SGA

Senate overrides veto; class queen bill to pass

staff report

At a meeting held earlier this week, the SGA Executive Board vetoed the Student Senate bill that would make class queens the attendants for Miss A&T's court.

However, the Senate overrode the veto at last Wednesday night's Senate meeting, and the bill will go into effect next semester.

Miss A&T, Robin Davis, along with her attendants were invited to the meeting to state their views on the matter.

William Martin

Communication among Blacks becoming more important

By JAMIE C. RUFF

Staff Writer

"It is going to become more important to have a great deal of communication between Blacks in office and Black organizations," said State Senator-Elect William Martin.

Martin, who was elected to the 31st district and will be the only Black senator in the General Assembly, recently spoke to the Political Science Society.

"Talk of unity and diversity can cause confusion for many Blacks," Martin said. "We can be talking about something different on the surface, but underlying it can be unity. On the surface we may disagree, but we can understand the goals and the objectives of others."

Martin used the recent 5-3-1 ward system debate as an example of lack of communication.

"There should have been more discussion," Martin said. "The task force was created by the controlling power, and everything was geared that way."

"During the age of liberalism, Blacks could go off with the issues not clear. But now our ideas and actions must be organized."

Martin said that Blacks must vary the type of politics they use to suit the times. They said that they opposed the bill because some type of screening should be used to select the people Miss A&T will have to work with.

Comments from Davis and her court sparked a heated discussion between the queens and the senators.

The senators say that the bill would eliminate duplication of the role of class queens and attendants, give the class queens more responsibility, bring the class queens closer to SGA and reduce SGA expenses at Homecoming.

they use to suit the times.

"In the 60s, Blacks could be direct," Martin said. "Things go in cycles. Now we have to look at the long-range picture and see how something will affect us."

"Sometimes, we should not speak out on a point. Sometimes we should beat around the bush."

"In some instances don't deal with the racial aspect. Sell the community on it and know that Blacks will benefit more."

Martin addressed the importance of coordination.

"As each issue arises, we have to assess what will be the best move politically," he said.

"Communication between the Black community and its Black representatives is a problem because of funds. We're going to have to set up better communication with Black newspapers and pull together politically educational groups to discuss things."

"We always have to consider the importance of involving the community."

Martin said that he intends to create a network among Black citizens and Black representatives.

"We have to coordinate our efforts to repeal any negative legislation," he said.

Author Maya Angelou will lecture tonight at 8 in Richard B. Harrison Auditorium as a part of the Lyceum Series. See story page 3.

Herman Gist

Economic parity faces Greensboro Blacks

By GINA DAVIS

Staff Writer

Economic parity is the problem facing today's Blacks in Greensboro, said State Representative-Elect Herman Gist.

"Blacks who are in an elected or appointed position should have a commitment to see that we (Blacks) receive economic parity," Gist said recently in an interview. "And wherever possible," he added, "they should develop affirmative action policies of their own."

Gist, a merchant of exotic coffee and a member of the ABC Board, was recently elected to the General Assembly.

A&T students played a significant part in his election he said.

"I feel comfortable with A&T students. Their votes gave me greater strength to impart the message of Black perspective.

"Every time the students go to the polls, they send a message," he said. "The message is that they are able to play an important role in the benefits they might receive, grants, money for school..."

Gist said he is looking forward to A&T students' playing a part in next year's city council election. "Their votes can make or break a politician."

Last year Greensboro elected an all-white city council. Votes from A&T could have put a Black on the council, he said.

He said he wants to see a balance in university hiring, added that A&T should hire as many whites in significant administrative positions as the University of North Carolina (See Gist Page 6)

Former Labor Secretary Marshall to lecture at A&T

An address by Dr. Ray Marshall, former U.S. Secretary of Labor under the Carter administration, will highlight an economic lecture series at A&T.

Marshall, currently the Bernard Rapoport Centennial Professor of Economics and Public Affairs at the University of Texas, will speak 6:30 p.m. Dec. 9 in Merrick Hall Auditorium.

The lecture is open to the public.

His topic will be "Some Reflections on Employment and Training Programs and Economic Policies."

Marshall's visit to A&T is being made possible by a grant from the Department of Labor through the National Economic Association (The Association of Black Economists). The lecture is sponsored by the A&T economics department, chaired by Dr. Basil G. Coley.

Marshall is considered to be one of the most outstanding professionals in the field of labor economics and employment policy.

A native of Oak Grove, La., he was Carter's chief adviser on labor matters from 1977-1981.

Before that, he was chairman of the economics department at the University of Texas and at the University of Kentucky. He also taught economics at Louisiana State University, the University of Mississippi and San Francisco State College.

Marshall has written 22 books and monographs in the field of economics, including "Employment Discrimination: The Impact of Legal and Administrative Remedies," "Labor in the South," and "Black Employment in the South."

He is president of the National Policy Exchange in Washington, a member of the National Council for Employment Policy and the National Policy Exchange, and the steering committee of the United Nations Association.

Marshall holds the B.A. degree from Millsaps College, the M.A. degree from Louisiana State University and the Ph.D. degree from Louisiana State University and the Ph.D. degree from the University of California at Berkeley.

GM

Autos enter computer age

By DR. RICHARD MOORE
Special to the Register

If recent experiences at the General Motors Corp. are any indication, more and more the designing of automobiles will be done by computer.

That was the message being preached in Greensboro by Ronald F. Hudler, director of corporate engineering computer coordination for GM.

Hudler was a member of a team from General Motors who visited A&T to advise students in the university's fast growing computer science program and in business, engineering and technology.

Hudler said that at GM, about 20 percent of the product design is currently done by computer. But he indicated that this percentage is rapidly increasing.

"In the last three months, we have appropriated $52 million for computer graphics hardware," he said. "Another $35 million is appropriated for November, and $70 million has been appropriated for the first six months of next year."

Another sign of the growing interest in computer designing, Hudler said, is the increasing number of design consoles at General Motors. He said that the consoles now total 1,000, but by the end of the decade the company will have 5,000 consoles.

"The industry for the first time is a $1-billion industry. By the end of the decade, it will be a $25-billion industry," Hudler said.

He added that in recent years, there have been at least 50 new startup companies selling hardware and software for computer design.

"This is one of the fastest growing segments of the computer business," he said. "I can't think of another industry which will grow as fast."

The representatives from General Motors visited classrooms and provided technical presentations for students.

The team included Vivian Logan, recently promoted to the position of trade analyst; George Stewart, director of linguistic information services; and Haven Cockerham, personnel director for the Fisher Body Division. Cockerham is an A&T graduate.

A&T's computer science program was initiated August 1980, with 24 students, according to Dr. Wendell Jones, chairman of the department of mathematics and computer science.

He said that more than 300 student are now enrolled in the computer science program.

Panty raiders be warned

By FRANCES WARD
Staff Writer

Panty raids just aren't what they used to be.

Used to be that male students would stand outside of a female dormitory yelling for the residents' undergarments.

In response, the women would reciprocate.

Today, male students run into female dorms and stampede up and down the halls.

Some go as far as to enter the rooms and take personal belongings.

"Really, it (a panty raid) is a deliberate act to molest, destroy and take and damage equipment and personal belongings of occupants of a building," said Dr. Jesse E. Marshall, vice chancellor for student affairs.

"A young lady was injured in Cooper Hall and another one was injured in Vanstory Hall. Also a residence supervisor was injured in Zoe Barbee Hall," said Marshall, who issued a university policy concerning panty raids this semester to all students and administrators.

Trespassing or unauthorized presence in or in the vicinity of residence halls which threatens the security, safety and peace of occupants will not be tolerated, the policy says.

In recent panty raids, Marshall said that "doors were smashed, windows were broken and personal property was taken."

Marshall added that a female dorm resident's mother withdrew her from A&T because of the panty raids.

A student found in violation of the policy will be subject to prosecution according to university procedures or local courts.

Non-students found in violation will be prosecuted through local criminal courts.

Any person guilty of a misdemeanor can be punished by a fine not to exceed $500, imprisonment for not more than six months, or both, according to the N.C. Criminal Law Book (G.S. 14-134)

Crime Prevention

Taking a bite out of crime

By MICHAEL THOMPSON
Staff Writer

No one likes being a victim of a criminal act, but many college students have been subjected to the consequences of theft, vandalism and other illegal crimes every school year.

The university police department is trying to deter these incidents through its Crime Prevention Program, which began two years ago as a pilot program in mainly larger dorms.

Barbee, Curtis and Holt Halls were among those cited due to the high rate of larceny which occurred in those dormitories.

"We started off with one element of crime prevention (engraving), and since then we've grown to several (crime prevention) methods," said Lieutenant L.A. Winston, who is a crime prevention officer.

Other methods which he referred to include posters and public service announcements for area radio stations. The latter was used during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays last year.

The psa's were "used to advise the students as to what can happen if you don't lock your door or lock your car the night before you leave," he added. "We look at crime in dollars and cents. We're trying to help the student save money," Winston, who makes periodic crime prevention presentations.

Winston uses an illustrated display to accompany his speeches to provide a visual effect for his audiences.

The display contained helpful hints, four of which deal with auto safety, keys, bicycles and walking.

• Auto safety--Take your keys with you. Park in well-lit areas. Don't pack the night before you leave. Don't pick up hitchhikers.

• Keys--Keep doors locked at all times. Keep keys safe at all times. Don't lend keys to anyone. Don't leave articles in building doorways (i.e., bottles, cans, bricks, etc.). If your keys are lost or stolen, report it to the university police immediately.

• Bicycles--Register your bicycle. Keep a record. Engrave it with your driver's license number. Lock your bike when not in use. Report a theft to the university police.

• Walking--Walk in groups of two. Get a ride if possible. Look alert. If you are attacked by a robber, let the person have your money.

"You can get your property replaced a lot better than getting your life replaced," Winston said. "We don't want students to take chances with their safety."

CIC Minority Fellowships

The CIC Minorities Fellowships Program will award more than 50 four-year fellowships in 1983 to minority students seeking doctorates in a wide variety of fields in the social sciences, humanities, the sciences and engineering.

The fellowships provide full tuition and an annual stipend of at least $5,500 for each of four years.

Sponsored by the Committee on Institutional Cooperation (CIC), the consortium of the Big Ten universities and the University of Chicago, the fellowships may be used at any one of the 11 CIC universities to which recipients have been admitted.

Students from under-represented minority groups who intend to pursue studies leading to a Ph.D. in the social sciences, humanities and science fields covered by the program are eligible to apply.

A total of 25 fellowships are available in the social sciences programs.

The deadline for applications for fall 1983 is Jan. 15, but students are urged to apply as early as possible in the fall. A unique one-step application procedure combines on a single form application both for the fellowship and for admission to any of the CIC Universities.

In operation since 1978, the CIC Minorities Fellowships Program has now become the largest privately-funded comprehensive minorities fellowship program in the nation. To date almost 200 students from all sections of the country have received fellowships to begin their graduate studies at the various CIC universities. Major funding for the program has been provided by the Lilly Endowment, Inc., The Andrew W.

Mellon Foundation, and the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation.

Detailed information about the program can be obtained by writing to the CIC Minorities Fellowships Program, 111 Kirkwood Hall, Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., 47405.

Prospective applicants from outside Indiana may also call toll-free at 800-475-4420 to obtain information and application forms.

The universities at which the fellowships may be used are the University of Chicago, the University of Illinois, Indiana University, the University of Iowa, the University of Michigan, Michigan State University, the University of Minnesota, Northwestern University, Ohio State University, Purdue University and the University of Wisconsin.

Maya Angelou lecture tonight in Harrison

Acclaimed writer Maya Angelou will lecture tonight at 8 in Richard B. Harrison Auditorium.

The lecture is sponsored by the university's Lyceum Series and is open to the public.

Angelou currently makes her home in Winston-Salem, and is a visiting professor at Wake Forest University.

She has achieved success as a singer, songwriter, educator, dancer, author, historian, lecturer, actress, producer, editor, poet and playwright.

Reared by her grandmother in Stamps, Ark., she studied dance and drama in San Francisco, then studied with dancer, Pearl Primus, in New York.

Most noted for her writings, she has written five best sellers including the four parts to her autobiography I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, Gather Together in My Name, Singin' and Swingin' and Gettin' Merry Like Christmas and The Heart of a Woman.

Her poetry collections include Just Give Me a Cool Drink of Water 'Fore I Diiie, "Oh Pray My Wings Are Gonna Fit Me Well and And Still I Rise.

She also wrote and produced the television film Sister, Sister.

Much honored for her artistry, she holds seven honorary doctorate degrees.

She was accorded the Ladies Home Journal award, "Woman of the Year in Communications," in 1976.

The University Chamber Singers and their guests performed a concert of "Tidings of Comfort and Joy" on Wednesday night in Richard B. Harrison Auditorium.

Guests included members of the A&T faculty and administration, local community choir members and A&T students.

Constance Kotis, instructor in piano, is the group's director.

Special organ selections were performed by Ivan Battle, artistic director of the newly formed Greensboro Music Academy.

Judith Howle, assistant professor of voice, was also a featured soloist.

Aggies in the News

Graduate School Dean Dr. Albert W. Spruill has published a book on The Historic Tour of North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University.

The book traces the history and development of each building on the campus.

Included also in the book are two special tributes, one a song, "The Sacred March of A&T," first performed by the A&T choir last Founder's Day; and the second, "A Tribute to Alma Mater," which has been performed by the A&T Speech Choir.

Spruill's first book was Great Recollections From Aggieland, a cultural history of A&T.

Spruill, a native of Columbia, is president-elect of the Black Conference of Graduate Schools. He is a graduate of A&T and holds the Ph.D. degree from Cornell University.

Chains of Apartheid

By SUE S. WILLIAMS

Special to the Register

Joseph Gbaba's play, Chains of Apartheid will be performed 8 p.m. Dec. 7 and 8, in Aycock Auditorium at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Tickets are $1 for students and $3 for non-students.

Chains is a play about the segregation policy and political and economic discrimination against Blacks in South Africa. It follows the lives of several families as they attempt to locate employment in predominately white Seweto, and try to live in the squalor that they've been subjected to.

The families question their conditions, but live in fear of losing their "passes" that allow them to walk the streets of Seweto.

The audience will feel their grief and pain as family members are slain at the whim of the white police.

This is a painfully honest account of conditions in South Africa as seen through Gbaba's eyes.

Gbaba is a graduate student at UNC-G, and plans to receive an M.F.A. degree in May 1983. He is sponsored by the government of Liberia, and plans to return to Liberia to form the first national theater production company after completing his studies.

He has formed Dekontee Artists in Greensboro, and this is the theater company that will perform Chains.

Dekontee Artists is made up of UNC-G and A&T students and members of the Greensboro community.

The Artists performed during this year's City Stage Celebration.

Electronic music in Frazier Hall

By DEREK McLENDON
Staff Writer

A student-operated electronic music concert will be presented 8:15 p.m. Thursday in Frazier Hall, Room 107.

The concert is sponsored by the Electronic Music Club which is made up of students interested in electronic music.

"The term electronic music doesn't tell you anything about the music style," said Dr. Seth Howard Dworkin, the club's faculty adviser. "It tells you how the music is produced. It encompasses all styles of music and shows the audience the wide range of expressiveness.

"It can include classical, rock 'n' roll and funk. It can also imitate and create brand new sounds."

Dworkin said he experimented with different styles of music while studying for his doctorate at the State University of New York at Buffalo. Those included classical, electronic music, jazz, free improvisation, rock, new wave and world musics.

"Every popular music group has an electronic musician," Dworkin said, such as "Roger Troutman with (the) Zapp (Band)," and "Berie Worrel, former player of Parliament, now with the Talking Heads, a new wave group.

"The Human League, Yellow Magic Orchestra and Kraftwerk are groups that produce extreme electronic music." Frank Zappa is also an electronic musician.

One of the featured composers of some of the electronic music that will be played next Thursday night is Rudy V. Hinnant II, a junior majoring in education.

"Hinnant has performed with the F-Art Ensemble at the Night Shade Cafe, and as a musical director for the Comedy Construction Company, a local traveling troupe. He has also written songs for the Suzie Acid Band, a local new wave group.

Hinnant has formed his own band, Hinnant Productions Limited--Middlefinger.

The members of the band are Eric Bowden, Willie Graham, Keith Horton, Bruce Alston, Curtis Good, Anthony Kennerly and George Clinton.

The Electronic Music Club's music is being played on Guilford College's radio station, Dworkin said.

"We hope an enthusiastic response to our music will generate some air time on WNAA," he said.

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS-NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES

'Padre, I think God forgets where I live'

This point in the semester often brings to mind the woman, identifying herself only as Martha, who sought the advice of Father Bill Broker--the Padre.

The Padre is sort of a Dear Abby of the religious circuit.

Martha told the Padre that she sometimes felt like life wasn't worth living; that God had forgotten where she lived.

She wondered why God would let some people suffer so much while others seemed to sail through life with very few problems.

The Padre told Martha that Jesus Christ cried out somewhat the same words when he was crucified to his Father: "My God, why have you forsaken me?"

The Padre said that Martha had touched on a great mystery: suffering, and its many sides--its intensity, tears, value, glory and even its seemingly uselessness.

But, he said, there are three points that stand out.

First, suffering can be valuable or useless. Everyone suffers. No one can escape it. The Padre cited the situation that involved the two thieves that were crucified along with Christ to illustrate his point.

One thief rejected the Lord in his anguish, rendering his suffering useless. The other thief accepted his suffering and reached out to Christ. He was promised "paradise" that day.

Both men suffered the same, but each ended up differently.

Secondly, Christ wanted his followers to know that suffering was a part of being his disciple. He promised that suffering with him on earth would be like a mother giving birth. After birth, the mother forgets her pain in the joy that the a child is born to her.

Finally, suffering must not be confused with unhappiness. Happiness comes from loving, the Padre said, and unhappiness comes from not loving.

The Padre had discovered an alternative way to say: "Hang in there; you're not alone."

Graduation; what's next?

By Nannetta Durnell

As graduation nears and college years come to a close for a chosen few, the excitement of graduating is often overshadowed by a big question: What do I do now?

For December graduates, the idea of entering a world where 11.6 million people are unemployed is a depressing thought especially when informed that Blacks are leading in the unemployment statistics.

But, there are some students that have maintained high grade-point averages and others have shown student involvement and interest in their majors.

These students will be rewarded, and continue their education by attending graduate school while other students, thanks to the Career Placement Center, will have a job to look forward to at the close of the semester.

Not all students will be so fortunate.

Many will go through the painstaking process of trying to find a job day in and day out only to hear at the close of each day, "We'll let you know if something turns up." Or, how many times have you heard: "Don't call us, we'll call you." And many students will have to settle for jobs in areas that they did not major in in college.

So, when you hear a comrade say to you, "Oh I can't wait until I graduate from A&T!", remember, what is waiting for you in today's world.

Yet, for some students it is not too late. The best way to get a jump on what awaits you is to maintain a high grade-point average or show some enthusiasm and involvement in your major while at A&T.

Then, when the time approaches for you to leave the nest and go out into the world, maybe you won't wind up as a statistic.

The Money-Making Syndrome

By Audrey L. Williams

Engineering and technology are highly specialized and competitive fields, but there seems to be a shortage of qualified people that are willing to pass their knowledge on.

A&T's Engineering School is an example of this.

Although the United States is supposed to be one of the most industrialized and technological nations in the world, there seems to be a great shortage of engineers who are eager to share what they have learned with others.

No one wants to teach engineering it seems, because "it doesn't pay."

Some of the greatest rewards, as many educators will attest to, come in small packages. If some of these educators had given money a higher priority over learning, many would suffer. Appreciation and thanks have no monetary value, but the best educators realize that the appreciation and thanks hold far more value than money.

The specialized skills of engineering and technology need these kinds of educators. And more and more, everyday the same complaint is heard: "There are not enough Black engineers."

It's sad to say, but many Black engineers get caught up in the corporate money-making syndrome, leaving eager students with no one to teach them; left out in the cold.

Engineers of A&T, you must realize this. If you really want more Blacks and qualified people in the field, you must disregard monetary value for at least a while, and give something back that someone so gratefully gave to you, knowledge.

Reggae Music

Editor of the Register:

Regardless of where you come from, once you are a Black man, you are definitely an African!

Consequently, it is necessary that all Blacks realize this and take pride in their culture.

The performance of the reggae group, the "Awareness Arts Ensemble", scheduled for 10 p.m. Saturday, in Moore Gymnasium, will provide us with an immense opportunity to see and relive our culture.

Reggae music is a music of hope and inspiration to the oppressed. It has become the music of the Third World and all those who seek freedom in this degenerate and corrupt society.

Deltas say thank you

Editor of the Register:

The members of the Alpha Mu Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc. would like to express our sincere thanks to everyone who helped make our 50th Anniversary Celebration a success.

We especially thank Joe Williams for all of his outstanding assistance and all persons and organizations who purchased and/or made donations.

As always, the ladies of Delta Sigma Theta strive toward helping the public and offering service to those in the community with need.

For those who feel we have maintained a low profile, this semester the Alpha Mu Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta is involved in the following service projects:

- We are currently working with the Best Friends Program in conjunction with United Way. This organization works with young children who need the help and support of an older friend. It is similar to the Big brother/sister program.

- We are currently working with St. James Presbyterian Church on a tutorial program for children in need of help in reading and writing.

- For Thanksgiving, we conducted our annual door-to-door food drive. We collected enough food for two large families; one home in Greensboro and one in Winston-Salem. We presented each family with the goods in time for Thanksgiving.

Sincerely,
The Sorors of Delta Sigma Theta

Register Submission Policy

Deadline for submitting materials to the A&T Register for publication in the Tuesday paper must be in the office by 5 p.m. the previous Sunday; for the Friday paper, 5 p.m. the previous Wednesday.

This includes stories, announcements and letters to the editor and other opinionated pieces.

NO EXCEPTIONS WILL BE MADE.

All material must be typewritten or printed legibly, double-spaced and submitted on 8 1/2 x 11 inch paper.

Write on only one side of the paper.

Special guidelines govern the submission of letters. The Register reserves the right:

- to reject letters that border on being libelous, obscene or in extremely poor taste;
- to correct spelling, punctuation and grammar and to edit the letter according to news style, but will not alter its meaning;
- to reject letters written in a bizarre style or in a foreign language;
- to reject all letters that do not carry a student number or a phone number where the writer can be reached;
- to reject all unsigned letters. A TYPEWRITTEN NAME IS NOT A SIGNATURE. Names may be withheld, however, upon request of the writer.

In terms of money for students and buildings and state resources, Gist said that A&T should be equal to or have more than UNC-G.

He said he hopes to serve on the Higher Education Committee, so that he can assist A&T.

"A&T is a role model for young Black people," he said, and "as a model, it has to have individuals who make decisions in schools."

He said, "students should have confidence and be able to communicate with their leaders."

Gist said he will be a watchdog and will attempt to bring money into A&T. A&T should play a part in the economic development of Greensboro.

It has "a School of Business. Struggling Black businesses should be assisted and assist the Business School," he said.

Gist said that he is looking forward to the Congressional Black Caucus, the N.C. Leadership Caucus and the N.C. Legislative Black Caucus being instrumental in the direction he will take.

Gist is also a supporter of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's Economic Reciprocity Program, which involves the circulation of Black money among Blacks.

Winston: Use common sense

Editor of the Register:

During the day when you're not noticing, or at night when you don't see it, your campus police are on duty patrolling areas keeping a watch out for crime, for your protection.

When does it happen? It happens all the time, at anytime!

Anytime, anyday you can be a victim of crime. It might be something that happens to you where you can't help the problem because of your own carelessness.

Carlessness yes. That's one of the major causes of crime.

Jane goes down the hall just for a few minutes to visit Sue. "Oh! I'll just close the door shut; nobody will think it's unlocked."

Jane comes back and her television's missing or her jewelry is gone from her dresser top. People in the hallway, whom can you accuse!? No unfamiliar faces and nobody saw anything. It's your fault! You know you have valuable things in the room. Why take for granted that nobody will try your lock?

Oh, just because you did it a few times or all last semester and got away with it, next time you might not be so lucky.

Bob is out of soap, toothpaste and other necessities. He knew that this morning, but he decides to go to a store off campus that night. He gets mugged on his way back from the store.

Bob could have avoided this. He knew he was out of those things before. Why didn't he go to the store during the day?

So you have a class load and can't make it during the day. Borrow until the next day, rather than go at night

These are things L.A. Winston reported that happen to students everyday because they don't think about what could happen ahead of time.

"People have grown apart; they're more individualistic. People have gotten off to themselves. You do your thing and I'll do mine; and, if your thing just so happens to be the same as mine, good," he said.

"You want to walk across campus to go to the library; don't go alone. Take someone with you. If you can't find someone to go with you, find somebody who might be going the same time you are and ask them if you can walk with them. You don't have to get personal with them.

"Things students can do to help us and themselves would be not to leave personal or university property accessible to the would-be thief in such places as locker rooms, automobiles, lobbies, classrooms or unlocked dormitory rooms and offices.

"It's all just using your common sense," Winston said.

Editor of the Register:

Many of you have purchased the Caricature Maps of this campus.

Part of the proceeds were forwarded to the United Way Agency, and the remainder will be used to sponsor membership for several children at the Hayes-Taylor YMCA.

The efforts made by the Campaign volunteers here at A&T and the response of hundreds of students and staff members proved that this institution is a very caring community.

Programs sponsored in conjunction with the United Way Agency include the Rape and Family Abuse Prevention Service, the Family Life Council Inc., the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, the Salvation Army and both the YMCA and YWCA just to name a few.

On behalf of the student body, a special "Thanks" is extended to Shirley Frye, assistant vice chancellor for development and university relations.

Through her urging, not only did A&T surpass its goal by donating $19,600, but it also made all of us more alert to the fact that we, as a unified university, need to branch out in the communities.

There is no way this institution can survive without their aid.

Aggies tip off tonight against the Wolfpack

By RICHARD L. WILLIAMS
Sports Editor

The A&T Aggies will tip off the 1982-83 basketball season with a bang when they travel to Raleigh Saturday night to face tough N.C. State University at 7:30 p.m. in Reynolds Coliseum.

Both coaches have key returnees from last year's successful teams. A&T returns four starters from last year's 19-9 squad. Joe Binion, a 6-foot-8-inch forward, the incumbent conference player of the year, heads the list.

N.C. State, 22-10 last season, returns its top three performers from last year; they are 6-11 Thurl Bailey, and pint-size guards Sidney Lowe and Derrick Whittenburg.

Both teams participated in last season's National Collegiate Athletic Association championship tournament and both were ousted in the first round. The Wolfpack will be hard-pressed to finish higher than third in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

On the other hand, A&T is predicted to rule the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference for the third consecutive season.

The Wolfpack warmed up for the Aggies by breezing past Western Carolina University Monday night 103-66. A&T faces the Catamounts later this season.

This will be Head Basketball Coach Don Corbett's first look at his club as it prepares to defend its MEAC championship.

In addition to Coach Jim Valvano's three returning starters, he will probably start Lorenzo Charles (6-7) and Cozell McQueen (6-11) Saturday night.

Corbett's returning starters are Binion, Eric Boyd (6-5 guard), James Horace (6-5 swing man) and Antoine Collins (6-7 forward).

With the presence of 6-9 Juan Lanauze, Corbett can move Binion to his natural forward position.

Horace, a senior, suffered an injury in the preseason and has not gotten back into the form of his early years.

Corbett said he would start Brian Booker in the season opener because he has had a fine preseason.

"He's just a great defensive player," Corbett said of the 6-2 junior guard. Booker played sparingly last season as a substitute, but started in one ballgame.

"We've looked at Booker strong the last 10 days," Corbett continued. "He's had a great preseason for us and he really deserves it."

This will be A&T's first time ever playing with a 30-second clock and the new three-point field goal.

"If my players have the shots, they've got to take it," said Corbett referring to the 19-foot three-pointer instituted this year on a trial basis in the ACC.

This is A&T's second outing against an ACC team under Corbett's guidance; in 1980, A&T fell by 10 points to Duke University in the first round of the National Invitational Tournament.

"It's a very tough opener," Corbett said, "but we have enough poise and experience to play with State and anybody else. It's just a matter of going out and doing the job."

"The key to winning this game," he added, "is controlling the tempo; we've got to expound and play tough defense."

The Iceman's pumped up

By RAYMOND MOODY
Staff Writer

When A&T opens its basketball season Friday night, Joe Binion faces one of the toughest challenges of his career.

That's the night this 6-foot-8-inch power forward will lead his Aggie teammates against 16th ranked N.C. State University.

However, for Binion, the game is more than just a game against a top-ranked team.

The Rochester, N.Y. native, who averaged 19.1 points and 9.2 rebounds last season, is a legitimate All-American candidate, and against N.C. State, he will confront its All-American candidate Thurl Bailey, a 6-11 power forward who was named this year to the All-Atlantic Coast Conference preseason first-team.

The significance of this confrontation between the two All-American hopefuls contrasts greatly.

The game doesn't mean as much to Bailey. He will get a chance to prove his status later in the season when he goes up against frontcourt standouts like Ralph Sampson (University of Virginia) and Sam Perkins (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill).

Binion won't have that luxury. This is a one-shot deal for him because he won't face another opponent this season with a reputation like Bailey's.

"I know this is a big game for me," said Binion, who was named the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference's most valuable player last season.

"It can give me some positive exposure," he added. But I really don't see it as the maker or breaker game for me."

There have been other big games for the Aggie forward. He went up against Duke University and Gene Banks his freshman year in the first-round of the National Invitational Tournament. His team lost, but the lean Binion fared well, scoring 18 points.

Last season, after A&T won the MEAC tournament's crown, the smooth Binion, who likes to be called "Iceman," scored 17 points and grabbed 12 rebounds against nationally-ranked West Virginia University in the first-round of the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament's West Region.

There are many positive qualities labeled to Binion's abilities on the basketball court. A junior, he is a consistent outside jumper, and he can also drive to the basket with authority. He also has excellent passing skills and is the team's leader on and off the floor.

However, Binion wanted more improvement in his game, even after having such a great season last year. So, he did something about it during the offseason.

"I lifted weights over the summer and that made me stronger," he said.

In his head-to-head confrontation with Bailey, Binion will have to use his newly-acquired strength to be effective against the 6-11 Wolfpack star. Bailey has three inches on Binion, and with Bailey's long, rubbery like arms that can seemingly stretch to the ceiling of the Reynolds Coliseum, Binion must get good inside position and outmuscle him under the boards.

"I have a lot of respect for Bailey. He is a talented player," said Binion, who watched him perform recently in Greensboro during one of N.C. State's Red-White intra-squad games.

"I'm so pumped up," Binion said, that "when I get on the court with him, I know I'm going to want to work on him every time. But I don't want to get away from our team-concept."

Wild Bunch tourney bound

A&T's Wild Bunch needs help to make it to this year's Sugar Bowl.

The Wild Bunch, the 17-member intramural football team, plans to participate again this year in the Budwiser National Collegiate Sugar Bowl Classic in New Orleans, La., Dec. 27-Jan. 1.

Last year, more than 67 colleges competed from as far as California to Alaska, and the Wild Bunch advanced to the semi-finals.

"I think this year we're going to win," said Head Coach, Damien Noble, a political science graduate student from Rochester, N.Y.

"Everybody is working hard and practicing seven days a week, and double sessions on Saturdays and Sundays," he said.

One method the team is using to raise money is by co-sponsoring a talent show with the A&T chapter of the NAACP 8 p.m. Saturday, in Richard B. Harrison Auditorium.

Admission price is $1.

"We plan on driving from Greensboro to New Orleans, and all the money we raise will be for gas and any emergency there and back," Noble said.

The games will be televised on the ESPN cable television network.

WNAA, 90.5

Station to cover game

Radio station WNAA, 90.5, will broadcast live and remote tonight's A&T vs. N.C. State University Wolfpack game which will be played in Raleigh.

The game will be broadcast on WNAA's frequency and will be engineered and produced by Gary Flanigan.

Play-by-play coverage will be conducted by Vince Howard and News and Sports Director Gil Harris.

WNAA will be the only radio station in the area carrying the game live.

The game is scheduled to be aired at 7:30 p.m.

Harris said that "we hope to air many more magnificent Aggie events in the future."

Harris added that he hopes to hear feedback from the broadcast. And anyone who would like to hear future Aggie basketball broadcasts is asked to give the station a call or drop a message by.

Tonight's broadcast was made possible by a grant from Community Pharmacy, 600 E. Market St., and Roseborough Paint Co. 2726 McConnell Road.

We're looking for a few good college students and graduates who can fill the shoes of a Marine Corps Officer. That's a pretty tall order. Because it means leading other Marines. Being a leader of the finest. Being responsible for their safety and welfare. Being in charge. That's something no civilian job can offer you at 26. It's something very few people can ever measure up to. For those few who do meet our standards and have the drive to be a Marine Officer, we offer tuition assistance in the NROTC, Platoon Leaders Class (PLC), even a chance to join the Marine Reserve while you're still in college.
