"COMPLETE AWARENESS FOR COMPLETE COMMITMENT"

VOLUME XLI NUMBER 44 NORTH CAROLINA AGRICULTURAL AND TECHNICAL STATE UNIVERSITY GREENSBORO, NC APRIL 1, 1980 TUESDAY

Top Black Media Managers Urge Students To Aspire

Three of the nation's top Black media managers urged college and high school students to aspire to management and ownership positions within the industry.

William Dilday Jr., the only Black general manager of a VHF net-work affiliate television station, said it, as did Al Fitzpatrick, the highest ranking minority newspaper executive, as did Ms. Mutter, Evans, who bought her own radio station at age 26.

"If Black people in America are ever to move from being the powerless and the controlled in the broadcasting industry, it is up to you young people whose futures are chartered in the broadcasting industry to make that change," Dilday told the 200 persons attending the third annual A&T State University mass media careers conference here last Saturday.

Ms. Evans, owner of Winston-Salem's WAAA Radio, said, "It is imperative that Blacks realize that the real power lies in management and ownership to shape the lives of Black people." She added that Blacks presently own less than one percent of the broadcast properties in the nation.

The A&T conference, which attracted students and faculty from nine college and 14 media organizations, was sponsored by a grant to A&T from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation.

In the conference's opening address on Friday night, Fitzpatrick, executive editor of the Akron (Ohio) Beacon-Journal, said media management has become apathetic about aiding talented young Blacks and helping them become successful.

"We've come through the hot 1960s when it was imperative for newspapers and radio and TV stations to have at least one instant Black," he said. "In the '70s the sense of urgency and impetus for fair minority representation in the media disappeared and it must be revived by minorities themselves and institutions preparing them for journalism careers."

Dilday is general manager of WLBT-TV in Jackson, Miss. That station became 51 percent minority owned last January, after Blacks in that area complained to the Federal Communications Commission that the station was discriminatory in its policies and programs.

Peace Corps Sponsors Program

By Michael Fairley

The Peace Corps in Washington, DC, is sponsoring a Summer Internship program beginning June 30 thru August 21, 1980.

The eight-week program is exclusively for students from four-year minority colleges across the U.S. and in Puerto Rico who have completed their junior year of study.

The Peace Corps Internship is a combination work-study program. It is designed to introduce students to the issues, realities and potentials of the third world, the work of the Peace Corps in addressing grass roots development in meeting basic human needs, and career possibilities in domestic and international development.

The program will include work assignments with professional Peace Corps staff within a framework of lectures, seminars, and readings.

Only fifteen students will be chosen from the more than 100 colleges invited to participate.

Applicants must have an overall "B" average or better. (There is no required or preferred college major).

Applicants must also have a commitment to social issues and must be able to demonstrate it. Commitment can be shown by the student's school activities, and community activities.

The applicant must also be nominated in writing by the college president or designate.

Two letters of recommendation, one from a faculty member and one from outside the college community, must accompany the application.

Application, letter of nomination, and letter of recommendation must be received by the Peace Corps no later than April 11, 1980, in order to be considered. All applicants will be notified by April 25, 1980, whether or not they have been selected.

Students chosen will receive a stipend of $1,545.00 for the summer program.

Round-trip transportation to and from Washington, DC, will be provided to each person chosen for the program.

All interns are required to stay at George Washington University, which is a short walk to Peace Corps offices. Interns will also be required to pay $63.00 per week for housing.

Application and further information is available in the office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, located in Murphy Hall.

SNEA Attends State Convention Here

The James B. Dudley Student National Education Association attended the State Convention on Friday and Saturday, March 28-29, 1980, Holiday Inn Four Seasons, Greensboro, N.C. where 42 colleges and universities were represented.

The A&T chapter was represented by Miss Sabrina Hunter - President,

Gwendolyn Morrisey, Demeteria Staton, Ina Goocharan, Sharon Roberson, Mr. Estell Harper - Advisor, Dr. F.W. Jones, Assistant Advisor. The theme of the state conference was "Quality through Action." The A&T chapter had a total number of 129 members. Awards received by the James B. Dudley SNEA were as follows, chapter with the most significant number of junior SNCAE members, chapter with most significant total number of SNCAE interns, and the chapter with the most significant total number of SNCAE members. The A&T chapter was also honored by the election of Sharon Roberson, an early childhood major, as Cluster Four Coordinator, which includes Elon College, Bennett College, Greensboro College, University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

President Sabrina Hunter served as Group Leader during workshop sessions. A Cluster meeting will be held here at A&T April 16, 1980, at 6:30 p.m. Hodgin Hall Auditorium.

Sharon Roberson said all members are asked to attend. Next year 1980-81 the State Meeting will be held in Asheville, North Carolina. Estell Harper, chapter advisor, urges all education majors, freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors to join this pre-professional organization an arm of National Education Association. This fall when students return - make it a must - your membership will keep the James B. Dudley Chapter of SNEA strong in the state.

Incidentally, any student can become a member of this student education chapter. See Estell Harper office 211-213 Hodgin Hall -second floor, for any additional information.

Election of new officers will be held during the first meeting in September.

Panels Discuss 'Black Press'

By Trudy Johnson

"The Black Press," one of the Mass Media '3' Conference Panels highlighted emphasis on Blacks in executive positions as opposed to Blacks in non-decision making positions.

Keynote panelists on the topic were Stanley Davis, vice president and general manager of the Carolina Peacemaker, John Templeton, executive editor of the Winston-Salem Chronicle, and Jimmy Swinson, executive of The Metro News of Goldsboro, N.C. Student leader was Trudy Johnson.

The panel discussion was held Saturday, March 30, at 10 a.m., in the Memorial Union, Room 100.

The two-hour panel discussion began with "twenty years ago, the Black presses couldn't compete with white dailies for Black's support, but now, they (Black presses) can," said Davis.

Davis recently received a "Man of the Year" merit award by the National Association of the Advancement of Colored People, Greensboro branch.

Carolina Peacemaker

According to Davis, "Greenboro has more millionaires than any other North Carolina city and the Black press has a right to its income within the Black community."

Al Fitzpatrick's comment on Black weeklies paying reporters $75 weekly was a false identity for Black reporters. Davis said, "A reporters get $175 weekly, plus fringe benefits." The Carolina Peacemaker has two full-time reporters; --other contributors are parttime or stringers.

If any A&T students are interested in writing for The Carolina Peacemaker, Davis suggested the following: Contact Robert Spruill; learn how to use a 35mm camera; get as much experience as possible on the school newspaper; get a summer job, preferably in the media; and, keep abreast with current issues.

A word about internships. The newspaper has accepted two summer interns already.

"Because we speak to, for, and about the Black community, our newspaper is planning to add an insert for A&T student contributors." These articles are to be written only by A&T students.

The newspaper does not follow the usual format of national and world news over local news. The format is 70 percent local news, and 30 percent national and world news.

If the newspaper expands beyond a weekly publication, Davis said, "Sunday, Wednesday, and Thursday would be the publication days."

An example of journalistic excellence was mentioned. A recent Guilford College sociology major wanted journalism experience came to this newspaper. She wrote for us, and later became a reporter for the Mississippi daily newspaper," said Davis.

Davis acknowledged Pat Thompson for becoming the first Black reporter for the daily, along with a recent promotion for city editor.

Winston-Salem Chronicle

"The Black press has its impact," when the mayor speaks to the Black community, he quotes the Winston-Salem Chronicle," said John Templeton, executive editor.

Templeton has worked as a reporter for the national Afro-American newspaper--covering Capital Hill, and as a sports writer for the Washington Post before launching his position as the newspaper's executive editor.

He mentioned that it took Fitzpatrick about 23 years to become executive editor, but it took him only 7 years. The difference is tremendous between white dominated newspapers and Black dominated newspapers.

"The Winston-Salem Journal is always ready to elaborate on negative aspects of Black life--dope pushers, robbers, poverty stricken citizens. These topics more often make front page headlines than a humanitarian issue," said Templeton.

A news alternative is needed to show that some Blacks are successful, deserving front page coverage.

Both Davis and Templeton agreed that Blacks need to consider other fields of the media besides writing, typesetting, copyediting, production, advertising, and sales.

The Winston-Salem Chronicle has three full-time reporters who receive $175 weekly salaries.

Jimmy Swinson of the Metro News also emphasized the importance of Blacks becoming more knowledgeable in areas of economics, marketing, sales, as well as broadcasting positions besides "disc jockeying."

The three panelist recommended the book entitled Think And Grow Rich, by Napoleon Hill. It shows the 31 reasons that cause people to fail and how to avoid these pitfalls.

Kinard Receives Honorary Rank From Lt. Col. Jones

Lee Kinard, the narrator of WFMY-TV Channel 2, "Good Morning Show" received the Honorary Rank of Lt. Col. and a certificate of appreciation for service.

Lt. Col. Jones, professor of Military Science at A&T State University, presented this award for the recognition given to Army ROTC Week. Army ROTC Week is celebrated throughout North Carolina March 23-29th. Tuesday, March 25, 1980, four young ladies from NC A&T Army ROTC Program were guest speakers on the "Good Morning Show."

The ladies included cadets Denise Shaw, Susan Jeffers, Jewel Dawkins, and Donna Minor. They spoke on the topic, Women in ROTC. Cadet Jeffers stated that women receive the same training men receive.

The trainings include things such as grenade launching and M-60 machine-gun firing.

Semester Program Offers Study Abroad Next Fall

A new opportunity for study in Denmark will be offered this fall when Scandinavian Seminar begins its one-semester program for college students and other adults.

The program will start at the end of July and extend over the fall months till mid-December.

It will be run along the same lines as Scandinavian Seminar's regular academic year program in Denmark, Finland, Norway or Sweden. After a short introductory course, the students will participate in an intensive two-week language course and then spend some time with a Danish family practicing the language.

From early September the students will live and study among Scandinavians at Danish folk schools (small residential liberal arts schools), where they will further improve their language skills and immerse themselves in the Danish life and culture.

On the basis of a detailed written evaluation, recommendation for credit will be sent to each student's home college or university. The fee, covering tuition, room, board and course-connected travel in Denmark is $3,500 for this five-month program. Interest-free loans are granted on the basis of need, as are a few small scholarships. Applications for the program will be accepted until May 15.

Entertainment is not free. It takes dedication, talent, and a pleasant attitude to complement the audience. A career in the entertainment field has its price even though the audience may listen at home on the radio, rather than pay an admission fee as it is paid at a concert.

WNAA had its official ribbon cutting ceremony shortly following day 2 of the Mass Media "3" Conference, on Saturday, March 29, at 2:30 p.m. Nagatha Dixon, a recent A&T mass communications graduate, reported the event on the 6 p.m. WGHP-Channel 8 news the same evening. Committee Sponsors Extravaganza

By Florina G. Byrd

The Cultural Committee of A&T is sponsoring an "A&T Cultural Extravaganza" on the campus of A&T, April 24 through 27, according to Greg Marrow, entertainment director and special assistant to the president, Kelvin Bunum.

The festivities will begin Thursday, April 24, at 6 p.m., with a jazz concert by the A&T jazz band. Afterwards, there will be an African fashion show, African art exhibit and a display of ethnic foods.

On Friday, April 25, the Student Union Advisory Board will present a casino from 1-6 p.m. in the student union. At 7 p.m., there will be a modern dance and fashion show in the ballroom. There will be two horror movies at 12 midnight, in Harrison Auditorium.

Saturday, April 26, will highlight a fun day beginning at 9 a.m. with a marathon-type running exercise. Participants are expected to jog around the entire campus. Afterwards, there will be several games, bands, and a disco.

According to Marrow, it is still uncertain whether there will be kegs of free beer provided for the students.

Sunday, April 27, will close the Black Cultural Extravaganza with a Gospel show. Various singing groups will be participating. This is to begin at 7 p.m. in Moore Gymnasium.

"We are trying to present something very entertaining for all A&T students and the public to enjoy," said Marrow. "I believe that these events will be very well received and interesting to those who participate."

Clark Paintings, 'Peaceful Pleasing To The Eye'

By Deborah M. Sanders

"The paintings of Edward Clark are peaceful and pleasing to the eye, the colors blend beautifully," commented Obelia Johnson, an art major. Miss Johnson made this comment after viewing the works of Edward Clark which are on display in H.C. Taylor Art Gallery.

For the first days of the show, Clark was available to answer questions concerning his works. An audience of approximately 60 individuals, including students and faculty members, attended the lecture which was given by Clark. In the lecture, Clark used slides of his paintings over a period of years, to show the transitions in his styles. Clark also said that he is supporting himself from the profits of his paintings.

LeRoy Holmes, chairman of the Art Department, felt that it was an excellent opportunity to have Clark present to comment on his art. "Usually we have the works without the artist," said Holmes.

Clark's work has been displayed in galleries in cities such as Paris, France; Boston, Massachusetts; Tokyo, Japan; Austin, Texas; Washington, D.C.; Miami, Florida; New York and Guadalajara, Mexico.

While choosing the works for the display, Holmes said, "I tried to choose examples which would show application of style on all media."

Most of the large paintings which are on display were painted with a pushbroom. "The broom is driven across the canvas in one sweeping motion, leaving horizontal lines across the paintings," said Clark.

Bernard Ivy, an art major, was fascinated by the magnitude of the canvases which were used. He also commented on the expressive colors of the paintings.

Cleotis Johnson, a junior art major, commented on Clark's paintings as being unique. He also said he appreciates Clark's style and color schemes.

"Edward Clark's work will be on display until April 4. All faculty members, students, and public are invited to come view his works," said Holmes.

Election Time Again!

It's time again to elect your "favorite officer of the year," for the Student Government Association. Each man or woman is placing himself/herself before you because he feels he is the best qualified for the job.

However, for those of us who remember last year's elections, we should be aware to some extent that "politics" among candidates is a very serious game. Outside forces can very well contribute to swaying an opinion or deleting a candidate.

All candidates, as well as voters, should realize that the best man considered by some is not necessarily deemed fit by others. Therefore all kinds of mishaps arise.

One may not be able to see them, however, because they come in all kinds of disguised forms. But being eliminated is not a difficult power for those who hold the upper hand.

Candidates, when running for your office of interest, keep all things in mind. But don't stoop any lower than necessary.

Students, vote. Please be sure to exercise your rights and support the candidate that you feel is more concerned about your cause. Remember also, that when elected, officers can work but so many miracles because dealing with red-tape and bureaucracy will always be their stumbling block.

Support the candidate you know has the stamina and the confidence to "support" and not be afraid to voice your cause. Surely, no 'one' is considered a choice candidate but at least give him/her the chance to prove that he can do the job.

Watch all platforms, pay attention to who is running for office, and most importantly, remember that the road to victory takes skill.

The time has come for the Board of Governors of the North Carolina University System to allow North Carolina A&T State University to develop Ph.D. level programs in electrical and mechanical engineering. The benefits from granting a Ph.D. capability to the University would be dramatic, not only for Piedmont residents, but for citizens throughout the state.

In a few years and on an extremely skimpy budget, the school has developed remarkably productive programs in mechanical and electrical engineering. The electrical engineering department operates a solid state engineering facility that compares favorably with the labs at Stanford, Cornell, and MIT.

The department also conducts research on the development of fast, efficient, small computers - the sort of "clean" industry research the state desperately needs.

Likewise, the mechanical engineering department has been conducting tests on a number of materials, including strong, lightweight metals for use on the exteriors of military and civilian aircraft. Such metals could save energy and make possible a number of swifter, more nimble aircraft.

But more promising for most Tar Heels is the mechanical engineering department's work on solar energy. Garrett House on the A&T campus is an impressive attempt to demonstrate the economic feasibility of solar home heating and power. The department also operates the state's only facility for performing efficiency test on solar cells. The advantage of better, more efficient solar cells is obvious: they save energy.

Nearly 90 percent of the faculty in the two programs have their Ph.D.'s. And they attract more per professor in outside research monies than counterparts at state universities like Missouri, New Mexico, and Nebraska, and at private universities like Auburn, Tulane, and Vanderbilt - all of which have Ph.D. programs in mechanical and electrical engineering.

Furthermore, the demand for engineers is expanding daily as information and energy industries become more and more important parts of America's future plans. Enrollments at both undergraduate and graduate levels in the engineering department at A&T have almost quadrupled in the past five years.

Yet an institution can achieve only so much without having Ph.D. programs of its own. Ph.D. schools generally receive preference for research grants, and high quality faculty members will work only so long at schools without doctoral candidates. Students working toward doctoral degrees are more highly trained and intensely motivated than master's students, and are capable of making more valuable contributions to high level research.

Finally, the Piedmont needs a state institution capable of granting doctoral degrees in the applied sciences. UNC-G has Ph.D.-level programs in the arts, humanities, and social sciences, but none in any natural or applied science. The area desperately needs a research institution capable of handling the demand for well-trained engineers. N.C. State cannot handle all the demand, nor does it conduct the same types of research as does A&T.

For years, North Carolina A&T State University has been treated like an ugly stepsister not only to UNC-G, but also to State and Carolina. It is now time to reward the men and women who have transformed A&T's engineering department into a fine research institution in its own right. But more than that, we owe it to ourselves: the opportunity to develop high-level programs in the two fields that have the most promise for North Carolina's industrial future - energy and computer research - should not be missed.

Humane Organizations 'Attack' Film Producer

Golden, Colorado - A posse of humane organizations stretching from Golden to New York City is closing in on a documentary film producer whose "Shot Dog Film," allegedly featuring the real-life killing of a small black and white dog, has sent hordes of animal-lovers into shock since its Christmas-morn showing on a New York City cable TV station.

Reporters and humane officials investigating the film suddenly can't find Tom Otterness, a writer-artist-photographer who allegedly told one journalist he produced the film because, "It was the most damaging thing I could do to an audience."

In Sacramento, California, alerted by members who had been confused by existing news reports, The Animal Protection Institute and the California Humane Educators Council tracked back on the case and discovered that, though Otterness can't be found, the posse is getting larger day by day.

The posse also has an idea on what to do when it catches Otterness. The will seek extradition of the film producer to Colorado, claiming that he obtained the dog from an animal shelter in Golden, Colorado, and had signed a contract, promising to be a responsible pet owner.

Eric Plaza, director of humane law enforcement for the A.S.P.C.A. in New York, told API's investigator that charges of unjustifiably killing an animal will be brought if Otterness's own published statements that he personally attended to the killing, as well as the filming, in "The Shot Dog Film" can be corroborated.

Viewers who saw the documentary on Manhattan Cable TV, which allegedly hadn't previewed the film and didn't know the contents when it ran the documentary on Christmas Day, have claimed that the dog-killing is shown again and again in the course of the film.

The New York Post reported that the film sprang from the Punk Art movement and may have been filmed approximately two years ago and (this is why the scene is moving to Colorado) at Golden.

"To extradite on a misdemeanor apparently is a rare legal act," stated Cheryl Mouras, director of the California Humane Educators Council which has joined API and other organizations in the call for a thorough going investigation and prosecution in the case. "But what happened here is such an act of unmotivated villainy, masquerading as Punk Art, that we think it would have a negative effect on every existing effort to police cruelty against animals if this were not treated as an exceptionally important case."

Though Otterness was reached and quoted when the controversy was first reaching the headlines in New York city, a reporter who had access to him previously found the film-maker had deserted his usual haunts as an outcry began for some type of legal action.

The humane organizations which are taking an interest in running Otterness to earth include the A.S.P.C.A. in New York, the Dumb Animal League in Golden, where the dog supposedly was obtained, the A.H.A. in Denver, Colorado, A.P.I.,

California's H.E.C. and others. A report that the National Endowment for the Arts provided $10,000 for distribution of the series in which "The Shot Dog Film" was allegedly included is being checked. There were reports from New York of an FCC involvement in the case.

The humane organizations have one ironic progress note on the campaign against the film: the Cable TV station apparently had scheduled "The Shot Dog Film" for two showings -- but won't go through with the second.

A.P.I., which said it is receiving inquiries on a possible resurgence in filmed cruelties to animals, described the reports on "The Shot Dog Film" as "the most flagrant to come in within recent times."

Killing a dog as art is in the same league with defacing a Michelangelo statue as social protest," said H.E.C.'s Cheryl Mouras. "When we say that no incident of this kind should ever be repeated, and that there ought to be even sterner ways of dealing with it, we're not talking about the censoring of films at all. We're talking about stopping the commission of a crime."

Officers' Chute Fails

Death 'More Than Accident'

Fort Bragg (AP) - An accident in which an Army captain at Fort Bragg plunged to his death when his parachute malfunctioned could have been "more than an accident," The Fayetteville Observer reported Monday.

The officer, Capt. Lawrence D. Hill, fell to his death Wednesday when his parachute failed to open during a routine proficiency jump over the Holland Drop Zone.

The newspaper quoted informed sources as saying a preliminary investigation raised significant questions about circumstances surrounding the death of Hill, who was a graduate of N.C. A&T State University.

"I haven't received all the details, but I'm sure that the CID (Criminal Investigation Division) is looking at it in terms of more than just an accident," The Observer quoted one unidentified source as saying. Another source said the case had become "very complicated."

An Army spokesman, Maj.

Tom Woods, said no information has been released in the probe and he did not know if foul play was suspected in the death.

Hill, 26, was making the routine jump with a group of soldiers from a C-130 Hercules aircraft when his main parachute malfunctioned, according to post officials.

Observers at the scene said the officer's main parachute never deployed, and while he managed to pull his reserve he was too low for it to open.

Civilian law enforcement sources said they had reliable information that a cord was found to have been cut inside the main parachute, while a pin holding the reserve parachute intact was found to have been bent, The Observer said.

The allegations could not be confirmed through military sources.

SERI Awards Contract For Export

Golden, CO -- The Department of Energy's (DOE) Solar Energy Research Institute (SERI) has awarded a sub-contract to the Illinois Institute of Technology's (IIT) Research Institute and the Solar Energy Information Service to conduct a study of U.S. industry solar exports. The contract, in excess of $100,000, calls for evaluating the current exports market in an effort to enhance and improve overseas solar commercialization activities.

The work, to be completed by October, will assess critical commercial factors that affect the solar industry export market, said Peter Tompson of SERI's Industrial Countries Branch.

Tompson said the study, which will be available to all interested parties upon completion will be compiled with the help of private firms that have been successful in exporting solar goods and services.

He said it will cover types of solar products, technology or service being exported, dollar and unit volume of exports, marketing strategies and approaches, mechanisms for identifying export opportunities, public and private barriers that have been encountered, and profiles of export organizations, foreign customers and markets.

For further information regarding the study contact: Robert S. Levi, IIT Research Institute, 10 West 35th Street, Chicago, IL., (312) 567-4609 or Justin Bereny, Solar Energy

Information Services, 18 Second Avenue, P.O. Box 204, San Mateo, CA. (415) 347-2640.

SERI, located at the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, is the nation's leading institute for solar energy research, development and demonstration programs.

Fuller Awarded Top AFROTC

Air Force ROTC Detachment 605 on the campus of NC A&T State University and commanded by Lt. Col. Monroe J. Fuller has been awarded the top AFROTC Enrollment Recruiting Award by Air Force ROTC Headquarters at Maxwell AFB, Alabama. In winning the award, Det 605 has been designated a "Max-Effort-Plus" detachment.

Each of the more than 140 Dets in the country were eligible for the award which is based on increases in the number of cadets in the Aerospace Studies (AS) 300 (junior class) cadets. Enrollment was increased by focusing recruiting not only at A&T students but on students throughout the Consortium. Enrollment of A&T students increased from 14 to 33. UNC-G enrollment increased from 5 to 7. Bennett College enrollment increased from 0 to 2; and for the first time in the history of the Detachment, a student from Greensboro College was enrolled in the AS 300 class.

In announcing the award, Colonel Thomas Phillips, Area Commandant, expressed his appreciation to the Detachment for the hard work that went into winning the award and he indicated that Det 605 should be very proud of its accomplishments.

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

College Baseball

A&T's baseball team's double-header scheduled for last Sunday was postponed because of unfavorable weather conditions.

It's going to be interesting to see just how sharp the Aggies will be Friday, April 4, when they travel to High Point to meet High Point College. Twelve days without a game is a long time for a team and the Aggies could be stale because of the long layoff. High Point would really be tough if that happens. The last time A&T took to the field they lost a double-header against Pheiffer College. Let's hope A&T rebounds against High Point.

Softball

The Aggiette softball team also had a big day for them rained out. They were scheduled to host a Round-Robin tournament Saturday, featuring some excellent teams in UNC-G, UNC, and Appalachian State.

The Aggiettes' next opponent will be Elon College on April 1 in Burlington, North, Carolina.

Track

The Aggies' men and women track team traveled to Raleigh Saturday to participate in the Atlantic Coast Relays held on the campus of North Carolina State University.

The Aggies didn't do very well, excuse me because that may be the understatement of the year. I spoke to one member on the track team who asked to remain anonymous, and he said, "We never should have gotten off the bus."

Out of the two teams representing A&T Saturday, only three members placed sixth or better in their event.

For the men's team only Keith Holmes placed. Holmes received third place honors in the triple jump(49-4) while placing sixth in the long jump(22-5).

Jackie Toomer and Cheryl Deloney were the only Aggiettes placing. Toomer placed fifth in both the shot put and the discus with throws of 33-6 and 68-10, respectively, while Deloney received fourth place honors in the long jump(13-1½).

It should be known that this is a rebuilding period for both track teams. They have been hampered for the past year with a nucleus of problems. It's going to take some time for the program to take a turn in the other direction, but they are blessed with good coaching.

Greensboro Hornets

WRQK-FM and the Greensboro Hornets will work together to provide the area with a new sports talk show.

Triad sportscaster Charlie Harville will be the show's announcer-producer.

The Hornets Show can be heard on WRQK, 99 on the FM dial, each weekday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. for 22 weeks beginning April 1.

NBA Ends Its Regular Season

By Raymond Moody

The National Basketball Association ended its regular season Sunday. Now the teams begin preparing for their "second season" to determine just who is the best basketball team in the world.

The "rejuvenated" Boston Celtics appear to be the team to beat. Boston finished with a league-leading 60 victories, which matches their number of wins for the previous two years combined.

The Celtics are led by Larry Bird's 22-point average, a feat which should earn Bird rookie-of-the-year laurels, and maybe even the leagues MVP award, if Boston wins championship.

Boston is by no means a one-man team. They rely heavily on the scoring of former UNCC star Cedric Maxwell and sixth man, M.L. Carr, who played his collegiate ball at Guilford College.

Boston's strongest challenge will be from the L.A. Lakers, who finished their season with a 58-22 record, only two wins behind Boston.

The Lakers are led by 7-2, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who's known by his peers as "The Franchise." Jabbar has done it all this year and his valuable experience, combined with his unlimited talent, makes Los Angeles a prime threat to the Celtics. If Jabbar can't get the job done, the Lakers can depend on the scoring ability of Jamaal Wilkes and "Stormin'" Norm Nixon, along with the superior passing ability of Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who last year led his Michigan State Spartans to an upset NCAA championship win over Larry Bird's previously unbeaten Indian State team.

The Philadelphia 76ers is a team which must be reckoned with in the playoffs also.

Any team that has a Julius Erving will be a contender. As everyone knows, the "Doctor" can do it all. Erving's credentials are backed by a 23-point scoring average, which makes him along with the Bird and Jabbar, a prime contender for the league's top individual award.

Looking further down the 76er roster, you have to notice 6-11, 270 pound Darrell Dawkins, who was formerly known as the "baby gorilla," Dawkins, with his incredible size, loves to throw his weight around and intimidate people. If he is scoring well, Philadelphia will be tough to beat.

The reigning NBA champions, the Seattle Supersonics, don't appear to be as strong as last year.

All-pro Dennis Johnson still reigns as the best all-round guard in the game, but running mate Gus Williams' scoring has declined, and they're not getting last year's type of play from Jack Sickma and Lonnie Shelton. Nevertheless, the Sonics finished with a 54-26 record this year; and, as long as they're in the play offs, the other NBA teams must respect them.

These four teams appear to have that certain chemistry it takes to win the NBA championship. Look for Philadelphia and Boston to square off for the Eastern Conference final, while Los Angeles and Seattle battle for the Western Conference crown. If all goes well Los Angeles should meet Boston in the championship with "Magic" Johnson's team again beating Larry Bird's team in the championship.

Coach McKinley Announces Captains For 1980 Season

North Carolina A&T head football coach Jim McKinley announced recently the Aggie tri-captains for the 1980 season.

Seniors Billy Mims, a tight end from Jacksonville, Florida, Eric Westbrook, a defensive back from Charlotte, North Carolina, and Frankie Chesson, a linebacker from Chesapeake, Virginia will lead the A&T football team next season.

"Throughout their careers these young men have exhibited skills on, as well as off, the playing field," McKinley said. "Although we will be more experienced than ever before next season we will still be a young football team.

"The entire coaching staff has a great deal of confidence in the character and motivation qualities of Billy Mims, Eric Westbrook, and Frankie Chesson."

Mims and Westbrook were All-Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference choices last season.
