion of the stadium would be in different phases.

In the first phase, Smith said 15,000 to 20,000 seats would be constructed. This phase could be completed by the fall. The facility would have natural, rather than artificial turf.

Phase two of the concrete structure would include a stadium club, while the third phase would include lighting. Smith pointed out that lighting alone would cost approximately $40,000.

He added that the initial 15,000-20,000 seat stadium could later be expanded to seat approximately 50,000 spectators. When completed, the cost of the facility would be between $3.5 to $4 million.

A fund raising drive will be kicked-off in March. Smith said funds will be solicited from alumni, friends of the university, and the corporate community. He estimated $51,000 had already been collected through pledges and cash contributions.

A pre-campaign unveiling of the proposed facility will be held next Monday at the Cosmos Club.

Official plans on the stadium are expected to be released in three weeks, Smith said.

Mathematics Students To Offer Tax Service

Students of the class in mathematics of business and finance at A&T will offer a free income tax filing service for the elderly and low income residents beginning Monday night in Merrick Hall.

Miss T. E. Bradford, teacher of the class, said the students will be working under the Internal Revenue's Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program (VITA).

The students will be available in Merrick Hall on Mondays through the tax season from 6:30 p. m. to 9 p. m. in Room 205.

Help will be available on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10

a. m. to 2 p. m. The students will operate the service also in the Council House of Morningside Homes on Wednesdays from 6:30 to 9 p. m. and in the St. James Baptist Church, Florida Street on Thursday nights from 6:30 to 9 p. m.

Persons interested in the service are asked to call Miss Bradford at 279-7822.

It was eight years ago that the A&T students first began operating the unique service in the Greensboro community. Mrs. Bradford said it is an excellent teaching technique and it gives the students a sense of really reaching out into the community.

Students To Attend Conference

magazines, and local as well as national organizations.

In addition to attending lectures and workshops, the students will have the opportunity to participate in interviews with the organizations represented, Wilson said.

The conference will also serve the purpose of exposing students to some job possibilities that they may not have considered in the field of communications, Wilson said. Also, professional media people will coordinate workshops on contemporary issues in media.

Besides being exposed to media representatives the students will have the opportunity to meet other minority students from across the country and to meet minorities who have been successful in media, Wilson remarked.

Several well-known personalities have attended the conference in the past. Benjamin Hooks, the only Black FCC commissioner, and William Graves, world renowned film maker, are two who have attended.

Theatre Presents Ramsey Lewis

By Lynelle Stevenson

Ramsey Lewis, the holder of seven gold records, the recipient of three Grammy Awards and composer of "Hang On, Sloopy," will appear Saturday, February 19, in Stewart Theatre's Jazz/Pop Series.

Lewis fits no categories—rock, classical, gospel, jazz and pop are all equally his medium.

Communicating through music since he was fifteen, beginning with the Cleffs and developing into the famed trio, Lewis studied formally and informally by listening to one pianist for his technique and another for his harmonic treatment.... The success of albums such as "Upendo Ni Pamoja," "Bach to the Blues" and "Don't It Feel Good" revealed this identity fulfilled.

Ramsey's performance at Stewart Theatre offers a highlight in an outstanding season. He says that, if one feels that art is to be shared, one should interpret it in a way that people can enjoy it and enjoy is a mild description.

There will be two shows at 7:30 and 9:30. Tickets will be available at the door. There are special rates for NCSU students. For further information call 737-3105.

University Art Circle To Aid Senior Citizens

The Art Circle of A&T State University will sponsor a senior citizens week Monday through Friday in conjunction with the "Language of African Art" currently being exhibited in the Taylor Art Gallery.

The students plan to contact senior citizen organizations through the Council on Aging and invite them to view the exhibition.

Veronica Johnson, a member of the student organization, said the students will assist the senior citizens in obtaining transportation to the university. The visitors will also be provided with refreshments by the students.

"We just wanted to do something for the elderly," said

Miss Johnson, "because they are often forgotten." Persons desiring information about the project are asked to call the art gallery at 379-7784.

SGA To Present Poetess In Dramatic Show

By Lynelle Stevenson

The Student Government Association (SGA) will present Romana Austin in a dramatic presentation entitled "New Seed."

Romona Austin, Black poetess and actress will perform on Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the Union Ballroom of the Student Union.

In her nearly two-hour show, she will dramatize the works of Richard Wright, Imamu Baraka, Nikki Giovanni, Sonia Sanchez and Gwendolyn Brooks.

Austin holds a B.A. degree in English from Simpson College and a bachelor of fine arts degree in directing from the Memorial Theatre School of Drama.

The presentation will be the first feature of the celebration of Black History Week. Admission is free.

Entertainment: Nelle's Corner

By Lynelle Stevenson

Well Aggies, I promised you a little on-campus entertainment; and, although limited, here it is.

On Wednesday, February 16, Ramona Austin, Black Poetess and lecturer, will present a recital on the topic "The New Seed." The recital will be held in the Union Ballroom and will begin at 6:00. Admission is free.

On Thursday, February 17, a program on Black History from the focal perspective will be held in Harrison Auditorium. The A&T Dance Company will perform also. The information doesn't say what time or whether admission is free or not so check around campus for posters.

Now, let me tell you about another show to be held at the Greensboro Auditorium.

Victor Borge, one of the most honored names in show business, will be presenting "An Evening of Music and Mirth" on Friday, February 18, at 8:30 p.m.

Borge made his concert debut in Copenhagen, Denmark at the age of 8 and overnight was hailed as a prodigy. However, his talents as a humorist were not discovered until years later when he was requested to replace an ill performer. From that moment he began his dual career as a master musician and humorist.

Victor Borge's career was soon halted by the Nazi invasion of Denmark. Almost penniless, he arrived in the U.S. in 1940. Although a celebrity in his homeland, Borge was unknown in America, and for the next year he lived on .25 a day, spending much of his time in movie houses where he learned to speak English. Eventually he was heard at a private party and was asked to perform on a radio show.

The comic is really a one-man musical comedy. As often as one may have seen him, his broad lunacy is a fresh, new and exhilarating experience.

Tickets are $4.50, $5.50 and $6.50 and are on sale at the Coliseum Auditorium Box Office and Belk in Friendly and Four Seasons.

Well, that's it. That's all I have to tell you right now. So check out the programs; you'll be glad you did.

The deadline for removing incomplete grades assigned the Fall Semester of 1976 is Friday, February 25.

Something Must Be Done

Some North Carolina State Senators are still insisting that the taxpayers of this state prepare to build a 28,000 to 30,000 basketball arena. The arena will be the home for a lot of ACC basketball games.

Now I wonder what on earth gave them (those senators supporting the bill) the idea that all the people in North Carolina are ACC fans. The facility, if built, would be located in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area. The majority of the taxpaying public does live in that area. They would be paying for something that they probably would never get a chance to see or use.

These senators would rather waste millions of dollars on a facility that isn't needed than to aid the state's educational system—and it needs all the help it can get.

And A&T—it is struggling to build a 7,000 seat arena for which it has been trying to build for years.

What annoys this writer is the fact that the state lawmakers are always complaining about not having enough money to fund programs at its colleges and universities. Yet, for something of personal interest, there is no limit.

Any senator that would be willing to waste the taxpayers money on such a foolhearted adventure should not be in office.

Something must be done now to stop this state from going ACC-crazy. If something isn't done soon, Black schools in this state won't have a chance to survive in the sports world.

WEEKEND HIGHS BRING ON MONDAY'S LOWS.

Is It Worth It?

By Mary E. Cropps

A recent article in The A&T Register stated that six to eight A&T students are arrested each week for shoplifting. This information was made available by the local assistant district attorney, Joseph Williams, who is also an alumnus of this university.

The statistics he stated are atrocious. It seems inconceivable that A&T students, who are supposed to be young adults, would engage in such an undertaking as shoplifting.

College students were once thought of as exceptional young people who would someday be the leaders of this country. This is especially true for Black people. Our fathers and mothers expect the most of us. They expect us to lead the kind of life they dreamed we could and the kind they never did. They don't expect us to go downtown and steal some foolish item and get arrested.

Besides disappointing our parents, being arrested for stealing (and shoplifting is stealing) provides a student with a record—a criminal record. We all know that one thing a young Black person does not need is a criminal record. A criminal record may prevent you from obtaining a good job one day. This sort of thing seems to pop up especially if it concerns a Black person.

The district attorney also mentioned that the students who steal do not come from poor families. He said that they are pressured by their peers. If this is true, then some A&T students are too immature to be attending this university. At this point in our lives we should be able to make our own decisions and not let anyone influence us, especially into committing a crime. If we don't know the difference between right and wrong by now, then we don't need to be here.

Williams emphasized that he wants to protect A&T's good name and not try to protect these students. In essence, he said that the offenders would be on their own because he feels A&T's reputation is more important. In addition, Williams said that the present judge "does not care about anybody," so shoplifters could be in for a rough time.

There are so many reasons why A&T students should not shoplift; one can only wonder why. If they take into consideration what the consequences will be, then they should be mature enough not to do it. And is anything worth disappointing your parents for, obtaining a criminal record for and being subjected to embarrassment for? Is it worth it?

Minister Provides Alibi For 5 Of 'Wilmington 10'

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Five members of a group imprisoned in connection with the 1971 firebombing of a Wilmington grocery were at a minister's house for three hours before the incident, the Charlotte Observer reported Saturday.

The group, known as the Wilmington 10, received prison sentences totaling 282 years following the incident. Mrs.

Anne Sheppard Turner, the only white member of the 10, also is the only defendant to have been paroled.

In separate telephone interviews with the newspaper, the Rev. Eugene Templeton and Patricia Rhodes said the Rev. Ben Chavis, Marvin Patrick, Reginald Epps, Connie Tyndall and James McKoy were in Templeton's home.

Templeton now lives in Morristown, N.J., and Ms. Rhodes in Philadelphia.

They never testified during the trial and defense attorney James Ferguson of Charlotte said he could not subpoena them from their out-of-state homes.

Ferguson said he could not obtain depositions for use in court because he learned too late that Templeton and Ms. Rhodes refused to testify voluntarily.

"After the store started burning, no one left the house until someone came in and said a lady's house next to the store was burning and asked if we could help her move—some furniture," said Templeton, 33, who is now chaplain and executive director of the Morris County Chaplaincy Council.

Templeton said several persons, including some defendants in the house, went to help and returned 30 to 60 minutes later.

Chavis and the others were convicted mainly on the testimony of Allen Ray Hall, the chief prosecution witness, who testified all 10 were present at the firebombing.

Hall has since stated he perjured himself during the trial.

Cheryl Armwood Stands Out

By Joe Faust

Although interest in women's basketball has just recently caught on in North Carolina and around the country, it has always meant a lot to A&T freshman standout Cheryl Armwood.

Since her junior high school days in her hometown Mt. Olive, she would spend countless hours shooting jump shots, working on defense, and keeping herself in top condition.

Armwood is currently averaging 10.7 points and 9.3 rebounds a game for the A&T women's team. Although this is her first year of college competition she plays with the poise and intelligence of an experienced performer.

"I've been playing basketball for six years now but I didn't get really serious about the game until my sophomore year in high school," said Armwood, a 5-9 physical education major.

"I went to the Campbell College basketball camp where I got a lot of instruction from Jerry Steele and Bob Hodges. They taught me a lot of fundamentals and it was during this camp that I really started to gain confidence in myself as a player and as a person.

"It was my first time away from home and it was an integrated situation. I was scared at first but by the end of the camp I had progressed enough to make the finals of the free throw and one-on-one playoffs.

"I didn't win that year, but I returned to win both championships the following summer."

Armwood carried her talents back to Southern Wayne High School where she averaged 15 points a game and led the team to the state playoffs. Her play was so impressive that she received scholarships from the University of North Carolina, East Carolina University, High Point College, and Peace College.

She decided to attend A&T

only a few days before her graduation.

"I was seriously injured during my senior year and some of the schools withdrew. I had heard a lot about A&T and when I met Coach Joyce Spruill at the state playoffs I was impressed with the program.

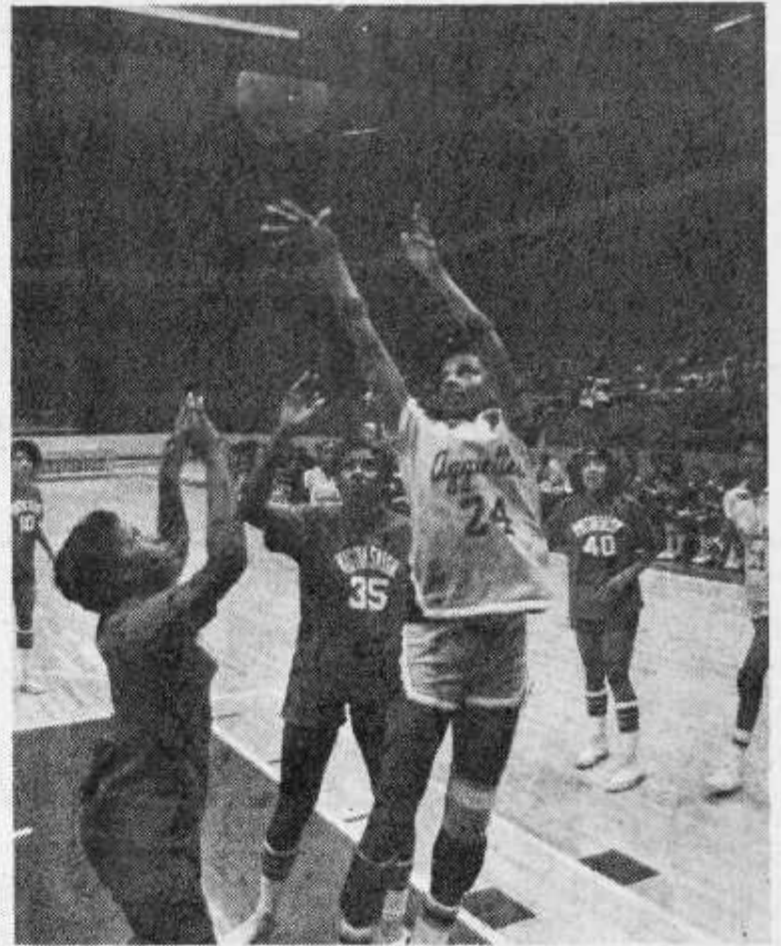

"My mother liked A&T also and that also had a great deal to do with my signing."

Thus far Armwood has been the most consistent player for the Aggies who are hoping to advance further than the first round in the upcoming ACAIAW Tournament in Raleigh.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

By Craig R. Turner

Almost everyone who was present for last Saturday's game between Howard and A&T is wondering what happened?

Howard University scored nine straight points in less than ten seconds with five coming from the free throw line.

Let me try to explain this incident as best I can. Howard's Mike Nettles scored on a layup and a foul was called on forward L.J. Pipkin.

Coach Warren Reynolds protested the call and was charged with a technical foul by the official.

During the ensuing argument, another technical was called on A&T bench.

Now, here is the catch. The rules governing technical fouls were changed before this season whereas a technical incurs two free throws instead of the usual one.

Therefore, there was a free throw awarded on the original play, two shots awarded on the technical on Coach Reynolds, and two shots awarded on the technical involving A&T's bench.

Howard regained control of the ball and scored another field to completely pull away from A&T. A nine-point turnaround in a two point game is too much for even the finest teams to overcome. The rest is history.

In reference, to Friday's upset win over Morgan State, A&T played its finest game it may play the entire season.

Defense was the key difference and recollection of some crucial turnovers and rebounds will bear this out.

A&T has been able to score on almost everyone it has played but has been equally lax on defense.

Now that the Aggies have proven they can play against the best in the MEAC in a given game can they put it together by the time next week's tournament rolls around?

That is something no one can answer. *****

South Carolina State seems well entrenched in first place in the MEAC with Howard, Central and Morgan nipping at the bulldogs' heels.

But despite S.C. State's apparent "Cinderella" success, the championship has to be assumed to be the property of the three main trailers in the race.

Tournaments, especially the early games, have always separated the very best and the not so good. The sixth MEAC tournament will be no different.

Aggies Surprise Bears 72-71

By Archie B. Bass

Who says the Aggie basketball team does not have a shone, star?

Well, Keith Davis, the Laurinburg Institute product shone, bright Friday night, as the Aggies trimmed Eric "The Pencil" Evans and the Morgan State Bears, 72-71.

"The word got around campus that Eric Evans said he was going to score 50 points against us," said Davis. "I said to myself I wasn't going to let that happen if I could help it."

Davis could help it, as he did a superb job on the league-leading scorer. The New York City native completely overshadowed

"The Pencil," even though Evans collected 27 points and 15 rebounds.

The Bears led by as many as ten points during the course of the first-half.

The Aggies didn't fold as they ignited a spurt with 2:06 to play in the first-half on excellent inside play by Keith Davis. Davis' heroic play knotted the half-time score, 31-31.

The first 15 minutes of the second-half was a see-saw scoring battle. The Aggies went ahead with 6:10 remaining in the contest, on sharp shooting by Greg Branch at 60-59.

The Aggie workhorse, Davis, fouled out of the game with 2:22 remaining. The Bears erupted for five straight points to go ahead, 69-67.

The stage was set with the Aggies down by a single point, 71-70, with 19 seconds remaining.

Ricky Reynolds hit a jumper from the top of the key with 2 seconds left which posted the Aggies to their third MEAC victory.

The Aggies were paced by Keith Davis with 20 points and Greg Branch with 16.

"The key factor for this win was the excellent play of Davis and our intensity on defense," stated Coach Warren Reynolds."

Aggiettes Come Back To Win

By Dennis Bryant

In Friday's edition this reporter stated the Aggiettes' reserves were being outscored in their contests. Last night, they were outscored 12-6 at the start of the second half. The Aggiettes were able to battle from behind and win 68-63 in overtime over Virginia Union.

The game was one where neither team could really put it together. The Aggiettes played very poorly. The only thing that saved them were the turnovers by Union.

The Aggiettes outscored the Bears 9-4 in overtime to overcome their deficit and escape with the victory.

In the first half, the Aggiettes played almost as badly as they did earlier against South Carolina State. They made a number of turnovers and could not run a successful fast break. They shot poorly the entire game and could not cash in on the turnovers the Bears made.

After leading 2-0, the Aggiettes went cold from the floor. A&T was outscored 17-8 in the next six minutes. With the Bears leading 21-16, the Aggiettes, led by Eva Patterson and Cheryl Armwood, pulled the Aggiettes into the lead with a 7-0 spurt.

From that point it was an evenly matched game and the half ended 30-29, A&T.

The second half started slowly for A&T as the reserves fell behind quickly on baskets by Connie Banks and Virginia Watson at 41-36. From that point the Aggiettes, led by Natalie Rogers' eight points, came to tie the score at 52-all with 4:25 to play. The two teams traded baskets before the Aggiettes pulled to a 59-56 lead.

The Bears tied the game on a freethrow by Corine Turner. With the score tied at 59, the Aggiettes controlled a jumpball situation in their circle.

With the score at 63, Patterson was fouled and connected on both ends of the one-and-one to give the Aggiettes the lead for good. Cheryl Armwood scored another basket with 56 seconds to go to make it 67-63.

Mamie Jones stole the ball and was fouled. Her freethrow was good and accounted for the final score. The victory upped the Aggiettes' record to 12-2. A&T outrebounded Virginia Union 52-38, but shot an unimpressive 26 of 79 shots for a 33% night.

The Aggiettes were led by Cheryl Armwood with 15 points and twelve rebounds. Natalie Rogers with 14 points, 12 the second half, Eva Patterson with 13 points and ten rebounds, and Charlene Henderson, with ten points.

The Bears were led by Connie Banks with 14 points, Virginia Watson with 14 points and 18 rebounds, and Debbie Dixon with twelve points.

The Aggiettes go to Durham Tuesday to play NCCU and face Bennett College on Thursday at Bennett. The NCCU game is set for 6:00 p.m. while the Bennett game is at 7:00 p.m. Support the Aggiettes and be inere.

Cheryl Armwood Enjoys Playing Defensive Role

"My role has changed since I've come to college and now I am more of a defensive player than an offensive one," she said. "In high school the offense was built around me and if I didn't get my number of points we usually didn't do very well.

"We have a lot of players who can score here and I can concentrate on defense. It all goes back to my early days when I used to practice playing every position.

"I've had no trouble playing the pivot. Interest in women's basketball at A&T has really grown and so far this season the team has had two complete sellouts. Despite the large crowds, Armwood maintains she plays as well before fifty people as she would before 4,000. "When I'm out on the playing floor I try to tune everything out and just concentrate on what I'm doing," she said. "Concentration means so much in basketball, if you lose it for just a second you could cost your team two points."

As for the future, Armwood would like to try out for the 1980 Olympic team and when her basketball career is over she hopes to work with the physically handicapped.
