Nursing Career Day held on campus

A&T Placement Center.

Students from A&T and the University of North Carolina of Greensboro attended a career day for nurses Tuesday, in Memorial Student Union. Approximately 53 hospitals and governmental agencies were represented to interview and talk with students about nursing careers.

"The purpose of the program is to expose our nursing students of the two schools of the many opportunities afforded them in the field," said Leon Warren, director of the

A&T have not had a major problem as far as jobs are concerned, provided that our graduates pass the state licensing exams. This is a must in order to become a registered nurse in the state of North Carolina or any other state," Warren said.

A&T graduates showed a 50- and 67-percent passing rate, respectively, in the winter and summer 1982 testings.

A&T grad elected to Congress

Edolphus Towns, a 1956 A&T graduate, Tuesday became the first A&T graduate ever to be elected to Congress.

Towns won the 11th Congressional seat from Brooklyn, N.Y. He beat out Jim Smith and Pat Ginocova for the seat.

A native of Chadbourn, Towns majored in Sociology at A&T.

He will succeed Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm, who decided not to run again.

Towns is the first Black person to serve as Deputy Borough President of Brooklyn.

He ran for the New York

State Assembly in 1970 and lost. In 1972, he won a seat on the New York State Committee.

Contacted in his home the morning after the election, Towns credited his election to the "hard work of a lot of people."

"We ran a low key, grassroots campaign," he said. "I especially want to thank the A&T national Alumni Association and a number of alumni chapters for their support."

Towns said he was also impressed with "the tremendous turnout of voters in the election."

Kelly Memorial Service

Service participants

A capacity crowd of students and faculty members attended memorial services Wednesday for A&T football player Travis Kelly in Harrison Atrium.

Kelly, who was taken out of Saturday's Homecoming game after complaining of headaches, was rushed to Moses Cone Memorial Hospital emergency room where he later died.

It is speculated that Kelly's death was the result of an aneurysm, a bubble that forms in the weakened wall of a blood vessel.

included the Rev. Ralph M. Ross, campus chaplain; Joseph Bryant, president of United Christian Fellowship; Mo Forte, head football coach; the Rev. Howard Chubbs, minister of Providence Baptist Church; Bobby Hopkins, SGA president; and Dr. Edward B. Fort, A&T chancellor.

The University Choir provided music.

A&T students James Canady, Raymond Hawkins, Beverly Short, James Harris, Aaron Herring and Ricardo Smalls lit candles in Kelly's memory.

ROTC sponsors food drive

By GINA DAVIS
Staff Writer

A&T Army and Air Force ROTC programs have again joined in their Annual Thanksgiving Food Drive.

The food drive is a tradition for the program. Every year it sponsors the drive to help unfortunate people.

"We are just a community organization trying to help others in need," said Capt. Daniel A. McFadgen, commandant of cadets for Air Force ROTC.

Local social service organizations give the program a list of needy families. From this list the cadets determine which families have the greatest need, and that family is given food.

Other local organizations make contributions, and, depending on the amount, the cadets determine which families to help, McFadgen said.

"How many families we choose depend on how much food is collected. We try to give a box of assorted nonperishable items that would last longer than one meal. We try to give something significant rather than a small amount."

Army Cadet 2nd Lt. Angeli- que Littlejohn and Air Force Cadet Major Jeffery Moody are in charge of the drive.

"There are 96 cadets participating in the drive," Littlejohn said. "Forty-Eight from each branch are involved in the drive."

"We have sectioned Greensboro into 48 sections," she continued. "We hope to get each section. If we cannot accomplish all the sections due to transportation problems, we hope to get the areas surrounding A&T and UNC-G (the University of North Carolina at Greensboro)."

Collecting stations for the drive are situated in the dormitories, Memorial Student Union and other places around campus. The drive will continue until Nov. 19.

Door-to-door collecting will begin Saturday from 10 a.m.-2 p.m., and next Saturday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Program participants are encouraging faculty members and students to donate nonperishables and canned goods for the needy families.

Even with the recent tampering of products, they say they are not discouraged.

"We will inspect the products thoroughly," McFadgen said. "There haven't been any pranks in this area. But we will inspect (the products) to the greatest of our ability to insure that the products we contribute have not been tampered with."

Price opens secretarial service

By KAREN LEGGETT
Staff Writer

Ever wished there was someone to type those reports and term papers for you?

Well, finally, the student demand for a secretarial service has been answered.

Delores Price, a secretary in Merrick Hall, has established a secretarial service located at 809 Summit Ave.

She and her associate, Harold Carter, decided to establish their service "for small business people who could not afford a full-time secretary,"

The response to their enterprise was encouraging. Asked if expansion was anticipated, Price replied, "Yes, if things continue to go well. We would like to have more publicity, however, along with more of the A&T graduates' business (term papers, dissertations, etc.)"

For those who care to employ such secretarial services, please contact Delores

Price at 809 Summit Avenue between the hours of 5:30-9:30 p.m., Monday-Friday, and Saturday between 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

For undergraduate students, the discount rates are $1.75 per double-spaced page and $1.75 per single-spaced page.

For graduate students, the rates are $1.75 per double-spaced page and $2.35 per single-spaced page.

Statistical typing requires additional charges.

Health Awareness Fair held in Student Union

By CORDELL ARCHER
Staff Writer

Representatives from 17 community groups took part in the second annual Health Awareness Fair held in the Memorial Student Union Ballroom this week.

Although overall student attendance was low, approximately 20 students were tested for sickle cell anemia by the Triad Sickle Cell Foundation.

"We try to make the students aware of the health services that are available on campus, as well as in the community," said Marylou Bowers, a residence counselor who helped sponsor the fair.

Marietta Douglas, a registered nurse from Sebastian Infirmary explained that they (infirmary) provide medical services directly to registered students whether they live on or off campus.

She added that they provide medical counseling consultations and referrals. They also have two full-time physicians and a staff of registered nurses who are on duty 24 hours.

The A&T Agricultural Extension Service, according to Mary Robbins, an extension agent, is basically an educational program that provides programs in home economics and 4-H youth programs. The extension service is located in Coltrane Hall across from Graham Hall on Nocho Street.

As a student observer and intern with the American Lung Association, Terry Harrell said the agency is affiliated with the Christmas Seals campaign and the Piedmont Lung Association. Harrell also said that other services provided by the agency are the Freedom From Smoking Program, Better Breathing Club and a Hypnosis Clinic to help smokers kick the habit.

Junior diatetics major Cheryl Stone was disappointed that more agencies weren't represented. "It was a 'fair' health awareness fair," she said.

Marva Watlington, also a residence counselor along with Bowers, who coordinated the fair, said that most of the agencies were supported by United Way of Greensboro and the A&T Extension Service.

The fair was sponsored by the A&T Counseling Service and the Residence Hall Program.

Read this, if nothing

By the time you read this, "Hell Week" will probably be over.

That week ends four weeks (in the fall) of what order members term "discipline".

This semester's crop of fledglings--oops--pledges may have gone over in their respective Greek and non-Greek orders and become official sisters and brothers.

What they've been doing is called pledging, that is, they've shelled out a coupla hundred bucks to spend four weeks promising to be faithful members of a certain fellowship.

It's something college students do out of certain need to "belong" as it were. They spend the pledge period learning the particular philosophies of their organization. And they do "things" their seniors term "discipline", and all in the name of brother and sisterhood.

Once official disciplined members, the newbies acquire capabilities such as how to organize keg parties and beer blasts, throw jams, step and promote brother and sisterhood.

The last is the rub.

That's what this whole fraternity and sorority stuff alleges to be about: unity, but only for a designated few.

Another thing going over does for these people. It helps develop instant personality and can make them blind to certain colors.

But in the name of unified discipline and sister and brotherhood, if it's the only way one feels he can belong, then more power to him.

But, what about Boris?

By Audrey L. Williams

As the Aggie football team soared to its first victory in Saturday's Homecoming game, fellow teammate Travis Kelly died in the emergency room at Moses Cone Memorial Hospital.

It is certain that his presence will be missed by his family, fellow teammates and friends.

Everyone is saddened and taken aback by the loss of a loved one or friend and, in the case of Kelly, those who never knew him were saddened by his death.

But, while everyone mourned his death and offered kind words of condolences, did anyone give a thought to mourning the loss of Boris Mvusi?

Mvusi was a junior engineering major from South Africa. He died last month of an alleged suicide.

Maybe Mvusi did not die as honorably as Kelly, but he was still a member of the Aggie Family.

No classes were cancelled for Mvusi's memorial service, which was held just across the street at Brown Funeral Home. No flags were lowered at half-mast. No campus memorial service was held in his memory and no words of regret were expressed on behalf of the student body.

No, Mvusi was not an athlete nor was he an active member of the many campus organizations, but he was an Aggie.

Those who knew him were saddened.

Those who knew of him spoke of his death and it was forgotten.

This gross oversight on the part of the Aggie Family is worse than any fiscal or managerial mistake the university has ever encountered. This was an oversight of a human being, an Aggie!

It is a known fact that many Black American students would rather have little to do with their African counterparts and much of the same ignorant attitude exists within the minds of many African students.

Could it be that because these two nationalities fail to acknowledge each other, while attending the same university, that Mvusi's death was so carelessly overlooked?

It is up to the members of this "family" to ensure that a terrible mistake like this one never recurs in the history of Aggieland because Boris Mvusi, like you, was an Aggie.

25 and counting...

By Nannetta Durnell

The stadium becomes hushed as the first cheer begins...

"We Know You Can Do It, We're Right Behind You". Or better yet: "We're Going To W-O-R-K, So We Don't F-L-U-N-K!"

But one does not have to feel that the world is closing in on him on all sides the closer the semester draws to an end.

This semester, try dwelling on the holiday that comes, following the close of the semester.

You know, jingle bells, mistletoe, turkey with the trimmings, family and friends together, presents and more presents.

If students have something to look forward to in life, it may not make their subjects any easier to learn, but thinking about life's pleasures may help them get over the rough times a little smoother.

Remember, there is a light at the end of the tunnel.

Friends are not much help in this area because they are usually feeling the same way. Maybe the Aggie Pep Club could give it the all-American college try.

Just imagine yourself and 1,000 fellow Aggies walking into Corbett Sports Center and sitting in the bleachers waiting for that spirited motivation, which, afterwards will have you running to your books to study. Out rushes the Aggie Pep Club. 100 strong and highly spirited.

has been going on for approximately 10 years.

Dr. Eloise Lewis, dean of the School of Nursing at UNC-G, said "I'm pleased we're here today and I think this is a unique opportunity we provide our students."

Acting Dean for the School of Nursing at A&T, Marietta Raines, was also pleased with the career day. "We're very pleased to have so many representatives from a wide geographic spread which affords opportunities for travel to new and different settings for our graduates."

She said that there are a number of opportunities for graduating seniors in terms of employment.

Warren added that A&T and UNC-G have many graduates working in prominent areas in the United States and abroad.

Marcia Lassiter, a senior at UNC-G, emphasized underclassman participation at career day. "I wish I had gone my junior year. It is good to come in contact with these hospitals, some I have never heard of. I would tell freshmen, sophomores and juniors to attend to get that summer experience."

A&T student Valerie Barnes, an advanced sophomore from Goldsboro majoring in nursing, said, "I like it. The people provide a lot of information. It is very helpful when I start trying to select a job."

A winning season--next year

By DEREK McLENDON

Special to the Register
Although the Aggiette volleyball team is out of the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I race, the team is expecting a winning season. But next year.

"We're in a rebuilding process this year having only two juniors and six freshmen," said Alice Fae Lyons, the coach. Lyons has worked hard "to prevent the team from suffering a miserable defeat," she said. She was hoping for a 40 to 60 percent record, but the team stood at 6 and 24 as of Oct. 26.

Next year's volleyball team is expecting to improve with three transfer prospects and young enthusiastic high school seniors.

This year's volleyball team suffered when the three of the 11 players became ineligible to play, leaving them with six starters and only two substitutes.

With the whole team returning next year, the recruits could return the squad's record to the heights of last year's team which had more than 20 victories.

In addition, the volleyball team may receive increased attention from the athletic department.

"I'm studying the (volleyball) budget now; the budget needs to be increased," said Orby Moss, athletic director and a former volleyball coach. "Their cost of operations is bare minimum. They need an increase to compete against the other Division I colleges. Football and basketball are the most popular sports at A&T, and more money is spent promoting them." But, Moss said, "the publicity will be increased in the future."

In Division I volleyball, the Aggiettes are competing against big-name college teams such as Duke University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C. State University, Appalachian State University, East Carolina University, Wake Forest University and UNC-Charlotte.

Angela Williams is a freshman majoring in computer science. She enjoys volleyball because it's a competitive sport. She was recruited from Duval High School in Lanham, Md., receiving a yearly scholarship.

Juliette Bowden, a junior majoring in business management, was recruited from Potomac Senior High in Oxon Hill, Md. She is on a yearly athletic scholarship.

"I chose volleyball because it's a sport where playing as a cohesive unit is more important than the performance of a few talented individuals," she said.

The Open Gate

By RICHARD WILLIAMS

Kelly was a well-respected happy-go-lucky guy

It has been almost a week since A&T recorded its first victory of the 1982 season in a 31-18 win over Morgan State University. The win, however, was marred as tragedy struck; and the mourning of Dock and Viester Kelly continues.

Their son, Travis Nowell, was removed from that game in the early stages of the contest and that would be the last time either parent would see their 20-year-old minister son alive.

Mrs. Kelly was seated in the stands during the Homecoming game at Aggie Stadium and watched her son walk off the field after punting the ball. She sensed that something was wrong when she saw her son holding his head crouched on the team bench.

She then tried to make her way down to the field but, when she got there, he had already been taken away by an ambulance to Moses Cone Memorial Hospital. There he died.

Things have not since been the same on campus for teammates and friends since the loss of the Southern Pines native.

"I think I will miss his personality and his smiling face most," said teammate Cletis Gore, a junior who is from the same hometown. "He was a happy-go-lucky guy. He was the type of guy everybody could get along with very well. If you had any problem, you could come over and talk to him."

Kelly, nicknamed "Preacher", was the president of the Youth Department of the Church of God In Christ. He was a licensed minister since 1979, and preached the morning worship sermon at Wells Memorial at least once a month.

Kelly, was in his third season at A&T. He attended Pinecrest High School in Southern Pines, where the funeral services were held earlier this week.

Kelly was A&T's punter and Head Football Coach Mo Forte, who says he is close to all his players, says he's probably hurt the most by Kelly's death.

"I think we have a close-knit family here," Forte said. "There is always sorrow when you lose a member of the family. We are going to miss him."

"He was well-respected by every teammate. He was a good football player. All we asked him to do for us was be a punter and he did that."

Kelly ranked second in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference in punting with a 38.2 average including two punts Saturday.

Place-kicker Aaron Herring took over the punting when Travis was taken from the game.

"He was a great person," said Herring, who shared rooms with Kelly when the team traveled. "It was a big shock; a real big shock."

A&T's runner Timothy Nixon eclipsed the old Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference mark of 34:37.9 in a 6.2-mile course by completing the run in 33:54. The old record was held by Ronnie Holt of S.C. State College.

But that was not enough to allow the Aggies to capture the MEAC Cross Country championship held Oct. 30 at Fort DuPont Park in Washington, D.C.

The Howard University women's team won its second consecutive MEAC title and the University of Maryland

Eastern Shore won the men's division at the annual conference meet.

Ricky Meekins led UMES to its winning 46 points with a first-place finish and set a new conference mark covering the 6.2-mile course in 33 minutes and 53 seconds, bettering Nixon's time by a second.

The men's final team points were 1. UMES (46), 2. S.C. State (66), 3. Florida A&M University (73), 4. Delaware State College (98), 5. Howard (102), and 6. Bethune-Cookman College (212). A&T had no team score.

Karen Gascoigne paced her

Howard team with a first-place time of 19:53 in the 3.1-mile women's distance.

The women's final team points were 1. Howard (40), 2. Delaware State (62), S.C. State (71), 4. UMES (77), 5. Florida A&M (99), and A&T (194). Bethune-Cookman did not have a team score.

Fred Sowerby of UMES and William Moultrie of Howard were named the Most Outstanding Coaches of the Meet for the men and women respectively. Meekins and Gascoigne were named the Most Outstanding Athletes of the Meet.
