THE A&T REGISTER

"COMPLETE AWARENESS FOR COMPLETE COMMITMENT"

VOLUME XIX NUMBER 10 NORTH CAROLINA AGRICULTURAL AND TECHNICAL STATE UNIVERSITY GREENSBORO, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1978

Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, discussed some of A&T's proposed projects with the board of directors, trustees, trustee's.

Advisory Commission

Discusses Biennial Budget

By Sheila A. Williams
The Advisory Budget Commission met yesterday afternoon in the chancellor's office to discuss the biennial budget request for the years 1979-1981.

Chancellor Lewis C. Dowdy's presentation included future projections and general information for expanding opportunities and services for A&T.

"We want to expand our horizons, vertically and horizontally," he stated, "to meet the needs of students in every area of education." He also said that he hopes to prepare teachers for community colleges in counseling and administration.

The university requested $41,762,072 for capital improvements, and $5,673,412 for strengthening programs and improvements within support areas.

Gerard Gray, director of the physical plant, spoke about the future buildings that will soon be completed or are about to be constructed at A&T. He stated that the quality of the campus environment, parking and more acquisitions of land were just some of the things that were needed to improve and enlarge A&T.

He also talked about the university's new health and physical education building which has recently been completed would become operational in October of this year. The natural science building is scheduled for completion in December 1978, and the social science buildings scheduled for completion in April 1979. The university's new administration building is expected to be completed in December 1980.

Dowdy's request will now be reviewed and he is quite confident that every effort will be made to assist A&T in its

Black Student Coalition Holds Press Conference

By Richard B. Steele

"That is not an isolated situation. We have been aware for some time that Black students are being turned down everywhere," stated Byron Horton, III, executive president of the North Carolina Black Student Coalition at a press conference held in the Carolina Union on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, endeavors to upgrade the quality of education.

Campus Interviews Important

By Larry L. Jenkins

"The campus interview is probably the singular most important event to a student's career," said Dave Arterburn, group director of personnel management in the Atlanta office of Coopers and Lybrand.

Arterburn spoke to the Alobaem Society on "The Campus Interview" Monday

this past Thursday. Horton was referring to a statement made by Associate Dean Hayden Renwick "that fewer Black students were admitted to UNC-CH in 1978 than in 1974 in spite of the larger pool of qualified applicants." In 1974 approximately 300 qualified Black students applied for admission to UNC-CH; only 200 were selected.

Human Rights Activist Addresses Capacity Crowd

By Catherine Speller

"Black institutions were acceptable as long as they kept Blacks out of white institutions. But now, when Blacks are allowed to attend white institutions and still choose Black institutions, whites want to do away with Black institutions," said Dick Gregory.

Human rights activist Dick Gregory addressed a capacity crowd of students and members of the local community Thursday night in Harrison Auditorium.

Gregory began his lecture by commenting on the Muhammad Ali versus Leon Spinks fight held recently in New Orleans, La., which received a lot of boos from the crowd.

"Some of you I see consider Ali as just another jive boxer" retaliated Gregory. It's because of Ali and the things that he stands for that you students are so arrogant today," explained Gregory. "Ali came along during the time when niggers didn't even like each other and said 'Hey look at me I'm fine,'" said Gregory.

"During the Vietnam war he stood up for himself and other Blacks who couldn't afford to run away, and we should look up to Ali as a positive representative of the Black image," exclaimed Gregory.

"I travel all over the country speaking on college campuses," said Gregory and the biggest complaint I hear the most is about the cafeteria and food problems, stressed Gregory.

"Students, once you realize that the universities exist because of you instead of your existing because of them, you will be able to bring about the needed changes that you desire," said Gregory.

College students tolerate a lot of things that high school dropouts wouldn't, like cramped living spaces, bad (See Sex Page 6) evening in Merrick Hall. Coopers and Lybrand is one of the Big eight firms in the United States.

"The first phase of a job search is the pre-interview," continued Arterburn. Students were encouraged to ask questions and to read materials concerning the company they plan to interview with. Emphasizing the importance of Career Day, he stated that representatives come to A&T trying to identify students that will benefit their companies.

The second phase of the campus interview is the selection process. From the employers' point of view, according to Arterburn, the selection process is the interviewees selling himself to the interviewer. Being relaxed, oneself, and preparing for the interview were essential pointers mentioned by Arterburn. "The basic objective of the campus interview is to sell yourself," said Arterburn; the worst thing to do is to become nervous."

"If the interviewer asks you a closed-end question, give him an open end answer," said Arterburn. A closed-end question is one that can be answered by a simple yes or no with no future explanation. An open-end answer allows the interviewee to elaborate further, then supplying more information for the interviewer.

Selection for employment is usually based on leadership, communication skills, salesmanship, judgment, academic achievement, intellectual ability, and extra-curricular activities.

Arterburn told all the students to "identify what career potential the employer can offer you and give the interviewer the inclination about your objective."

Larry Carson, president of the Alobaem Society said that he felt the presentation was enlightening and very helpful to the students that attended.

Attention: all executive board members of the Pep Club, there will be a very important meeting at 8 p.m. on Oct. 2, in the Student Union Lobby.

A. Engineering Society Begins Fall Projects

As the fall semester gets under way various organizations are trying to get their ideas and plans off the ground. One such organization is the Architectural Engineering Society (AES). Donn L. Booker, president of AES, said, "We have already started on different projects: (1) tutorial sessions, (2) learning lab, and (3) job career.

The tutorial sessions began in the earlier part of September. The purpose of the sessions is to create a working atmosphere with an interested group of students.

"We have tutors that are enthusiastic in helping other students with their courses and I feel the sessions are a great advantage to study time and consistency in homework," stated Tim Stoddard, vice president. "As of now, there are five courses being tutored; but we are planning to add to the list as they are needed. tutors are available for the following courses: A.E. 111, A.E. 456, M.E. 210, M.E. 335, and M.E. 336. As the semester continues, we would like to see more students involved in the sessions."

Ulysses Hester, treasurer, said, "The society has gotten off to a good start, but we need more participation from the freshman class so that they may gain exposure to all Architectural Engineering Society's related activities and be actively involved in project planning throughout the 1978-79 academic year."

"We have set up various committees in the society, and the chairpersons are working consistently. We hope the steady flow of communication between the chairpersons and members will continue. One of these committees is the Jobs Career Committee and they are trying to keep the society aware of Job Opportunities and new happenings in the Architectural Engineering Field," stated Sharon Peterson, secretary of the A.E.S.

As an initial project for this year, Ms. Vivian Logan, as assistant director of Career Planning and Placement, will give a seminar involving interviewing techniques as well as an orientation to the services and resources provided through the Placement Center.

Another project of the AES is the learning lab. At present, the learning lab is in the planning stage.

The faculty of the Architectural Engineering Department have open doors to any students that may have concerns or problems related to the course of study in the Architectural Engineering Discipline.

Foreign Students

By Shakespeare Maya
The foreign students office has revealed a record-breaking enrollment of foreign students this fall at A&T. The new students, totalling over 70, bring the number of foreign students to over 200. For the first time in its history, A&T has received students from the United Kingdom and South Africa.

Ten students from the South African countries of Zamsia, Zimbabwe, South Africa and Namibia arrived at the beginning of this semester under the auspices of the Phelps Stokes Foundation. The Tanzania Aid Manpower Assistance Program has six students in the university, and the Nigerian Aid Technical Assistance Program has sponsored fourteen students.

Recent statistics show family groups in the enrollment. From Bermuda are the Durhams with four members on campus. The Safavis from Iran are a group of one sister and two brothers.

Many other students come from Guyana, Venezuela, Nigeria, Kenya, Kuwait, Qatas and many other countries.

Mrs. Anne C. Graves, advisor of the International Students Program, said that there are a good number of things needed to provide better services for the international students. Among these needs are office accommodations, office facilities and office equipment. Also very significant is the need for year-round housing on campus for these students who have no where to move to during vacations and breaks.

Engineers Are Hard To Find

The employment situation for engineering graduates at A&T is ideal for the students, but not so good for the prospective employers. There aren't enough students to go around.

According to Dr. Suresh Chandra, dean of the School of Engineering, some 600 companies annually engage in intense recruiting for 60 graduates.

However, the school has received two grants totaling $200,000 which Chandra will use to improve the retention rate for engineering students. Ultimately, he believes that more students will enter the school; and more of them will graduate.

The largest grant, $150,000 has been approved for A&T by IBM to assist the university in improving its retention rate.

The other grant for $50,000 has been made by General Motors. Chandra said these funds will be used for general faculty and student development, which should also help to improve the retention rate.

"The nation's aim is to achieve parity by 1982," said Chandra, "in terms of the number of minorities entering engineering schools and in the number of them graduating."

The A&T dean said approximately 30 percent of the nation's students are minorities, and the goal is to graduate engineers in that proportion.

Chandra said the IBM funds, payable over a five-year period, will be used to provide tutorial assistance, financial aid for the students and to support a unique summer program which brings recent high school graduates to the campus for some pre-engineering study.

"We shall also use the funds to provide well-trained faculty and additional laboratories and equipment," he said.

Chandra said the funds from General Motors will be used for faculty development and for the enhancing of laboratories and for student scholarships. The money will be paid over five years.

Chandra said in some instances students coming to college lack the necessary training in mathematics and science.

"Provided with good teachers and facilities, these students develop into fine engineers," he said.

Chandra said A&T has witnessed a steady increase in engineering students and graduates since 1974. At that time the school enrolled 340 students. Today the enrollment is over 700.

Four years ago the graduate engineering enrollment was 16; there are 50 graduate students enrolled this year.

Guest Speakers

Two members of the Wilmington Ten and one of their lawyers were guest speakers on Sounder on Tuesday morning.

They answered questions of the public about the things that they have been involved in since their paroles, about their plans for the future, their time spent in jail, how they feel about Governor Hunt's decision, the effects that it had on the entire group and their leader Ben Chavis.

After the radio program a luncheon was held in the Red Carpet Room for the group sponsored by the Student Government Association.

When the voter registration drive was mentioned, everyone thought that it was a good idea to encourage more young Blacks to take an active part in politics and vote. It was said, even if the Blacks don't vote, if we get them to register in numbers, that will be enough to make whites worry about the elections.

When asked about their time spent in prison, they replied because theirs was a highly publicized case they often received little privileges that the other prisoners didn't, but nothing elaborate. They were given a chance to continue their education while in prison and plan to finish their schooling now that they are out.

"Even though we have been paroled we are still going to continue to work towards clearing our names," said the two members of the 10.

Other subjects such as the future of Blacks in society, competency testing, and the future of Black institutions were discussed. The members of the Wilmington 10 group who are on parole have been in contact with Ben Chavis still in prison and are planning speaking engagements for the near future.

Gregory Speaks Of Destiny

By Karen F. Williams

"The fate and destiny of the Black institution are determined by us." These words were spoken by Dick Gregory last evening to a packed auditorium of students and faculty. His speech aroused the audience as he spoke on issues dealing with racism, sex discrimination, politics, education, health, and moral values. Usually when a speaker deals with basic issues such as these, he uses euphemistic phrases and terms to get the facts across. However, Gregory broke these issues down to the point.

There are so many issues and problems that we as young people are faced with today. Drugs, alcohol, and suicide are but a few number on killers among teenagers. These killers cannot always be solved by tangible measures. Gregory, therefore, argued that we should get our spiritual lives together, become health conscious individuals and become aware of the tricks of the racists system.

The Black Vote Is Important

By Sheila A. Williams

When Dick Gregory spoke in Harrison Auditorium on Thursday night, his fiery statements were enough to make several feel as if an air of the 60's were upon us.

"Black institutions, were first built in order to keep you out of the white schools. But now that you have the privilege to choose on your own, they want to wipe them out."

This columnist has stated this kind of idea before in various other articles about the freedom to choose things on your own. It can get to where the Black point of view may not have any significant or particular value. Being able to make a decision gives you a secret weapon, the power of control.

This is why those who register us to vote are stressing that the Black vote is of vital importance, for it is necessary that each of us exercise this right. All those demonstrations, in which people were tear-gassed and killed, should not be taken lightly or for granted.

An example that I want you to think about: President Jimmy Carter, is sitting in the White House right now because the Black vote put him there.

Now if every Black voter, would support one strong Black candidate and send him to some powerful position in our government, then his voice would be able to speak for us all. The government is where our voices are so desperately needed.

But this will not and can not happen until you exercise your voting rights so don't take it for granted, for, if you don't appreciate what you have, you may not miss it until it has been taken away.

19 Blacks Denied Admission To University

By the same token approximately 750 qualified Blacks applied and only 200 were selected. This does not include the mistakes made that denied 19 other qualified Blacks admission to the university.

Horton, a Goldsboro native, said, "Our motto is 'In Unity Power Prevails.'" A question was raised during the conference concerning the extent of that "power". The NCBSA is composed of 14 public and private colleges and universities, with at least two student representatives of the coalition. The coalition organized December 1977. These students represent a total number of 18,000 Black students in North Carolina. This, the power lies within the number. The coalition's purpose is not to dictate, but to support and bring attention to issues concerning Black students said the mistress of ceremonies, Stella Jones, press secretary of the coalition at UNC-CH.

Topics of discussion included competency test, the Bostic-vs-Byrd case, general discussion, and activity of the Coalition.

Johnny McWhorter, coordinator of Neo-Black Society at UNC-G and of the executive committee of NCBSA, commented, "The coalition doesn't fully condone the culturally biased competency test. Legislation has passed laws and the test will take place in five controlled areas throughout North Carolina." One of the sites is Greensboro.

The dates of the test are November 1st and 2nd. "There will be training sessions within these sites with at least 20 hours preparation," said McWhorter. These sessions will last throughout December then start again in January thru April. The second test will be conducted May 1st and 2nd. The coalition is working with the Democratic Black 'Caucus' tutors.

The coalition aims to (1) educate parents and community as well as the student;

(2) to aid present students in passing these tests and (3) to educate future students to a degree where there will be no need for competency tests, said Netarlin Best, assistant coordinator of Neo-Black Society at UNC-G, also executive committee NCBSA.

There are 14 participating colleges and universities in the coalition- NCCU, A&T, Duke, Guilford, UNC-W, UNC-G, Appalachian, UNC-CH, Elon, Gaston, Campbell, Fayetteville State, Bennett, and Barber-Scotia, commented Mike Queens, president of the Brothers and Sisters in Blackness at Guilford College, executive committee.

Kevin Buncum, vice-president SGA A&T State University, executive committee, NCBSA, announced upcoming events. "There will be an NCBSA conference on the campus of A&T State University November 10," said Buncum. Topics and discussion leaders include Dr. Stone, chairman of Afro American at UNC-CH, Dr. Mizelle, competency testing commissioner, and the Bostic-vs-Byrd case.

The nature of this conference will be informational with brochures and pamphlets telling what the coalition is all about.

The coalition will publish a newspaper beginning October 6.

September Designated As Senior Veteran Month

September has been designated as Senior Veterans Month throughout the State, according to a joint announcement by Ken McDonald, director of the Veterans Administration Regional Office at Winston-Salem, and Governor Jim Hunt.

McDonald said that, although many older veterans, widows and their dependent children are receiving VA benefits, others may not be receiving assistance because they are not aware of its availability to them. "This month we will be conducting special outreach efforts to locate and offer help to them," he said.

Generally, a veteran is eligible for pension if he had 90 days or more honorable wartime service (unless separated earlier for service incurred disability), is 65 or over or permanently and totally disabled at a young age, and his income is within the limits prescribed by law. These income limits are $3,770 annually for a veteran without dependents or $5,070 for a veteran with dependents. Ten percent of social security or other retirement benefits and certain medical expenses will be included by the VA in com-

Hines Gets Standing Ovation

By Jacqueline D. Pender

"It's a Pity to Say Good-night" and "Tea for Two" were some of the compositions performed by Earl "Fatha" Hines, jazz musician in Harrison Auditorium on September 27.

"Fatha" Hines performed many selections from yesteryears to the present time.

He was greeted with a standing ovation from the "Aggie" family and other guests.

Fatha Hines captured the audience's attention with a medley of tunes from "Show Boat".

His co-workers consisted of three gentlemen and one young lady who also caught the eyes of the audience. They were Wesley Brown on bass, Eddie Graham on drums, Eric Scheider on reeds and Marva Josie, lead vocalist.

"Fatha" Hines added humor in the concert throughout the evening. The audience chuckled when "Fatha" Hines asked Eric, the reed player, "What page are you on? That's not the way we rehearsed it."

Later in the concert "Fatha" Hines paid tribute to the late Duke Ellington. "Duke and I had a lot in common. We exchanged ideas, music and girls," stated "Father" Hines. He performed tunes by Ellington such as

"Black and Tan Fantasy," "Take the Eighth Train,"

"Things Ain't What They Used to Be" and many others.

The last part of the concert lead singer Marva Josie serenaded the audience with a selection of tunes. Some of the tunes were "Candy," "Don't It Make My Brown

Eyes Blue," "Let the Good Times Roll" and "Jelly Is Always on My Mind" which "fatha" Hines and the audience sang along.

food, sex discrimination and other things that go uncontested through the nation.

He continued by saying that we were the more likely to get hooked on drugs, alcohol, commit suicide and to have perverted sex habits than any other age group.

"The American racist system has done a lot to us, and registering to vote is not a part of our daily routine list; but, if it was announced that a soul group was going to be present, everyone would turn out. We have to be reprogrammed and evaluate our values," said Gregory.

"We spend too much time boogalooing and jiving around to realize that things like the Bakke decision happen every day; just don't hear about them."

He closed his lecture by saying that "Bakke was a dumb white boy and he really made Blacks sit up and take notice. I hate to see what will happen if a smart one gets started," said Gregory.

Wyle Harris, former A&T assistant coach, is now the coach at Johnson C. Smith. I am pretty sure he would like nothing more than to defeat A&T in his first year at Smith. To do this, he will have to throw a lot of tricks at A&T.

The Aggies, with a 1-3 record, are finding it hard to score points. There seems to be a lot of weaknesses in the Aggie lineup. The veer has not provided the team with any success. Only once this season have the Aggies really let the defense and offense work together in one game.

When A&T faces Johnson C. Smith Saturday, the team will be trying to get back on the right track. In the last two years, the Aggie have rebounded from bad starts on their way to 8-3 and 7-4 records. But this year it won't be that easy.

Quarterback William Watson has been the one who seems to get all the boos and bad mouth, but it isn't his fault. He wants a winning team like everyone else; therefore, he shouldn't be the one to get the blame for all the troubles.

When Watson started his first game against Winson-Salem State, he thought he would have ten other guys working along with him. But the offensive line does not support him the way it should. It is up to the rest of the guys to work with him before we expect to really gain anything.

So, in spite of all the criticism, Watson deserves a hand for trying.

As for the rest of the team, you have to go out and fight for what you want. You can overcome the injuries.

When the Aggies journey to Charlotte, they will have a new face at the quarterback slot. Fred Freeman, who directed the Aggies to their second half touchdown last week, will call the signals. Freeman, a transfer from Central State University, will try to direct the Aggies out of their slump.

At 5-9, 165, Freeman has shown the abilities to lead the offense. In his last showing, he helped the Aggies drive 82 yards in less than two minutes. How good is Freeman? He must have some talents or else he would not be starting as the number two quarterback.

Support the team Saturday night. If you, the fans give up on the team, who else is left?

There will be more things at stake in this game than just to win. Coach Harris would really like to beat the Aggies. Coach Jim McKinley would like this game more than any of the rest of us. He knows what it may mean to the future. Let's just see who wins that battle.

I guess I am a little rusty as far as predicting. It is hard to predict on a game when no-one knows the real outcome. As far as predictions for this week, I have to go with the Aggies by one touchdown or more.

Freddie Freeman To Start?

By Dennis Bryant

In an effort to break out of a losing slump, the A&T Aggies will have a new face in their starting lineup Saturday night, against Johnson C. Smith. Freddie Freeman will start his first game as quarterback at A&T.

William Watson, sophomore quarterback from Detroit, Michigan, will find himself sitting out of the starting backfield for the first time this young season. Freeman, a sophomore from Forest City, Arkansas, will call the signals.

The Aggies will be facing a pumped-up Bulls' team under first-year-coach Wyle Harris. Harris, former A&T assistant, will certainly want nothing more than to beat his former college team.

Smith, 0-3, will face a defense that is definitely one of the best around. Despite losing the last two games, the defense has put forward the most effort. With the front four, including Dwaine "Pee Wee" Board (6-5, 240), Lucien Nibbs (6-7, 262), Ulysses Thompson (6-7, 252), and Gerry Green (6-4, 240), the team is always a threat.

Last week, the defense made the Wildcats of Bethune-Cookman cough up the ball seven times. Other standouts include George Small (6-3, 240), Glenn Inman (6-0, 222), Frankie Chesson (6-0, 182), and Roland Wooten (6-2, 225). The secondary, consisting of the "Greensboro Gang," includes Thomas Warren (6-0, 187), Gerald Johnson (5-11, 168) and Tony Currie (6-0, 187).

Offensively, the Bulls will have halfback Edward Johnson, quarterback Cal

Gill, halfback Ray Rainey, and fullback Art Henderson. The backfield will be backed by offensive tackles Emmanuel Smith and Edward Peppers, offensive guard David Hough, Center Noah Dixon, wide receivers James Highsmith and Sammie Gilstrap and tightend Varian Bristow.

The offensive line of the Aggies will have quarterback Freddie Freeman (5-9, 165), William Joyner RB (5-11, 190) and runningback Cleotis Johnson (5-11, 205) in the backfield. Receiver Frank Carr (6-0, 174) will be playing before some of his former hometown fans and players.

Other key offensive starters will be tightend Billy Mims (6-5, 225), offensive guards Wheeler Brown (6-2, 251) and William Harvey (6-3, 240). The tacklers will be Thomas Boone (6-3, 218) and Pat Lewis (6-3, 236). Center Smitly Davis, out for a few weeks, will be replaced by Jeffrey Jackson (6-2, 210).

The game, to be played at Charlotte Memorial Stadium, will start at 8:00 p.m. Both teams will be out to break out of their losing strings. The Aggies will see if they can generate some offense with the new setup and score some points.

Last year the Aggies romped 44-20 over Smith before a sparse crowd in Greensboro. They went on to win six of seven after that rout. It has to go into everyone's mind the situation the Aggies were in last year. The Aggies want nothing more than to win this game to prepare for CIAA power Norfolk State. The Spartans will face the Aggies next Saturday in Greensboro.

A&T Soccer Team Defeats Tarheels In First Outing

By Shakespeare Maya

The game between A&T and Tarheel played at Dudley High School last Sunday was not what the Aggies had expected. It is difficult to tell whether the A&T team has become much tougher of the Tarheels have deteriorated in their standard.

Whatever change has taken place, the Tarheels were no match for A&T in the teams first clash of the season. Tarheels were thrashed 6-0 in a match where A&T's Terry Green scored two of the six goals in the first half.

The Aggie goal-keeper, Leone Mpehle and Darius Miamji, called it "no game" because the Tarheel front liners could not penetrate A&T's defense throughout the game.

It was a very sad time during the match for the Tarheels. Phidippides is next, this Sunday, October 1, at A&T, and Captain Badom proudly predicted another walk-over in an interview during dinner in Williams Cafeteria recently.
