Both conferences for educational administrators from across the state are being sponsored by the division of instruction and the North Carolina State Department of Public Instruction.

Thursday's seminar will begin at 2 p.m. in theaul Robinson Theatre. The state will also sponsor other reading conferences at Appalachian State University and at East Carolina University.

Job Market Isn't Tight
For Female Accountants

If the job market is tight, it isn't tight for the women accounting majors at A&T State University.

In fact, the young ladies in the School of Business and Economics are besieged by offers of employment ranging from $12,500 to $15,000. "This is a testimonial to our fine program," said Dr. Quiester Craig, dean of the school, "and also to the fine performance of the ladies and the men in the program."

A recent interview with five of the students scheduled to graduate in May revealed that the young ladies are highly enthusiastic about their futures in the public accounting field. "I became interested in accounting while in high school," said Miss Hilda Pinnix, a native of Efland. "I took a course in bookkeeping and that sold me."

Miss Pinnix said she would like to become a controller in a major corporation. Another student, Miss Thelma Anders of Raleigh, said she would like to be a partner in a CPA firm. Miss Anders has a 3.9 average. "The one thing I like about this field," she said, "is that you can be a career woman and still combine a career with a marriage."

Diana Williams of Greensboro said she was attracted to the study of accounting because it is "mind boggling." Miss Williams has an overall average of 3.6 on a 4.00 point scale.

Dr. Craig said that approximately 40 percent of the A&T's current accounting majors are women. He said that, as a rule, all of the students get the opportunity to participate in an off-campus work experience, either in the summer or during the school year. The five young ladies interviewed have all worked for a major accounting firm.

"We are pleased that the women are in the high performance group of each class," said Dr. Craig. "The field of accounting is an open field," he said, and about 80 percent of our graduates, men and women, get accounting-related positions."

Ford Officials Will Conduct Program Here

Officials and executives of the Ford Motor Company will exchange their plush offices and desks for a few hours on a university campus next Wednesday when they conduct a College Roundtable Program at A&T State University.

The Ford party will arrive by plane Wednesday morning and spend several hours at A&T meeting with administrators, students and faculty members.

The executives will share small seminars with the students on such topics as "The Product: From Concept to Market," and "An Overview of New Technology."

Later in the day, 21 A&T faculty members and 29 students will travel to Raleigh to attend a dinner with the Ford people at North Carolina State University.

The College Roundtable Program was established by Ford as an effort to promote understanding between higher education and the business sector.

"They want to know what college educators and students think about them," said Dr. Willie T. Ellis, coordinator of Ford's visit to A&T. "They also want to show something of themselves."

Entertainment:

Nelle's Corner

I hope your spring break was enjoyable and that everybody is ready to get back to the books.
The Jacksons and Wild Cherry will be in concert at the Greensboro Coliseum on March 26. However, that's all the information I have. For further information contact the Greensboro Coliseum.

Now, on to a show I do know about.

Billy Joel, a dynamic pianist who is enjoying audiences cross the country, will appear at the Greensboro Auditorium, Wednesday, March 23 at 8 p.m.

Joel's music and style express his intensity as a musician. He revels in the spirit of his song "I've Loved These Days" as he sits at his grand piano playing, stamping, playing harmonica and leading his band.

Joel's career as a pianist began when he started playing classical piano at the age of 7. He started playing with Long Island bands when he was 15, travelling the Long Island Circuit.

In 1968 Joel left the Circuit to record an album with the Hassles. The next year he and Jon Small, former Hassles drummer, formed a duo called Attila and soon cut another album.

After deciding to go on his own, Joel moved to Los Angeles, where he played in a piano bar using the name William Stein. In 1973 he signed with Columbia Records, where he recorded the album "Piano Man," the single becoming an instant AM hit, and several other cuts, including "Captain Jack." He was named Best New Male Vocalist by Cash Box in 1974 following the success of the album, and soon became a tour headliner.

Joel's band includes Richie Cannata, a multi-talented musician who plays organ, strings, tenor sax, soprano sax and flute; Liberty de Vitto, drummer; Howie Emerson, guitarist, and Doug Stegmeyer, bass player.

Billy Joel leaves no doubt that he is the Piano Man. His audiences and fans, totally convinced, are always in the mood for his melodies.

Reserved tickets for the Billy Joe concert are priced at $7.00 and $6.00. They can be purchased at the Coliseum
Box Office, all area Record Bars and Rendick's in Winston-Salem.
Practice What You Preach!

The plight of the Wilmington 10 has become a major topic of discussion in connection with President Jimmy Carter's campaign on human rights. Many political activists are arguing that if Carter can denounce human rights violations in other countries such as the Soviet Union, Korea, and the Philippines, he should do the same here. One must admit the activists have a point.

In his speech to the United Nations last week, Carter said, "No member of the United Nations can claim that mistreatment of its citizens is solely its own business." If that is the case, then the United States has violated human rights as well.

There are a number of violations this country has committed which involve human rights. Mr. Carter has a right to denounce human suppression. But he shouldn't do it unless, as he once said, "we can do the same thing."

Many of the countries are getting upset with Carter not because of his stand on the issue but because they see him as a hypocrite.

If Mr. Carter is so intent on having his way with the human rights issue, then he should practice what he preaches.

Alexander Receives Stipend

North Carolina Congressman Richard Pryor announced that a North Carolina scholar is among the 220 recipients selected to receive National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Stipends awarded for 1977.

Professor Sandra C. Alexander of A&T State University, Department of English, has been awarded a summer stipend that provides each recipient with $3,500 for two months full-time scholarly study and research during the summer of 1977. Stipends are awarded to college and university teachers and others working in the humanities who have proposed projects of high quality and value to the humanities.

This year's 220 recipients of awards were chosen on the basis of national competition from among 1,577 eligible applicants.

The National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Stipends for 1977 were awarded in the traditional disciplines of the humanities such as history, philosophy, religion, and foreign languages. Awards have also been made to study those aspects of the social sciences which seek humanistic knowledge and understanding of the problems they address.

Professor Alexander is a 1969 graduate of A&T State University. She has an MA degree from Harvard University and a Ph.D. in American Literature from the University of Pennsylvania.

With her stipend, Professor Alexander will complete the research and begin the writing of a full-length biography of Arna Wendell Bontemps, a prolific black poet, short story writer and novelist. She will have the opportunity to interview friends and relatives of Mr. Bontemps in Nashville, Tennessee, and Huntsville, Alabama, as well as doing research at Yale University.

Conley Gets Life Sentence

Conley, sentenced Friday to life in prison for the shooting last November of a Virginia state trooper, was convicted of first degree murder charges in Greensville Circuit Court.

Conley was convicted of first degree murder charges in Greensville Circuit Court.

Conley, 33, was accused of wounding trooper Garland W. Fisher in Dinwiddie County, Va., then forcing Fisher at gunpoint to drive his patrol car south and west toward Atlanta, Conley's home town.

North Carolina troopers set up a makeshift roadblock on Interstate 85 just north of Durham and gunfire erupted when Fisher's car reached it.

When the shooting was over, Fisher was dead, and Conley was wounded. He then fired two bullets that were used in Conley's gun.

Conley's attorneys tried to show their client was insane at the time of the shooting. Two psychiatrists said Conley was paranoid schizophrenic with delusions of persecution and hallucinations.

Conley himself interrupted the trial at one point with complaints to the judge he heard voices.

If Conley is exonerated and convicted in Virginia on the charge of kidnapping charges, he would have to serve his North Carolina sentence first.

The Memory Will Linger On

By Maxine McNeill

The tragedies that have confronted A&T this school year could not have been foreseen by any of us. With the basketball team's losing, James Sparrow's death, and our school's losing, we needed the spring break to recuperate.

Hopefully the aforementioned upsets will serve to strengthen our willpower. If naturally our memory will linger on. At this point, the only thing left for us to do is to learn from past mistakes.

Though the basketball team fell low of its esteem this year, it has next year to look forward to. We should stop placing the blame for its losing straying on certain people and just hope the team will improve next year.

These words seem easy to say since they are not being said from the perspective of a person whose life-long dream to play professional basketball was temporarily shattered. Hopefully, that dream was not abandoned. These words also are not being spoken from the mouth of a coach whose career at A&T is rumored to be over.

All of us have to realize that the white gowns which we have taken for granted this university will not be permanent. With our combined efforts, this white gowns can be removed. Then the university will be able to afford the forces of Black advancement and pride dominate.
Community Organizer
To Speak At Institute

Donald Anderson, one of the nation's most successful community organizers against poverty, has been added to the list of speakers for the 8th annual Urban Affairs Institute at A&T State University March 30-April 1.

Anderson, executive director of the National Association for the Southern Poor, with headquarters in Washington, D.C., will participate in sessions on environment and the economy.

It was in 1967 that Anderson, the great-grandson of a Virginia slave, organized the Assembly, which later became hundreds of grassroots community organizations in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee.

Anderson is a lawyer and attended the London School of Economics. He patterned the Assembly after the British Parliament. The sessions of the Assembly are held in rural churches, homes, schools and the participants discuss problems of concern to their communities. The organization has been effective in promoting recreation and public preservation and public health facilities, in seeking increased tobacco allotments and in protecting small farmers against land swindles.

Other panels in the conference will be on employment, the energy crisis, housing and community development, education, criminal justice, the mass media and transportation.

Mayor Jim Melvin will address the opening session of the conference March 30 in the Hilton Inn.

SMITHFIELD (AP) Thousands of motorists traveling through this Johnston County town will see the tall sign which says, "Join the Support United Klan of America, Inc." It also says, "Help fight communism and integration," and "KKK Welcomes you to Smithfield.

The new owner of the property says the sign is coming down. Jimmy Roger Flowers recently acquired the property on which the sign is situated. He says he will have the sign removed but, first, he wants to find out who owns it.

"I don't want to take a mauler and tear down something and get sued for it," said Flowers.

The sign, which has provoked controversy for 10 years, stands beside heavily traveled U.S. 70, at the Smithfield city limits. Blacks and others protested when the original sign was erected in 1967. Five years later, someone chopped it in half.

The Klan erected the more strongly worded sign that is now on display. "It's been more talk than anything else," says Town Manager Hugh Talton. "There have been but a few people that have asked the sign."

Talton says he will be glad to see the sign go.

"I'm sure it belongs to the Klan," says Flowers, but he doesn't know who to contact about removing it. There currently is little Klan activity in the area.

Other lecturers will be Mrs. Mary H. Purnell, director of secondary reading for the state's division of reading; Mrs. garner, principal at the Greensboro schools; and Dr. Barbara Tappett, director of the Johnston County Schools.

A most thorough and deliberate search for two new head coaches is expected to come to an end Friday. A&T will make its announcement on that day as to who will succeed Coaches Horrsey Howell and Warren Reynolds.

No one is sure at this particular moment who the selectees will be although the media has speculated over the last three weeks that Gene Littles of Appalachian State University will be the new basketball man.

No matter who moves into the jobs, there will be a lot of eyes pointed in their directions. A&T has had a long history of athletic excellence in all of its sports endeavors. It rates second to none.

Although miracles are not expected, it is anticipated that some degree of new-found success will be forthcoming. After watching the adversity that the Aggies encountered in both sports this past year, an establishment of a winner would almost be paramount to the longevity of each coach’s career at A&T.

That is not undue pressure but a statement of fact. The new men won’t have the luxury of stepping into a situation were the ingredients for winning are present. They will have to build it from scratch and that is a job in itself.

North Carolina-Charlotte has become the story of the year in collegiate basketball. In the course of just one season, the unheard of 49ers have knocked off three conference champions, defeated the nation’s top ranked teams, the 1976 CIAA tournament champs, Runnin’ Rams and the nation’s number 1 team in the committee’s final poll. As the year winds down, the success of the 49ers will have to be judged against the expectations set by its head coach, Warren Reynolds.

A&T assistant Gene Littles has been the foremost mentioned candidate for the basketball post according to published newspaper and television stories. Littles had stated in late August that he had applied for the job but had not had direct contact from the institution.

It was also learned that A&T has been circulating through press circles as to who the new head football coach would be. However, the replacement is expected by the university’s athletic officials to immediately begin an already delayed spring practice.

A&T also learned that A&T is beginning its final phase of band raising. This project is expected to raise funds needed for a new football stadium to be located on campus at the present practice field.

A&T had accumulated donations from alumni and friends totaling nearly $51,000 with a commitment for $15 million more on the 16,000 seat structure which is to be completed in 1978.

All of the events take place in the aftermath of the surprise resignations of both Howell and Reynolds. Howell stepped down in the aftermath of the surprise resignations of both Howell and Reynolds. Howell stepped down favor of his new post as assistant athletic director and a desire to leave coaching.

Reynolds’ situation was somewhat different as his resignation came in the wake of the school's worst basketball season in its history at 3-24. Reynolds maintained that, as he does now, that his decision was based solely on professional and family considerations.

Spring Brings Increase In Intramural Sports

There will be a swimming meet coming in two weeks. All interested in participating in the sports are asked to see Kevin Willis in the Student Union. The Office hours are from 8-5 in Room 110. Coordinator Gaskins feels the students will have more time to participate in the spring sports. The biggest area is in softball. Last year almost 15 teams participated. This number should increase to 25 this year.

Gaskins also stated that the females weren’t competing in the intramural program as they should. This program is for both males and females. The university provides the intramural program for all the students. So, if the girls want a softball team, we are looking for them to come by,” said Coach Roger McKee.

The intramural program would like to have a representative from each female dorm. From the large dorms, it would be nice to have two or three teams. For more information contact anyone in the intramural office.

On Saturday from 12-4 p.m., there will be a new program starting. The intramural department will rent out bicycles. There will be a small charge of 45¢ per hour with 10¢ to rent the bicycles. Gaskins said bike riding can be more fun when there are people around who want to ride on a Saturday afternoon. We hope to have a successful program.

Gaskins also said the students would sign the roster and then not participate. He feels the students must put forward an honor system if they want us to trust them. “We reach a hand out to help the students and get little or no thanks in return. So, we would like for the students to participate when they sign up. We would appreciate that.”
SPORTS NOTEBOOK

The University of North Carolina, a slightly more publicized sister institution, has also advanced to the final four under some of the most incapacitating circumstances mentionable. After losing starting center Tommy LaGarde to an injury, guard Phil Ford to a hyperextended elbow, and having Walter Davis with a makeshift shooting hand, the Tarheels slipped past powerful Notre Dame and second ranked Kentucky.

One has to wonder just what these two clubs have working in their favor. Maybe it's a root doctor or some magical hex that allows these two to defeat the giants of college basketball. I believe it's more of an invention called the four corners that gives that advantage while UNCC has a fellow named Maxwell who performs miracles. One more will be needed this coming Saturday.
