Singer Roberta Flack to perform Saturday

Rhythm and Blues Vocalist Roberta Flack will perform a benefit show, sponsored by the James B. Hunt for the U.S. Senate Campaign, in Corbett Sports Center Saturday night.

Gov. Hunt is scheduled to speak at the concert, which will begin at 8 p.m.

Flack, a native of Black Mountain, N.C., is one of the most successful female vocalists in the industry since she started recording on the Atlantic label in 1968.

Flack's earlier influence in music stemmed from listening to gospel singers such as Mahalia Jackson.

At the age of nine she took piano lessons and at 15, she enrolled at Howard University on a full music scholarship.

After graduating from college, she taught English in Farmville, N.C. before moving back to Washington, D.C. to teach and work as a night club singer.

At the 1973 Grammy Awards, Flack won both record and song of the year, with her smash hit, "Where is the Love."

In 1974, her hit "Killing Me Softly" was voted Song of the Year, Record of the Year and the Best Pop Vocal by a female.

All proceeds for the show will go toward the James B. Hunt Committee, which is organizing his campaign for state senate against U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms.

Tickets for the concert will be $6 for students with I.D. and $10 for adults. Doors will open at 7 p.m.

Tickets are available at the Memorial Student Union, Schoolkids Records, Trevi Fountain Restaurant, and all Ticketron outlets.

Judge issues injunction

Clark returns to the faculty

Dr. Wesley Clark, who has battled 18 months to keep his job at A&T, will be back on the faculty Monday under an injunction issued Tuesday by U.S. Middle District Judge Frank W. Bullock.

Clark, a Black engineering professor, has filed suit against the university on the basis of race, and age discrimination in denying him tenure. He was terminated from his job last May.

According to the injunction, A&T has not been ordered to put Clark back in charge of the classes he taught last year, but simply to put him back on staff and be given duties consistent with his training.

Although Bullock has given the injunction, the UNC Board of Governors will make the final decision on the case.

"This case has raised serious questions in the court's mind and the public's mind," Bullock said. "The purpose of this injunction is to get some stability into this matter."

In an article that appeared in the Greensboro Daily News and Record Wednesday, Clark said after the hearing that he is pleased with Bullock's decision and that "I'll be back at work as soon as they let me. I'll be back there tomorrow if they say I can be."

Several members of the Architectural Engineering Society, who protested the denial of Dr. Clark's tenure, commented on the Clark case during a meeting last Wednesday.

"Dr. Clark is one of the best instructors we have. If we lose him it would be our loss as well as the school of engineering," said Mark Norrell, president of the society. "We want him back."

Roger Riddick, a senior architectural engineering major, said, "Our protest was showing that not only his colleagues were concerned but his students, too."

"If Dr. Clark does not return it will be one of the worst miscarriages of justice I have ever seen," said Riddick. "Regardless of what decision is made, an investigation of the case should be made."

Fort: Here For The Duration

BY BERNARD GRANT
Special to the Register

Although numerous rumors have spread that Chancellor Edward B. Fort will resign from the university, Fort said in an interview Tuesday afternoon, "I'm here for the duration."

In recent months there has been much debate concerning the resignation of Fort as well as several other university officials including the dean of the School of Engineering and Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs. The demands for the resignations arose following the university's denial of tenure to an engineering instructor.

However, Fort is optimistic about his plans for the new school year.

"I believe in this university and its staff. Together we will certainly move mountains," said Fort. "I didn't anticipate that I would sail through with no problems."

"The 80s have ushered in an era of accountability of public institutions. The clamor for increased accountability is bound to continue," he said in a recent article in the Greensboro News and Record.

He said he believes the responsibility of this university is "to manage carefully our resources and to ensure quality education for our students."

Blackout Occurs Over the Holiday

By TIMOTHY LITTLE
Staff Writer

Students living on the northside of campus were left in the dark for about 10 hours last Friday night due to an electricity blackout.

The incident occurred about 11:30 p.m. and lasted until about 10 a.m. Saturday.

Ron Gales, the university's engineer, said the blackout was believed to have been caused by a shortage from a fuse box in Price Hall.

The shortage in Price Hall caused a fault to take place at the substation outside of Scott Hall, Gales said.

"The electricity was restored to all of the buildings and dormitories on the northside of campus except Price Hall, its annex and Marteena Hall," he said.

Power was restored in the other buildings about 8 a.m. Tuesday.

According to Gales, the blackout did not cause any major complications.

"Most of the students were gone away for the Labor Day weekend and because it happened at night, there were no complications at all."

Several students who were on campus during the blackout had mixed views.

Vondelia Willis, a senior child development major who works with small children in the Price Hall annex, said there were no lights in the annex on Tuesday. "We had to serve cold sandwiches to the children. I hope that it doesn't happen again," she said.

Marvin Gilmore, a junior sociology major from Fayetteville, said the blackout didn't bother him at all.

"I didn't do anything but sleep," he said.

Some students commented that blackouts occur every year on campus.

"I'm a senior now and this sort of thing happens every year," said a student who did not want to be identified.

Gardner Cowell, a junior physical education major from Currituck, said, "It's a part of life. The power failure wasn't that bad. My only concern was for the ladies in Holt Hall."

Fort Plans

Buildings to be renovated

One of Fort's goals this year will be the renovation of six dorms, and of five academic buildings. The six dorms are Scott, Zoe Barbee, Vanstory, Alex Haley, Morrison and Morrow halls.

The academic buildings include Campbell, Crosby, Benbow, Price annex and Barnes halls. Repairs to the roofs, showers and restrooms are just a few things that will be done.

Another major goal is construction of the new $8.5 million engineering building.

A dream of the university for nearly a decade, the ultra modern facility moved closer to a reality when the N.C. General Assembly approved the necessary funding on July 14, 1983.

The building is expected to be ready for occupancy by September, 1986.

"If the weather holds and the contracts are finalized construction could start before the end of October," Fort said.

He also said that it would take two years to complete the building once construction begins.

Two new departments - civil and chemical engineering - will be added to the school when the building is finished, according to Fort.

Fort says he anticipates a new program in the communications department, which will be completed before June of this year.

"We must see to it that the university never languishes in the vineyard of inadequacy or insufficiency," Fort said.

France Announces SGA Fall Plans

BY ARNEL ALFORD
Staff Writer

Student Government President James "Jack" France told students at the first student body meeting Tuesday night that something has gone wrong at A&T and there is a need for a change.

"The Alumni Association, the Chancellor, the Board of Trustees and the SGA all stand in their own 'corner' not coming together to help one another," France said. "There is need for a change."

France presented his plans for the coming year to about 350 students in the recently renovated Harrison Auditorium.

One of the SGA's main concerns this year is improvement in campus life such as unsanitary mattresses and mold-infested dormitory rooms.

leader last year for the revision of the co-ed visitation policy in which students would not have to sign in guest (see SGA, page 8)

Career Awareness Activities Begin Monday

By JEWEL HAMRICK
Special to the Register

Over 5,000 students from the Greensboro area are expected to attend the 10th annual Career Awareness conference this year, according to Leon Warren, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center.

The event, sponsored by the placement center, will be held Sept. 10-12.

"We are doing our best to make students aware and prepare them for the working world that they will enter upon graduation," said Warren.

Activities will begin with a forum for students on "Getting the Job; The Employer's Perspective," held from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Monday in Murphy Hall assembly room and from 10 a.m. to noon Tuesday. The forums will be sponsored by the Sperry Corporation, Ciba-Geigy, General Electric, Burlington Industries, Dow Chemical USA, Apollo Computer Inc., Control Data Corp. and Union Carbide Corp.

The Career Awareness Banquet, honoring representatives of business, industry and government, will be held Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Marriott. The speaker will be Mrs. Elizabeth Koontz, a former assistant U.S. Secretary of Labor and a former assistant state superintendent of public instruction.

Career Day, which will be held in Corbett Sports Center Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., will conclude the conference.

"Career Day in the past has been very successful. About 5,000 students participated last year and we are anticipating a much larger crowd this year," said Warren.

More than 185 recruiters from the various agencies in business, industry, and government will be available to give career counseling and discuss, demonstrate and show samples of their products.

"The program is not just for undergraduates, but for the entire university," said Warren. "Our motto is Career Planning and Placement Center equals success, the key to your future."

Forty Students Vie for Offices

The student turnout was somewhat low with approximately 40 students participating; however the students that are running for the various offices show a lot of enthusiasm. "All positions have candidates except senior class secretary, which will be appointed," said Lathan Dixon, the Elections chairperson. The theme this year is "A Voteless People is a Hopeless People." All students are encouraged to vote.

Ten candidates are running for Freshman Class president. They are Terri Butler, Willie L. Diffs, Jr., Bryon D. Horne, Wanda R. McGill, Bernadette Merritt, Charles Alvis Mitchell, Ivan T. Mosley, Allison Pope, Beverly E. Threatt, and Maerena Williams.

Running for Vice-President of the Freshman Class are Carrington R. Carter, Marketa Yvette Chandler, Nelson A. Lee, and Samuel Wilkins.

Those running for Secretary are Anita Hudson, Rodney E. Oakley, Kimberly Pugh, and Willie Ruth Maxwell. There will be one candidate running for class treasurer, Kenneth Jones.

Competition will be stiff as usual for Miss Freshman. There are nine young ladies competing. They are Lucy Relicia Banks, Cheryl M. Grant, LaForest D. Hodges, Victoria Manning, Valerie Melton, Wanda G. Mitchell, Frankye C. Moore, Ingrid M. Shumate, and Dionne R. Clark.

Vondelia Willis and Reginald Banner are seeking the office of Senior Class treasurer. Irish Boykin and Charvetta Ford are competing for the title of Miss Senior.

The candidates for Student Judiciary Council are Nate Archey, Wilbert Artis, Jr., James Campbell, Wayne C. Davis, Aaron E. Freshwater, Jonathan D. Hampton, Marcus R. Holley, Melvin C. Jones, Neal D. Lucas, Franklin McCain, Wendell R. Powell, William L. Rowell, and Lorna Savage. The candidate for the Nominating Committee is Donna Stewart.

Campaign speeches will be given on Tuesday, Sept. 11, at 7 p.m. in Harrison Auditorium and campaigning will end at midnight.

Elections will be held 6 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 12, in the Commons Area of Williams Cafeteria.

The Price You Pay When You "Bare" It

This year the Miss America pageant will have more viewers than ever before. People all across the nation will sit in front of their television screens and watch Suzette Charles, Miss New Jersey tell of her wonderful but brief reign and how much it meant to serve her country.

Meanwhile, an aggressive and beautiful New Yorker, if she chooses to watch the extravaganza, will say to herself, ---, it was good while it lasted.

Well at least Vanessa, Vanessa who, you know the beauty queen of the Corn Flake box turn beauty queen of Penthouse has a choice of whether she wants to watch the pageant because she certainly does not have a choice in attending it; in other words she must not show her face or anything else in the place in Atlantic City,

One can not help but ask how could America just close her eyes and choose another person to represent her, when it was said that Miss Williams had added so much to the Miss America image.

She was said to be the most outspoken queen of all times and the most liberal, the perfect but not so perfect queen.

Whether Miss Williams, who has had some identity problems in the past, wants to admit it or not, she was the first Black Miss America. And Blacks were so proud of her, thus, another golden star for the independent thinker who felt she would be able to please everyone for "she was not a Black queen but America's queen."

But, when the dark clouds began to rise, America's queen suddenly became a Black queen; in a flash Blacks have become her people.

In the September issue of People magazine, down-hearted Miss Williams apologizes to "her people" for her actions of the past that cost her title. She acknowledges the fact that she let them down.

But for many Blacks, the revelation of Miss Williams' skeleton's was not as disturbing as her comments of not wanting to be recognized as a Black queen.

That is why Blacks are choosing to write her off as America's queen and not a Black queen because that is the way she wanted it during the good times, so dear, Miss Undressa, call on your America now.

Blacks owe you no more support than you were willing to give them when the times were good.

It Is Time For A Change

By FRANCES WARD

SGA President James France was right when he told students at a meeting Tuesday, "Something has gone wrong at A&T. We need a change."

The change - from apathy to unity among the students, faculty and administrators - must take place in this time of struggle if this great university is to survive.

For the past few months negative stories about A&T have appeared in newspapers and have been broadcasted on television and aired over radio stations.

Last year, the media had a "field day" writing about our outstanding deficit.

Some students have commented that they are disappointed when they see and hear the degrading stories about A&T. Others say they don't understand the problems in the administration.

No one but those at the "top" know what is really going on.

But regardless of the problems we have, dear Aggies, we must hold our heads up high in unison and be proud to be apart of this magnificent university.

Those on the outside are striving hard to tear our buildings down, but unless the whole Aggie family join hands together, it may not be too long before our bricks come tumbling to the ground.

A Challenge To Education

BY DWAYNE PINKNEY

Has time run out on public education as we know it in America?

Well, if one were to consider the recent controversies over public education, the apparent answer would be that there is no hope, and that it's time to close the doors of this nation's public schools.

In a recent report which aired on ABC, public education was shown to be failing steadily and American's trust in education was shown to be at an all-time low.

How did we get in such a mess?

The Reagan administration attempted to answer this question last year when published a report on education in the nation. The report was titled "A Nation at Risk," and it emphasized "a rising tide of mediocrity" in our schools.

Although no one is sure exactly when this rising tide of mediocrity began, most experts agree that it started about 20 years ago. They cite a decline in SAT scores over the last 20 years as proof.

Regardless of when this monster of mediocrity cast its lethargic wand over the nation's schools, it is apparent that we have a problem, and that the disadvantaged of this nation will be the ones to suffer most.

ABC News' report, "To Save Our Schools, To Save Our Children," vividly portrayed the dichotomy which exists in our society and in our schools.

School in the inner cities, with large number of Black and Hispanic students, were shown to be underfunded and inadequately staffed with often times burned-out instructors.

One young man was asked if he thought he would be able to compete with students from schools of better quality. His speech told what his mind wants to refuse.

What's the purpose in talking about this pessimistic prognostication?

Since this is a campus newspaper, we are presumably reaching university students. If we are reaching university students, then it is our hope that these words will motivate them to think on these things and to encourage them to use all of their resources to add hope to this seemingly hopeless situation.

Most of us at this university come from this nation's public school systems. Many of us have not had the financial resources that would allow us the private-school option. Therefore, the plight of public education should be our concern too.

Those of us in education are now presented with a great challenge. Within this challenge is great opportunity, but we must rise to the occasion. Let us not look at the education major as an easy option, but rather as a very important part in the future of this nation.

Win Without Losing

BY JOE BROWN
Special to the Register

Okay, Aggie fans! It's that time of year again to tighten your vocal cords, soften your seat cushions and blankets, air out those moth-bitten hats, scarves and ear muffs, buy a blue and gold pom-pom, save some ME, biology, English notes (not the A&T Register) to tear up and throw around, and purchase plenty of Kleenex just in case, because it's Aggie football season!

Our blue and gold bulldogs have bruised and battered among themselves for too long. Now, it is time for our fearless, helmet cracking, but passionate at heart Aggie team to bruise and batter some of those Winston-Salem State Rams this Saturday in Aggie Stadium. Why Johnny Coleman, the noseguard, expects to brake some bones and cripple some legs. (Just kidding, Johnny! Besides, we don't need to play dirty to win. I hope so.)

To start the season off with a swift kick, a motto has been proposed, "Win without Losing." If this motto doesn't work for the first half of the season, then another will be conjured up for the second half of the MEAC season.

The young but improving Aggies won't need any conjuring or black magic to win a game this year, because guys like Alvin Grier, Steve McCormick, Ernest Riddick, and Tim Williams can hold their own. Our Aggie squad is tough and hard in the middle, and would definitely like the chance to prove it.

Listen, fans! I know how hard it can be to forget past memories, especially last season's record of 3-7-1, but the season won't be worth watching if fans come out to the stadium thinking the 4th place conference owners are going to lose every game. Believe me! Aggie fans, you are in for a show this Saturday.

Get your game passes ready and remember not to leave them in the wash. And for you great throw-across-the-fence fans, well you can't toss your pass to your buddy or girlfriend this year, because they will be marked for that game. So you're out of luck.

Coach Forte might be a very nervous coach right now, but coolness and confidence comes with class and that's one quality he has. Good luck, Coach.

So fans, tighten your shoe strings, and paste on your smile, because it's kickoff time!

Let's Go Aggies

Forte Optimistic About Season

By ANTONY JEFFRIES
Special to the Register

A&T's football team has more quality players than in the past years and coach Mo Forte said he is very optimistic about the upcoming season.

Coming off a 3-7-1 record last season, Coach Forte said he has approached this year with the same attitude as last year - a positive one.

"I'm excited about the team," said Forte. "The A&T football team should have more quality and depth coming into their first game of the season against Winston-Salem State."

"But until the Aggies actually get on the field, it is hard for me to say what our strengths and weaknesses are," Forte said.

Forte said the offensive line will be one of the team's strengths because they have played together for a couple of years. The offensive line is led by second team All-MEAC guard Steve McCormick, guard Marvin Haygood, and tackle Larry Taylor.

With the graduation of All-MEAC runningback and team MVP Mike Jones, the Aggies are left without a proven runner. But Coach Forte has three backs who will take over. They are Stoney Poleni, Juan Jackson and Ken Siler.

Poleni, a freshman from Atlanta, who was All-City in high school, will be a big plus to the team, Forte said.

Quarterback Alvin Grier returns but will be pushed for his position by highly-touted freshman quarterback Alan Hooker

Herbert Harbison and Jesse Britt will be receivers. "Both had good seasons last year and should be one of main strengths on the team this year," said Forte. Travis Bell, another wide receiver, will be waiting in the wings.

Earnest "Dr. Doom" Rid-

dick is back for his sophomore year at nose guard to create havoc in the opponents backfield again. Coach Forte said that freshman defensive tackle Rodney Dickerson also will contribute to the team. The greatest strength on the team is at the linebacker positions where there are 17 linebackers trying to earn a starting position. Jeff Franklin, Landrick McClain and Markus Hager will be among the top this season, according to Forte.

Tim Williams and Marvin Gilmore, are two of the best defensive backs on the team, said Forte.

For the first time in A&T football, the Aggies have a conditioning coach - Roy Thompson, who is also the girl's track team.

"He has been a tremendous help to the team because this year the Aggies are in much better condition at this time than last year," said Forte.

New Coaches Lead Small Squad

TIMOTHY LITTLE
Staff Writer

The women's volleyball team is a different team from last year. Instead of the usual 12 members, only seven players make up the squad and two new coaches head the 1984 season.

"The team is small but all of the players have had four to five years of experience," said Vivian Fuller, head coach.

Fuller, who coached the A&T volleyball team in 1980, returned to A&T after getting a doctoral degree in education at Iowa State University.

Lori Erwin, assistant coach, is a 1982 graduate of A&T. She has a bachelor's degree in education.

Fuller said the team has a lot of enthusiasm.

"This team is ready for action and it is serious about playing," she said.

Although the team does not have many players, its spirit is not dampened, according to the coaches.

"During practices, we give a lot of support to one another and this makes them work harder," said Fuller.

Erwin added, "The players that we do have are good, but we would like to have more."

Six veterans return to the team this season. They are Kathy Graham, Susan Page, Irma Easton, Sharline Schneider, Carmon Todman and Angie Williams. The newest member of the team is Karon Williams.

Fuller said her main concern is that the team will have no injuries.

"We have seven players, and it takes six to play. If we have any injuries this season, it will cause a problem," she said.

The volleyball season will open Sept. 12. The team is scheduled to play UNC-G and Methodist College at 3:30 p.m. in Moore Gym.

Any ladies interested in trying out for the team should contact Fuller in Moore Gym Monday-Thursday from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.
