Aggies Attend Convention

By Videtta Brown

Nagatha Dixon, Videtta Brown, and Willie M. Melvin, junior Mass Communications majors, will attend the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System Convention in New York. The Convention will be held in the Biltmore Hotel Friday, March 17 through Sunday, March 19. Omega Wilson, coordinator of the Mass Communications program, will attend the conference also. The Mass Communications program is sending these students as well as broadcasting professionals to opportunities in the media area.

Ms. Dixon, a Greensboro native, is a Speech and Theater Arts major with a minor in mass communications. Her major career goals are to become an author and to enter television research. Melvin, an English major concentrating in journalism, is from Fayetteville. He feels the conference will help him gain awareness of the mass communications field. Melvin's career goals include becoming a national news correspondent. Ms. Brown from Baltimore, Md., is also majoring in Speech and Theater Arts. Her main career goals are to become a public relations woman and research. She feels the conference will introduce her to other college broadcasting students and professionals.

The Intercollegiate Broadcasting System Convention will make available to the students many broadcast professionals from New York stations and networks, record companies, equipment exhibitions and news services. Each spring the IBS hosts a gathering for college broadcasting of over 700 college radio stations in the U.S., and Canada, and Australia. Over 40 sessions will be offered dealing with broadcast topics.

Landscape Architecture Conducts Minority Workshop

By Dorothy McAulachin

The Landscape Architecture Program held a two-day workshop in Carver Hall on March 13 and 14. The theme of the workshop was "The Role of Minorities in the Profession of Landscape Architecture."

The workshop, organized by Dr. C.A. Fountain, head of the landscape architecture program at A&T, brought together the only two Black Landscape Architecture firms in the United States, Elon Mickels & Associates in Detroit represented by Elon Mickels, and Synterra, LTD., in Philadelphia represented by William L. Wilson.

There were also participants from Chicago, Washington, D.C.; Wiscosin, Berkley, Ca.; Louisville, Ky.; and state and local Black Landscape Architects and students participated.

The objectives of the workshop were to elaborate on curriculum development, recruitment methods, and employment opportunities, qualifications for teaching personnel, and to describe the role of A&T in providing Landscape Architectural education.

Program Seeks Approval

By Anthony Boyd

The Mass Communications Program has submitted plans to have its program approved as a full-fledged department. This is its second request for departmental status, and comes as a result of increased student enrollment in the program. Omega Wilson, mass communications coordinator, also cited dwindling student enrollment in the program. The plan, coordinated by Richard Moore, information services director, will go through several phases and keen competition with other programs before acceptance. In the first phase, permission is sought to plan the department. If permission is granted, plans are then drawn for approval. "Approval would mean that the Board of Governors think our program is the best in the field," said Moore. He continued by saying, "They would be less attractive to an all Black school." Moore also feels justified in his request because of the increase in student enrollment, (See Comm., Page 2)
Handicap Law Presents Changes In Education

The new federal bill of rights for handicapped students (PL-142) and the changes it is making in special education points to the need for a restructuring of public education in America. This conclusion and other broad recommendations affecting public education are contained in a Study Report of "Education for All Handicapped Children: Consensus, Conflict, and Challenge," the release of which will highlight the National Education Association's 61st Annual Conference on Human and Civil Rights in Education, March 17-19 at the Sheraton Park Hotel in Washington, D.C.

The special study follows public hearings held during the school year in Des Moines, Iowa; Savannah, Ga.; and Santa Maria, Calif., by a panel of parents, teachers, principals and representatives of handicapped child advocacy groups. The panel is chaired by Bettie S. Weyer, a classroom teacher in Louisville, Ky.

A recurring theme in the report indicates that the entire educational system is involved, and that parents of non-handicapped children are being led to demand more individual instruction for their children as a result of the implementation of PL-142 in the public schools.

Among the speakers now scheduled to appear are Rep. John Brademas (D-Ind.), Edwin W. Martin, Jr. (Deputy U.S. Commissioner for Education of the Handicapped) and NEA Vice President William McGuire.

Communication Enrollment Increases

150 are now taking courses. The program now boasts outstanding teaching facilities, such as a radio and television studio. A more pressing need for the approval of the department is a lack of money. This program didn't officially begin until 1970 when it received a grant from the Advanced Institutional Development Program (AIDP) and then last October the program received a grant from W.K. Kellogg amounting to $261,000. Salaries, travel expenses, office supplies and scholarships are taken from these grants. In June 1974 the AIDP grant will run out and according to Wilson, the grant will not likely be renewed. And, without the steady flow of money that an approved department would receive, downfall seems eminent for the program.

Oldest Aggie Alumnus Succumbs After Illness

Dr. B.W. Barnes, 93, a retired Greensboro dentist and civic leader, and the oldest living graduate of A&T State University, died Thursday morning in L. Richmond Hospital after a long illness. Revered as one of the city's most beloved citizens, Dr. Barnes in 1971 became the first Black to win the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce's Distinguished Citizen Award.

Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, chancellor of A&T, said, "In Dr. Barnes, the university has lost a friend who can't be replaced."

Dowdy remembers Barnes as longtime treasurer of the A&T National Alumni Association, and one of the founders of the alumni's scholarship program which has helped more than 300 youngsters earn a college degree.

Born on his family's 188-acre farm near Rocky Mount, N.C., Dr. Barnes graduated from A&T in 1918, taught bacteriology and animal husbandry at the university for 12 years before entering the Howard University dental school. He practiced dentistry in Greensboro for 43 years before retiring.

In 1967, A&T dedicated the $1.4 million B.W. Barnes Building as home of the university's Biology Department.

Dr. Barnes got his early education at the Fayetteville State Normal School. He was an active leader of the Church of the Redeemer Episcopal Church, one of the founders of the Hayes-Taylor YMCA, a charter member of the Greensboro Men's Club, a former board member of the L. Richardson Hospital and a longtime member of the Kappa Lambda chapter of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity.

Students Participate In Workshop

Students in the program at A&T combined with the other participants and then separated into groups to discuss and to be enlightened by the knowledge and experiences of the other participants in the workshop.

Luther Taylor, a junior in A&T's Landscape Architecture Program, said, "The workshop was very interesting and it was very helpful to me."

Mrs. Beverly Welborne from Detroit said, "The workshop was a positive experience, and I understand the need for Black students to have Black Landscape Architects to identify with."

Many of the participants felt the workshop had created a beginning point, given them a chance to meet some of the Black pioneers of Landscape Architecture, and, touched on ways they can affect the Black community and the Black situation.

Ronald Harris, an instructor of Landscape Architecture at A&T, also helped organize the workshop and the Landscape Architecture Program at A&T. Harris said, "We plan to make this workshop an annual event to help keep the program of Landscape Architecture abreast of what is happening in Landscape Architecture."

Are Values Of Concern

William Friday, chief executive of the N.C. Board of Governors, feels that the merger of schools is not a workable solution to the state's desegregation dispute with HEW (Health, Education, and Welfare).

He is standing firm on his negotiations with federal officials, for he doesn't believe that a merger of institutions in North Carolina is a step that is called for. He said it might change the administrative structure, but it was not a workable education alternative.

Friday also said that the merger is nothing but the closing of some institutions and the complete revision of the academic mission of some institutions. This is the main ingredient in the settlements worked out by HEW.

Students at the colleges specifically involved in HEW's agreements at this time are Savannah State in Georgia and Langston University in Oklahoma, who reacted with emotional demonstrations; and the universities of Tennessee at Knoxville and Tennessee A&I have taken their case to court.

Why is HEW so intent on merging the southern schools? Obviously, it must know by now that the students as well as the faculty members strongly oppose the merger. HEW even threatened to take steps to cut off $100 million in federal funds that North Carolina receives for higher education, if agreements are not met. And out of every $1, if the Black institutions are only receiving about 10 cents, then what will eventually happen? At this time it looks as if everyone's values are just being stepped on and possibly thrown out.

Miners Disregard Pressures

By Margaret L. Brown

If Black History month has not taught us anything, the events of this past week should have.

The events, this writer speaks of, concern the coal miners of the United Mine Workers Union (UMW). The discontented miners disregard economics and federal pressures. One should read the newspaper, or if you've read it then re-read it to make sure you have gotten the gist of the material. The lessons, and history of our ancestors have been passed up in apathy long enough. We argue that we don't have the power, for the law rests on a plateau that we can never rise above.

Yet, these miners have hung together practically crippling the country even though economic strains, public harassment, prison, and court fines threaten them. We have witnessed a miracle not seen since the days of Martin Luther King, Jr., Malcolm X, Frederick Douglass, and countless other Black leaders.

So think, friends; if a man can hold out against great odds for 93 days and achieve a set goal, surely we can have the luxuries that we all deserve.

Black Schools Lack Funds

By Catherine Speller

Howard University "The Capstone of Negro Education" celebrated its 11th birthday on March 2 in its annual charter day exercises.

It has withstood the effects of World War, the Civil Rights Movement of the 60's, and now a battle for sufficient funding for operation. A&T also has a prestigious history along with money problems.

Most Black schools are being forced to pass this burden of a lack of funds on to its undergraduates in the form of tuition increases. If college costs continue to rise, many Blacks may not be able to receive that precious sheepskin in the near future.
Students Prefer Black Institutions

Editor of the Register?

"I wanted to check out the Black Institution." This is a frequent answer to the question, "Why did you come to A&T?"

It's as though most students here were fed up with the race ratio in their high schools; so, when they decided to further their education, A&T was there, a Black Institution.

The institution that educated so many of our parents is in jeopardy. HEW (the Department of Health, Education and Welfare) has set fire to the UNC system with its desegregation plan, a plan that President William Friday insists will be impossible for the system to abide by. If the system doesn't abide by the plan, all federal funding will be cut off. The great white institutions could probably survive because of their alumni support. But, what about the Black institution where alumni support could not keep the institution going? The Black institution would join the dinosaur and the Edsel and would become something studied in history books and taught at universities.

Universities? Yes, there would be universities. With the Black institution out of the way, time would be turned back to 1800 for the Black man. There would no longer exist that springboard that has enabled so many Blacks to advance to that level of the white man. There's not any cause for concern though because the top Blacks will be able to study at the great white institution, a great favor in return.

Reagon Sings Freedom Songs

Wentworth - From her first "new song"—"Freedom in the Air"—in 1961, Bernice Reagon became a Freedom Singer.

In the 17 years since her first song, there have been many others—work songs, blues, children's game songs—but always, there have remained Freedom Songs to articulate the plight of the oppressed and reemphasize the beauty of freedom.

Bernice Reagon and a group of Black women, "Sweet Honey in the Rock," which she organized in 1974, will be in concert in Whitcomb Student Center on the campus of Rockingham Community College at 7:30 p.m. Friday (March 17).

The concert is part of the 1978 RCC Concert and Lecture Series co-sponsored by the college and the Miller Brewing Company.

The group, which includes Pat Johnson, Evie Harris and Yasmeen Williams, will be in concert Friday night. The concert is free and open to the public. The group will be making its only North Carolina appearance this year.

Choreographer Presents Concert

By Robin Simmons

Maceo Smith will challenge stage technicians and please audiences as a featured choreographer in the Graduate Thesis Concert at UNC-G. The showing of Student Choreography will begin at 7:30 p.m. March 28 and 29.

After completing a B. S. degree in Physical Education at A&T, he was given a graduate assistantship at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. He will complete his final requirements at the end of this academic year. For the past two years he has studied with Ather Mitchell and Paul Sansardo. In addition she performed as a member of the Fayetteville Dance Company.

Maceo's brown eyes and delicate smile radiate his enthusiasm for dance. "I am transforming some of the philosophical concepts of Dr. Martin Luther King, along with his convictions and the way they affected his life, into choreographed movement. My dancers are technically strong and emotionally sensitive. I felt my main responsibility to my dancers was to make them aware of the movement's purpose. My work "Endless Chain" is a biographical sketch of the influences in Dr. King's life."

The choreographer said King held firmly to a concept of non-violence as a method for social change. His ideal, which involved an interdependence of all people in sharing of burdens, will be communicated through body language.

"In my choreography, the audience will visualize circular patterns symbolizing the continuation of King's dream and the strength created through connecting bonds."

The dancers who will perform with him are Vivian Allen, Sally Harrell, Anna Peacock, Robin Simmons, and Sharon Smith.

Sports Notebook
By Archie Bass

While many of the loyal student supporters were vacationing last week, the National Invitational Tournament Committee covered shyly in the school that were invited. And, Gene Littles was in Tacy's corner as he vowed that Wake Forest and ACC regular season champs the Tarheels, and Athletics. For a likable coach had come to the far you have come, instead of where you are they did not play in the NIT. A team with a first-season game up in fumes and disappointment because "We got everybody back and we should have no other teams, but just did not get invited," he said.

Another team that was over looked that caused many avid fans to raise comments were the Deacs of Wake Forest. Here is a team that knocked off a championship game. Still, the Aggie basketball team that displayed pride and talent this year, should not let their comments about the boxing general...

The millions of boxing fans that watched the live press conference with the uncrowned cham--Muhammad Ali--it could be a sigh of relief or scaring comments about the boxing general--Leon Spinks--owes the top contender Ken Norton a personal matter. Finding a suitable replacement for Turner is interim head coach for the Aggie overall attack this season.

The million-dollar man who had cranked up again Monday afternoon as the Aggie gridironers launched spring drills. Ironically, Moore Gym was the stage for the opening session for the spring conditioning drills and not on the regular practice field.

Still, armed with an inspiring 102 gridders and a full slate of coaches, the archaic Moore Gym served the purpose of the strenuous conditioning drills.

"We didn't have this last year," vowed Jim McKinley in reference to the conditioning program. "We can go on the field next Monday and start hitting."

The Aggies finished the 1977 campaign, their first under youthful head coach Jim McKinley, with an impressive 7-4 overall record and a 5-1 conference tally.

Defense will be the key to the Aggie overall attack this season as McKinley boasts one of the most talented units playing college football.

On the front line is 6-5, 245-pound All-American candidate Darwine "Fer Wee" Board. Board, the MEAC's defensive MVP last season, has exceptional speed and quickness along with being a tenacious hitter. The other end is likely to be manned by 6-4, 245-pound transfer, Warren Bethia, the younger brother of former Aggie great and now Houston Oilier star Elvin Bethea.

Bethea will be pushed in spring drills by returning starter, sophomore Gerry Green, who had an outstanding freshman season. "The line is going to be the backbone of our defense," McKinley said. "They are a solid group and they have the size, speed, and ability to keep the pressure on opposing offenses the entire game."

Meanwhile, of the perky cast of 102 gridders that opened spring drills, according to the head coach only 50 will make the spring roster going into the fall. "We won't have to cut them because they will eventually cut themselves," stated McKinley whose team figures to be the prime team this season in the MEAC.

Leading candidates are sophomores Fred Freeman, Andre Olden, and William Watson. Senior Gary Alliniece, Turner's backup for the past three seasons, is also a strong candidate. "We are going to give each quarterback candidate the opportunity to work with the first unit offense and the one that does the best job will be our quarterback," McKinley said. "I'm confident that the quarterback candidates can and will do an outstanding job for us this season."

Despite the host of talented backs returning, the veterans may have to make room for highly regarded newcomer Charlie Sutton who has a built frame of 225 pounds and runs the hundred in 9.6. Sutton in many newspapers was regarded as the best prep running back in the state last season.

By this time, Darwin Valentine had cranked up again which notes that Aggie football is back in full swing with the only difference being the coaches are no longer rookies in the eyes of Aggie fans.

Coach Neely Resigns As Track Coach
By Craig R. Turner

According to A&T's Athletic Department, Murray Neely has resigned as head track coach. The 61-year-old coach cited his reason as a personal matter.

Cal Irvin, athletic director, named Joe Bugs, an assistant basketball coach, as the new head track man.

Wiley Harris, a former football coach, was picked as interim head coach for the women track team.

A&T's women's track team will venture out into competition at the East Carolina Invitational Track Meet this weekend.

Neely has been the head track man for 16 years winning numerous championships and awards.
