Urban Affairs Conference

Class Idea Becomes Seminar

It started out as just a student idea in the classroom, but today the A&T State University Urban Affairs Conference is a thriving, widely attended educational seminar.

The ninth annual Urban Affairs Institute will be sponsored by A&T on April 12-14. More than 500 citizens are expected to participate in the workshops on housing, health, employment, criminal justice and education.

Dr. Dorothy Williams, F.A. Williams distinguished chair of urban affairs at A&T and coordinator of the conference, said a number of nationally prominent resource persons have already accepted invitations to appear on the program.

The annual conference banquet will be held Wednesday, April 12, at 7 p.m. and will feature an address by Howard N. Lee, secretary of the Department of Human Resources and Community Development.

The workshops will be held on April 23. The speaker on health problems will be Dr. Thurman Evans, a consultant on minority health problems and president of the District of Columbia School Board.

Addressing the group on employment problems will be Clinton Smith, executive vice chairman of the Inter-agency Advisory Group and director of equal employment opportunity for the U.S. Civil Service Commission in Washington, D.C.

The speaker on housing will be Jerome Smith, an economist with the Office of Policy Development and Research of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, and Gloria J. Cousar, Human Resources Fellow of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Memo Angers Dorm Residents

By Anthony Boyd

A sudden enforcement of rules already on the books has caused an uproar among male dormitory residents here on campus.

William Goode, dean of men, has given students until April 3 to correct wrong doings stated in a recent memo.

"This is nothing new, just a reminder," said Goode. The rules, until now, had not been strictly enforced.

The wrongs stated were lounge furniture in resident rooms for personal use, beds being placed on the floor, and posters on the walls. The dorm residents found with furniture in their rooms will be charged $10. To avoid the confusion of lost bed parts, a $5 fine will be charged.

Goode said that posters hung with tacks and nails leave cracks and holes in the cement walls. The memo ordered "that any and all" objects be taken off the walls. Students repainting walls will be fined $50.

Residents of Scott Hall were angered by the memo and have circulated a petition. "The petition doesn't phase me. I have permission from my superiors to do this," Goode said.

Goode believes that the April 3 deadline angered the students. He promised that he was not going to pile charges on students. Goode also said that he would give residents ample time to comply with the orders.

Aggies Join In '10' Rally

By Margaret L. Brown

"Join the march, free the '10'; put oppression to an end," is just one of the few chants sung by a crowd of approximately 5,000 Saturday at the mass statewide demonstration in Raleigh in support of the Wilmington 10.

The march was also to commemorate the tenth anniversary of Dr. King's assassination. Having the rally was a way of showing that his

Raleigh was overflowing with law enforcement officers. Yet the people conducted themselves very well.

The officers found a petty excuse to arrest one of the speakers and an organizer of the rally. The excuse was an ordinance saying the volume of sound equipment was too loud. But this ordinance was put on record to keep people from playing loud music

Dr. Dowdy Addresses Annual Founders' Day

By Maxine McNeill

"Higher education for Blacks and minorities cannot be allowed to lose its rights. We need all of the quality America can muster," said Chancellor Lewis C. Dowdy.

Chancellor Dowdy was the guest speaker for A&T's 86th Parents'-Founders' Day Convocation Sunday in Moore Gymnasium.

In order to solve the problems that presently confront Blacks, Chancellor Dowdy said that the parents, students, and faculty members must work together. He said that he hopes the negative articles being printed about the Black institutions do not discourage the parents and friends of the institution.

"The great values that you have taught your children are being exemplified throughout the nation," said the chancellor. "You should try to throw the stigmas; I believe that you can."

Chancellor Dowdy feels that Blacks today have more collective strength. He said the need for total commitment, as far as educational goals are concerned, is now. He feels that we need Black leaders who will work toward meeting these goals.

"There can be no progress where there is no leader," A&T's chancellor said. "We will never have another Martin Luther King. We have a job to do and I do sincerely hope we can get it done. We cannot allow ourselves to fall into a state of lethargy in the place of leadership in our society."

According to Chancellor Dowdy, the Black institutions do not gear themselves toward educating only Black students; they also educate white students.

"Of the 34 Black colleges, last year 20,000 whites were educated in them," he said. "They make a contribution to the majority race and the minority race in our society."

Scholarship Fund Dinner To Honor Late Dr. Graves

Hundreds of the late Dr. Artis P. Graves' friends will pay a special tribute to him during a memorial scholarship dinner in the F.A. Williams dining center at A&T University, Saturday, April 8.

Coming together for the 7 p.m. dinner will be his former coaching and fishing buddies, his fellow teachers, fraternity brothers and the numerous doctors, dentists, pharmacists and veterinarians who studied their college biology under Dr. Graves.

Before his death last August, Dr. Graves was chairman of the Biology Department at A&T University for 27 years. Before that, he established a national reputation as an All-America football player, and then the successful coach of championship football teams at Morris Brown College in Atlanta.

Honor Society Inducts 27 A&T Students

Several Greensboro residents are among the 27 A&T State University students who have inducted as charter members of the newly chartered Alpha Delta Mu national social work honor society.

They are M. Carolina Wong, Brenda D. James, Julia A. Brooks, Sheila Bethea, Ellis Taliaferro, Marilyn Edwards and Dr. James C. Johnson.

Other charter members are Iris Carlton, Warsaw; Rena Bennett, Burlington; Marcus Sharpless, Goldsboro; Waldo Lester, Winston-Salem; Pamela Pulley, Spring Hope; Phyllis Latta, Brown Summit; Rita Beamon, Clinton; Mazine West, Roanoke Rapids; Vanessa Bradley, Jacksonville, Fla.; Isabell Rector, Lexington; Demetrice Turner, Hillsborough; Mabel Dixon, Lenoir; Ruthena Smith, Thomasville; Irene Cook, Brooklyn; Judy Cooper, LaGrange; Debra Bell, Faison; Gloria Grant, Margaretville; and Norma Batten, Reidsville.

The Alpha Delta Mu National Honor Society seeks to advance excellence in social work practice and to encourage, stimulate and maintain scholarship of the individual member in all fields.

A&T has a nationally accredited program in sociology and social service.

Ardent hunter and fisherman, Dr. Graves left coaching to become a highly successful coach teacher and administrator. More than 115 of his former students are now active in the medical professions.

Participants in the dinner will include Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, A&T chancellor; Dr. James A. Petteway, chief of internal medicine at the Clinton Valley Center in Michigan; Dr. Harold Beams, formerly of the State University of Iowa; Dr. Durel G. Long, chairman of the board of Greensboro National Bank; Sen. McNeil Smith, Dr. Charles C. Bookert, president of the Pennsylvania Medical Association and Dr. Linwood D. Graves, director of

A&T Jaycees Help At GGO

By Catherine Speller

The A&T Jaycees, one of the newer organizations on campus, worked at food concession stands during the Greater Greensboro Open (GGO) Golf Tournament last week.

The Jaycees which was organized in January of this year, has just recently received its national charter.

They were engaged by the Greensboro Chapter of Jaycees to work during the GGO to help raise funds for their treasury.

Derrick Jones, one of the organization's in-state directors commented that "the Jaycees is a charity organization made up of people that want to give a part of themselves to the community."

Since the Jaycees have been active this semester, they have conducted a clothing drive with the aid of their fellow students on campus, and they also plan to complete other projects soon.

When asked if females could join the Jaycees, Jones replied, "Yes, women are encouraged to join the A&T Jaycees Chapter."

HEW Decision

Effects Won't Come This Year

By Anthony Boyd

It will be another year before HEW's final decision to withhold federal funds from the University of North Carolina System go into effect. Plummer Alston, vice chancellor for fiscal affairs, expressed this view in a recent interview.

Alston stated that he is not adequately informed about the recent events and can only speculate on results.

The money at stake, stated Alston, has varied from $10 to $90 million. Using the larger figure of $90 million, Alston estimated that each of the 16 UNC universities could lose up to $14 million.

Court battles may present another delay to the cut of funds. UNC has retained the legal team of Jaworski and Fulbright in Washington, D.C. Should the UNC-system fail in its attempt, Alston speculated that taxes might be raised.

"It wouldn't be easy; they could raise the $10 million but it's doubtful for $90 million," said Alston. Another method of developing funds would be to move

Aggies' Pride

"You may not believe it but there was no smoking or drinking. Everybody shared his food and people gave us something to drink as we walked. There were no major disturbances but two people were arrested."

These were the words of one of the Aggies who participated in the march to free the Wilmington 10 Saturday in Raleigh. As the student continued, she described what sounded like an odd but beautiful situation.

"The total atmosphere was different," she stated. "We had all joined together as one with a single purpose in mind. I have never seen A&T students more serious."

Though it is unfortunate that all of us could not participate in Saturday's rally, from listening to the students talk, it seems that the rally did serve a useful purpose.

Some students said that they were afraid to participate because they foresaw violence occurring. The fears were proven to be unnecessary, however.

From the manner in which A&T's students responded to this rally, it is evident that the image of the nonchalant Aggie is vanishing. The attitudes of the students seem to be changing.

At times, this writer has commented about the lack of involvement A&T students exhibited on several occasions. It seems that now that image is being demolished. Some A&T students are living up to the image the Aggies created for themselves in the 60's. They are proud Aggies.

"One reporter didn't know what an Aggie is, so we had to tell him," this student said. "I bet he'll never ask that question again."

Rally A Success

By Margaret Brown

"Justice For All Oppressed People," the theme for the statewide rally to free the Wilmington 10, was indeed an excellent choice.

When one thinks of oppressed people or national oppression, one thinks only of Blacks. But this includes Puerto Ricans, Chicanos, American women and old people.

National oppression is defined by some as profits to the rich who rule the country. Some believe that oppression exists because white people are naturally oppressive and selfish. It boils down to who you are and what you know. One has to be able to work within the system and know politics.

This is how the Wilmington 10 were arrested and framed. Yet with all the proof that the Wilmington 10 were framed, Hunt had the nerve to grant a full pardon to the nephew of a state senator but he refuses to give the "10" a pardon.

If we the people stand up for the rights of the Wilmington 10, then this will be a step to eliminating oppression. The ruling class is trying to make an example out of the "10" but we will not stop until the "10" are free, "cause we ain't gonna take no more and don't want no more injustice!"

Don't Be Late

By Catherine Speller

Each year at this time seniors wait seriously for letters from Registration and Records saying that they have completed the required hours for graduation in their designated area of study.

Many can be heard saying, "Thank God that the waiting is over," and there is a sigh of relief while others shed tears of shock as they read the words that say "three more credit hours needed before graduation," or "you have only completed 123 hours instead of 124 hours."

Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, don't let this hadgy happen to you. Start now before preregistration. Talk to your advisors, study the requirements for graduation in your student handbook and always keep a handbook for the year that you entered A&T because it has the complete list of requirements for your major. Get to know the faculty in your department and the dean because they maybe very valuable in the future, like recommendation time.

One other word of advice, always save your copies of your grades each semester and apply for an estimate of credits before your senior year. So, when it comes time for you and me, upperclassmen, to receive those letters, we don't want to be worried about one or two forgotten courses to graduate.

SIN In The Student Union April 5-6

By Margaret Brown

What is SIN? SIN (Senior Interest Nights) is a program which the Student Alumni Council (SAC) will be sponsoring for the benefit of all students.

SIN will take place in the Student Union, Rooms 213-215 from 6-10 p.m. on April 5 and 6.

On Wednesday night Dr. Harold Mazyck, chairman of the Home Economics Department; Dr. Willie Bailey, chairman of Business Administration; and Dr. Brewer, an instructor, will discuss family planning, how to purchase a home as opposed to renting an apartment, and purchasing an automobile and insurance for it.

Thursday will include details on the credit unions, various kinds of taxes, and investment. The speakers will be Latham Wallace; Dr. Ladelle Hyman, chairman of the accounting department; and Dr. Donald Wiseman.

Each session will consist of a question and answer period.

Frederick Stocks, president of SAC, said the purpose of the nights is to give the students ideas and tips on how to purchase insurance, bonds, and stocks without losing their shirts or getting swindled.

Stocks concluded by saying, "I hope this will become an annual event given each spring semester because it is the purpose of the SAC to provide this type of educational and enlightening program for the students and the community. We hope everyone will come out and take a part in senior interest nights."

A&T Group To Visit Nashville

By Eric Howell

"Nashville here we come," is the cry of the Wesley Foundation as they prepare for their trip to Nashville, Tennessee.

The Foundation is under the direction of Reverend Sadye Joyner Milton. The group will be part of the Youth and Young Adult Convocation in Nashville. The Board of Higher Education of the United Methodist Church will provide the funds for the trip.

The group was selected when it attended the Southern District Student Conference in Atlanta, Georgia.

The purpose of the convocation in Nashville will be to "participate in workshops dealing with Black churches and agencies," said Rev. Milton. The convocation will provide developing appropriate leadership studies in the Black community.

Nightfall Magazine Presents Disco Awards

The third annual Nightfall Magazine Disco Awards were recently held in the Grand Ballroom of Boston's Park Plaza Hotel. Atlantic Records was represented by a full contingent of executives and recording artists. Media coverage was heavy with all three TV networks, radio representatives, and the national and local press out in force.

Atlantic recording group the Trammps received an award for "Best Disco Group of 1977" and performed their current chart smash hit "Disco Inferno," featured in Saturday Night Fever." Both the "Disco Inferno" LP and title tune single are bulleted national pop chart climbers.

Atlantic recording group Chic received an award for "Best 12-Inch Disco Disc of 1977" for "Dance, Dance, Dance." The "Dance, Dance, Dance" single was certified gold by the RIAA on February 21. The group's new single "Everybody Dance" has gathered heavy initial airplay and sales. The group presented a gold record to Johnny Luongo, Nightfall publisher and director of the Boston Record Pool, for his help in breaking "Dance, Dance, Dance."

Cotillion recording artist Cerrone was presented with an award for "Best Instrumental" for "Love In C Minor." The award was accepted for Cerrone by Atlantic National Disco Promotion Director Issy Sanchez, who hosted a gala pre-awards cocktail party in the hotel's Stanboro Hall ballroom for awards guests and media representatives.

Lanita's Rap

Lanita Ledbetter

When you listen to music what do you hear? The lyrics or the rhythm? More often most people will admit to liking a song because of the beat only, but let's take an indepth look at what the words and the music have to say.

"Our Love" - Ms. Cole makes a very successful attempt to tell the world that she is deeply satisfied with her love and that it is one with a deep promise of lasting. No need to inquire about her love life, no doubt she must be using Ultra-Brite.

"All The Way Lover" - Evidently you can't be mediocre. Whatever you do you have to do it all the way even when it comes to love. It can best be concluded with a tune from Heatwave's "Ain't No Half Stepping." Maybe Millie has a point!

"Don't Cost You Nothing" - Who else, but...Ashford and Simpson?? The song seems to be very commerca lizing. It seems as if it is a product saying try me there are no obligations; but if you like what I offer you'll know where I'll be and you can always come back for more.

"Jack and Jill" - The song seems to be quite a controversial topic as to the real motive of Jack's going down hill. Perhaps the answer can only be obtained from Jill. Jill, is it right or wrong for Jack to carry on?!? There are those who would love to know.!

"Too Much, Too Little, Too Late" - Time plays a very significant role in this new release by Denise Williams and Johnny Mathis. They expect too much of each other, gave so little and now they've come to the reality that it is too late to ever make the relationship work. So, in essence, "it's over."

"Emotions" - How painful can it be? The extremities the lady would go to to prove her love for him are almost detestable, but yet they can't be scorned. She has nothing to look forward to so she clings on to her emotions in order to make it from day to day.

"Why Have I Lost You" - Placed in a feeling of awe. The man is definitely wondering why has his relationship deteriorated. Reaching the most obvious conclusion, he realizes the woman he thought he knew didn't even know him.

"Lady Love" - Lou Rawl's latest single shows that he appreciates his woman very highly. She seems to amaze him with her dedication to him and her deep sense of understanding.

I've got something good for you...guess what it is....

Sports Notebook

Head track coach Joe Buggs works on the leg of an Aggie trackster.

In many instances during the course of any athletic events, specially if a team is completely out-manned by talent and number, individuals produce by pure pride alone.

Such was the case Saturday afternoon at the Annual South Carolina State College Track and Field Invitational when the Aggie track team was short of manpower; but, with the few they had, hung in there to finish a respectable sixth.

After talking with the head track coach at S.C. State, this columnist learned that the majority of the field events participants come from the football team. By this, the players get themselves in condition and also help the track program adding a big plus to the overall athletic program.

Still, there are sprinters who run track that are on the football team that help win track meets and help to eliminate conditioning for football for Willie Jeffries.

After watching the Bulldog tracksters, participating in the two sports has proved to be helpful to both coaches especially in the win column. So, I bring the helpful hint to both Jim McKinley and Joe Buggs to let football players participate in track to help to condition the players and help the overall track program.

As I looked down the football roster, there are athletes like Dwaine Board who could be a top discus thrower; Lonnie Harris and William Joyner who could be good speed runners. True, every coach has his own policy concerning an athlete participating in another sport. Whether or not McKinley wants any of his personnel to run track is not known. Still, the head coach must take into consideration that his budget is more than that of any other coach and it allows him to recruit top prospects that make him shine as a head coach and the university as a whole.

Meanwhile, the track program at A&T is forced with the leftovers. in terms of revenues. The university is seeking to have a total athletic program where all sports will catch the eye of the national public?

In no evaluation is this columnist trying to demote the Aggie football team or the fine job that the head coach has done and is going to do, but I still must ask why aren't football players allowed to participate in track as a part of their conditioning?

Once again, we are talking about a total athletic program and, for sure, one coach must wash the other's hand.

Isn't it nice to have funds to run your program, Coach McKinley?

Isn't it nice to have a roster that equals to Willie Jeffries in terms of manpower?

For sure, the Aggie track team can't attest this for there program.

Aggies Place Sixth In Track

By Archie Bass

"We did extremely well with the number of people we had. We were competing against 25 and 30 runners of whom were participating in three or more events," cited head track coach Joe Buggs in the aftermath Saturday at the Annual South Carolina State College Track and Field Invitational.

Even though the Aggie tracksters were without the services of two top candidates, Thomas Bradshaw who figures to be the top sprinter on the squad and Lonnie Phifer who is considered to be the prime 220 man, the tracksters came away with a respectable sixth-place in a field of 18 schools.

The team was led by Ruben McElrath who tossed the shotput 47-7 with the final placing of a commendable third place. In the 440 yard dash, Kenneth Smith finished fourth with the time of 49.9. Stanley Jenkins, who was considered as one of the top quarter-milers in the country, made his debut at running the 880 yard dash and placed an impressive sixth. "This was the first time that Stanley has run in the 880 yard dash, but he did a very good job," said Buggs.

The day was rounded out for the Aggiestacksters with final placings in the discus, sprint medley and the triple jump.

For the afternoon of a clear, bright Saturday track invitational, Joe Buggs walked away with what he calls a satisfactory showing--sixth out of 18 schools.

He concluded: "We are getting in condition now whereas the teams we are competing against are already in condition with the advantage being their indoor events."

Intramural Program Runs Without Director

By Marilyn Baggett

The intramural program at A&T has been without a director for several months.

Initially, there was no position of director of intramurals. In the past, intramural activities were carried out by people from the Physical Education Department and other areas on campus. This year, according to Roger McKee, assistant director of the Student Union, it became possible to create the position which was held by Ernest Gaskin. Because Gaskin found he could make a better life for himself, he left the position of director of intramurals at A&T.

McKee, who is responsible for handling the program's budget, says the intramural program will continue. He has expressed his opinion on the need for an intramural director but stated, "If the position is filled, the person will have to take on other responsibilities."

Problems with scheduling the gym for intramural activities led to this year's program being slightly behind last year's. McKee said that, with the completion of the new gym, the old gym will hopefully be designated as the intramural facility.

"I think it's a viable thing," says McKee of the program. "Students need something to let off some of the frustrations they've had during the day."

The spring intramural format will include basketball, soccer, badminton, riflery, handball, swimming, and softball. As a new experience, archery has been added to the schedule.

William Sheffield, a graduate assistant, and Kevin Willis will aid McKee in continuing the program this year.
