Career Day has large turnout

This year's Career Day was the best Career Day ever held at A&T, according to Leon Warren, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center.

About 5,000 students from A&T and other area colleges attended the event, which was held in Corbett Sports Center Wednesday.

"We had a better cross section of companies this year," said Warren.

Warren said that very little formal recruiting took place. He said most representatives discussed chances for practical work experience during a semester, summer job opportunities and possibilities for permanent employment.

"Many of the representatives will come back to recruit," said Warren. "This was strictly an awareness conference to expose students to what's going on in the working world."

A representative from Proctor and Gamble said, "The Career Day gives the students a chance to build a relationship with students and administrative staff of each school.

Several students commented the event was very beneficial.

"I got to talk to people from different companies and find out what they had to offer," said David Hammond, a freshman from Greenville. "It also helped to decide my major."

Anthony Hardie, a senior transportation major from Wilmington, said, "It was a very important day for me because I learned that there are a lot of job opportunities."

Insurance is topic of hearing

By FRANCES WARD
News Editor

About 40 people attended a public hearing Thursday in support of a proposal that would allow students to apply the health fee paid at college toward their private health insurance policy.

Students, faculty members and parents attended the hearing, which was conducted in Murphy Hall by Tom Sawyer, a representative of the N.C. Insurance Commission.

The proposal was made to the N.C. Insurance Commission last fall by Dr. William K. McRae, a physician and director of student health services at University of North Carolina-Greensboro. Thursday's hearing was the third such hearing conducted on college campuses by the State Department of Insurance.

"As a parent of a college student I go along with the proposal. I am paying for my son's education as well as carrying private insurance on him and paying his student health fee; therefore I think the insurance company should consider his health fee as a deductible," J. Clinton Smith said, after the hearing. Smith is also a nurse at Sebastian Infirmary.

Marietta Douglas, nursing supervisor at the infirmary, said, "I certainly support the proposal. If students look at what they will pay for a cash deductible they will realize this is a good benefit."

Hearings conducted by the state Department of Insurance have been held at UNC-G, Guilford College and A&T. Other hearings will be conducted at Appalachian State University, Wake Forest University, N.C. School of Arts, East Carolina University, the University of N.C. at Chapel Hill and Duke University. McRae said that adoption of the plan would mean substantial savings for students, their parents and insurance companies.

McRae also stated that more students would be induced to use campus health services if the student health fees counted toward the deductible on private policies.

SOS to headline Homecoming show

Four acts have been confirmed by SGA President James France for the 1984 Homecoming Show to be held Saturday, October 6, in the Corbett Sports Center

Performers for the Homecoming show will be Alesia Meyer, "Mr. Goodbar", Lilo Thomas, "Your Love Got a Hold on Me", Melba Moore and the SOS Band, "Just the Way You Like." William Productions of Latham, N.Y. are promoters of the concert.

France said that there will also be an opening act, but the contact has not been confirmed.

Tickets will cost $6 and go on sale Thursday, Sept. 20. Each student can purchase a maximum of four.

Unlike previous years, the SGA will not be responsible for the sale of concert tickets. A ticket manager, Norbert Hopkins, has been hired and students will have to pick them up at the ticket office on the first floor of the Memorial Student Union.

The Homecoming Committee finalized other homecoming activities on Wednesday.

Homecoming week activities will include the gospel extravaganza, a talent show convocation, "Color Day" Pep Rally, Miss A&T's Coronation, the pre-dawn dance and early breakfast.

The majority of all activities will be free of charge to students, including the gospel extravaganza to be held Sunday, Sept. 20.

The coronation of Miss Student Union Advisory Board (SUAB) will be held October 2 and Miss International Student on October 3, according to Kelvin Davis, the president of SUAB.

Black College Day

“to be best ever”

By DORIS PERSON
Editor in Chief

Black College Day '84 is expected to be the best one ever, according to William Barber, president of the N.C. Black Student Government Association, the sponsors of BCD.

“We're expecting more students, more chancellors and more community participation than ever before,” said Barber, SGA president of N.C. Central University in Durham.

Barber, along with SGA presidents from Bennett College, Livingstone College, Fayetteville State University and several other schools met Tuesday at A&T to finalize BCD plans.

Although some plans are still tentative, a number of activities have been planned for the week prior to BCD beginning Sept. 20.

On that day, there will be a statewide candlelight service on all Black College campuses.

On Sept. 22, Student Government Presidents will make Statement of the Issues addresses on local radion stations.

During the rally the SGA presidents will speak on the significance of BCD. Tentative guest speakers include Ben Ruffin, special assistant to Governor James B. Hunt and Cleveland Sellars of Greensboro.

Each campus will have campus observance of BCD on Monday, Sept. 24. A rally will be held at 6 p.m. on the grounds of Capitol building in Raleigh. Students will march from the Raleigh Civic Center to the capitol.

The association will also be sponsoring a fundraiser for Fisk University. Barber said this is an attempt to get more students as well as alumni to support Black institutions.

He said that members of the association will deliver the funds to the SGA president of Fisk University later in the semester.

“Black colleges everywhere are having problems and these are the times we need to stick together,” Barber said.

One of the main complaints of the observance last year was the absence of the chancellors and presidents of the Black universities.

Barber said a special invitation has been extended to all university officials.

The first BCD was held five years ago in Washington, D.C. and was coordinated by journalist Tony Brown. Black colleges and universities from all over the nation participated.

For the last four years each state has had its own Black College Day during the month of September. In 1983, Congress proclaimed the observance of Black College Day to be held the last Monday in September.

Plans will be announced next week for the campus observance.

Heritage Center to Relocate

By THOMAS D. BROWN
Special to the Register

The African Heritage Center, which houses a huge collection of African artifacts, must secure $1 million before it can move to a new location, according to Mattie Reed, director of the center.

“We plan to move to the Dudley building and we need money for heating, humidity control for the artifacts, a new security system, steel doors, and an elevator.”

Reed said she is waiting for the university to approve the funds, which she requested about two years ago.

“Some of the best artifacts are in storage because there is not enough space to display them,” she said.

The African Heritage Center was founded in 1968. According to Reed, a heritage center was demanded by A&T students during the civil rights movement so they could study their culture.

Reed, who lived in Nigeria and Ethiopia for 13 years, came to A&T in 1973.

“I started out with 29 artifacts and now we have more than 3,000,” she said.

During the summer, the center's African art gallery was displayed at the British American Festival at Duke University. Some of the best art collections in the country were on exhibit at the festival.

“Our gallery of African art was a huge success,” she said.

Reed said major projects at the center this year will be tours during black history month and a new computer system.

“I plan to put all information about the artifacts in a computer for easy access,” she said.

African artifacts and Afro-American artifacts are displayed at the center from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and by appointments only. For the first time, a collection of African paintings will be on exhibit this year.

Although the center needs to be moved to a new location as soon as possible, Reed says she is still optimistic about the school year.

“The center is a great public service for Greensboro and the state. Many people have commented that this is a first class art collection. It would be a lot better if we had space. But we are going to have a great year anyway.”

WNAA 90.5 fm

Station shows improvement

By RON KIRKPATRICK
Special to the Register

WNAA, 90.5 FM, the campus radio station, switched from its jazz format last year to Black contemporary music. And Tony Welborne, general manager, says that has made a difference within the station.

"I think there's been a lot of improvement," he said. "The morale of the students is better, and there seems to be more communication between the station and the administration."

Welborne said his No. 1 priority is getting the power increased from 10 watts to 10,000 watts; the projected power increase is scheduled to go in effect in late January of 1985.

The power increase would project the broadcast signal of WNAA from a seven-mile radius to a 30-mile radius.

The station has two other full-time employees, Stephen Libscomb, program director, and Yvonne Anderson, news director.

Libscomb is responsible for programming, public-service announcements and the music format. He also schedules the airshifts and various programs.

Anderson, a former writer for the Carolina Peacemaker replaces Maurice Spears. She plans to expand the news coverage to include the Greensboro community and also develop a program with a magazine-type format. She said she will resume such public-affairs programs as "90.5 Seconds" and "The Point Is."

Libscomb said that "our greatest resource is the students."

Students, such as Gail Bell, are able to hold key positions.

Bell, a senior speech and theatre arts major will produce and host the public-affairs show, "An Apple A Day," scheduled to air the first week in October.

The program will focus on community health care. As host, Bell will interview health-care professionals from L. Richardson Memorial Hospital.

When asked what she gets out of working at WNAA, Bell said, "I get a lot of experience, and I'm learning things I wouldn't in the classroom. And it's enjoyable."

John Gilchrist, a senior speech and theatre arts major, to happen in my life as far as getting into my career," Gilchrist said. "WNAA gave me the spirit of getting into radio. I wonder sometimes if anyone is listening with only 10 watts, but I know they're listening," he added.

Alesia Powell, a junior speech and theatre arts major, is public-affairs director. She also produces and hosts "The Point Is," an issues-oriented program.

"I enjoy putting the show together and working with different people who are involved," Powell said.

WNAA now broadcasts from 9 a.m. till 6 p.m. But plans to expand its hours from 6 a.m. till midnight.

Once the power is increased, the station will be required by law and the Federal Communications Commission to operate at a minimum of 18 hours a day, 365 days a year.

"This means students are going to have to be more responsible toward their positions at the station," Welborne said.

Students who want to work at the radio station are required to fill out applications and are interviewed by Libscomb. And any student may apply for a position regardless of classification or discipline.

By all means, don't quit

By FRANCES WARD

Almost everyone can agree that living the Aggie life is not always easy. Not one Aggie will pass through these golden gates without experiencing hardship.

This year will be filled with many types of adversity. GPA's will fall, lovers will quarrel, roommates will move out and friends will become enemies.

Murphy's law, "What can go wrong, will, at the worst possible time", is sure to knock at the door of many dorm rooms.

From what this writer has observed, few students appreciate these "rainy days". Some feel it is a challenge to triumph over the hardships. Others lose their motivation and let their troubles overpower their senses.

Consequently, we must all remember that there has to be rain in our lives for us to appreciate the sunshine.

One poet summed it up in a poem, entitled, Don't Quit.

The first stanza reads, "When things go wrong as they sometimes will, when the road you are trudging seems all up hill, when the funds are low and the debts are high and you want to smile but you have to sigh, when care is pressing you down a bit, rest if you must but don't you quit."

In other words, dear Aggies, heighten your spirits during the rough times. Believe in yourselves, even when no one else does.

The last stanza in the poem reads, "Stick to the fight when you are hardest hit; it is when things seem their worst that you must never quit."

Respect the Elderly!

By DWAYNE PINKNEY

There are over 60 million people over 50 years of age in the United States today and that number is steadily rising.

Better health care facilities, regular exercise, and smarter diets are some of the major factors contributing to the "graying of America."

Even though the number of elderly people is on the increase in this country, and, despite the fact that the elderly are playing an increasingly important role in politics, they are still overlooked in many quadrants of our society.

Eight out of 10 of the major motion pictures of today focus primarily on youth. In the past 10 years, there has been an onslaught of teen movies, many of which have no meaning whatsoever for teenagers, not to mention adults and older citizens.

Our advertisements are filled with young, fresh, faces, and sleek and slender bodies.

This is the paradox of our day. We are emphasizing more and more on qualities of youth while we are moving faster and faster into the sunset years.

Why would the writer of this column - a mere fledgling in the experience of life - take time out to write about our problematic perception of aging?

Well, for one thing, the writer knows that the steady wheels of "the chariot of time" are moving on, and that know one is exempt from the ride.

But the most important thing - to the writer - is that the chasm which has existed, and still exists between the "experienced" and "inexperienced" members of our society, be closed once and for all.

The experience and knowledge of the elderly must not, indeed, can not be overlooked in our society.

Our country must be more inclusive to all peoples regardless of race, sex, and, yes, regardless of age.

The elderly too, must feel that there is hope and that they are still persons of worth, capable of producing, even after they receive the gold watch or pen.

Our youth must begin to honor the elderly and cease from casting arrogant looks at those whom they deem nothing more than mere jokes.

Remember, the chariot's steady wheels roll on.

Students opinions of cafeteria vary

BY JAMES R. ETHERIDGE
Staff Writer

Even though the State Board of Health has given the Williams Cafeteria an 'A' rating, some students have commented that everything is not 'A'-okay.

Although it was announced last year that conditions in the cafeteria would improve, students are still debating the recurring problems. Long lines, half-cooked food and dirty silverware are at the top of the list.

Several student comments are indicative of the situation that faces the Williams Cafeteria staff.

Starlene Scott, a laboratory animal science major from Brooklyn, N.Y., said, "They need more lines or something. It takes too long to get your food. Then, when you get it, a lot of times it isn't cooked right. They need to improve the quality."

It is understandable that students are reluctant to criticize the food, although expressive views are necessary in order to get a clear picture.

Louis Ferguson, a senior mechanical engineering major from Arlington, Va., reflected, "The food has improved over the years, but they still have an upward battle. The smiling of the cafeteria workers doesn't eliminate the nasty taste the food leaves."

Some students had a more realistic opinion. Clara Williams, a freshman from Pleasantville, said, "You can't expect it to be like home. But if I had to choose, I would say that dinner is the best meal."

Pamela Jordan, a freshman electrical engineering major, was less critical, "I think they do a good job, considering the number of students they have to serve."

Although the quality of food and services is a debatable subject, others are concerned about the meal plan.

Rodney Shepard, a computer science major from Winston-Salem said, "I think that they are taking advantage of the student on the two meal-a-day plan. There should be a larger refund than the $37 that was given last year."

Sharon Lockhart, a freshman computer science major from Garysburg, said, "There is usually only one belt operative for the students to dispense their trays; it is very inconvenient to have to stand in line for something like that."

Andre James, acting director of auxiliary services was not available for comment.

Thirteen A&T students have been chosen as members of the Richard B. Harrison Players this school year.

Returning players are Cynthia Bailey of Winston-Salem, Donna Baldwin of Greensboro, Miller Lucky Jr. of Plainfield, N.J., Licia Shearer of Cincinnati, Ohio, Dwight Smith of Bessemer City; Daniel Wynne of Williamsburg, Va., and Letha Young of Franklinton.

Freshmen are Michael Burch of Wadesboro, Janice Parker of Southport and Valerie Welch of Daytona Beach, Fla., and Richard Scales of Winston-Salem.

Transfer students are Lorenzo Meachim of Greensboro and Kay Meal of Greensboro.

The Players are scheduled to present five productions in the Paul Robeson Little Theatre this season.

Players chosen

Dr. H.D. Flowers, director of theatre and coordinator of Theatre division said he is optimistic about this year's productions.

Flowers said his only concern is to get more A&T students to attend the productions.

"This year we will work harder to get more students to come to the shows," Flowers said.

In the past, Flowers said attendance was low probably because students were required to pay to see the shows. But until the theater can get full funding from the student activities, students will have to continue to pay.

Admission price for A&T students who purchase tickets the day of the plays will be $1.50. At other times tickets will be $2. Students must show proper identification. General admission is $4 for plays and $6 for musicals.

Insurance

He added that the proposal would support quality health care on campuses in the state by encouraging parents and students to pay substantial health fees.

Full-time A&T students are required to pay $101 for on-campus health care. Health services at Sebastian infirmary include physician and nursing care, laboratory service, counseling and inpatient and outpatient care.

Douglas said insurance companies will probably support the proposal.

"Health centers across the nation save the insurance companies a lot of money, therefore they should accept the proposal for the students," she said.

Served for the season

The Lady Aggie volleyball team served their season to a slow start at the University of North Carolina in Greensboro this past Wednesday. Last year's second place MEAC conference winner is finding the 1984 season quite a task.

The Lady Volleys (as I like to refer to them) played their first non-conference game against UNC-G and Methodist College, but the contest ended in a four-game losing streak. The Lady Spartans of UNC-G handed down the high-spirited Aggies to a 15-10, 15-12, match and the women of Methodist College tacked two more losses on the Aggies' credit with a 15-13, 15-12 battle. The early season losses bring the lady Aggies record to 0-2.

The lady Aggies took on the spiking Bennett Belles in a trouncing scrimmage match in which the Lady Belles emerged victors. The first game collapsed to a 15-1 rout by the Belles and Lady Aggies bounced back with a 10-15 return game, placing the double meeting into a tie-breaking brawl.

In the third game, Cathy Bovelli served to spurt the Belles to a early 2-0 lead before the weary Aggies returned with a fireball smash by Carmen Todman making it 2-1. The pace of the game speeded up as the strong armed Belles pounded in five unanswered points combined by Donna Jackson and Alycia Quick (2-7). The Aggies struggled until the power serving of Angie Williams slashed the Belles' lead to 8-7 before the two teams changed sides of the court. The defensive efforts by Kathy Graham, Karon Williams, Sharlene Scheider, and Irma Eastman were great, but not enough to stop the 8-13 surge by Bennett's Regina Reese and Ann Hunter. Angie Williams slashed the score to 10-13 once more for the Aggies, but the well pressed Belles' pounce one more attack to make the final score 10-15.

Coach Vivian Fuller kept a smile of content, and took the loss like a real pro. Besides, losing isn't everything. "we have a lot of things we need to work on, but there has been a lot of improvement," said Coach Fuller. "They played very well as a team, but we need to work on our serving, concentration, and court position."

Coach Fuller has one great group of hard working girls. The season has just started so there are plenty of net days to make it back to that second spot position in the volley champion, if not the first spot this year!

Bynum goes to the Olympics

By TIMOTHY LITTLE
Staff Writer

Just when Thomas Bynum thought it was going to be a typical summer, an unexpected job came open for him.

Bynum, athletic trainer at A&T, was selected as one of the track and field trainers for the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

"I was proud that I could be a part of the Olympics," said Bynum. "It ranks up there with having your first child".

He is a graduate of A&T with a degree in physical education concentrating in social science. Bynum admitted that he had never thought of helping to train athletes for the Olympics.

"It goes to show you that if you are good at what you do someone will recognize your talents," he said.

Out of 500 people considered by the Olympic committee for training, 24 were selected.

"The people I worked with were very intriguing. Nobody was the same; everybody had different backgrounds," he said. "The staff was well organized and we became very close to one another. It was a life time experience."

According to Bynum, his days in California past quickly.

"It was fascinating working with great athletics from around the nation. It had to be the most successful event athletically, internationally, and commercially."

Working in the track and field area, Bynum met several well-known including Edwin Moses, Carl Lewis, and Valerie Briscoe-Hooks.

"Edwin Moses is one of the greatest athletes of our time. He maintains the ability, the grace, style, and the sportsmanship of a great athlete."

Carl Lewis, who duplicated Jesse Owen's gold medals record, is another athlete that Bynum is proud of.

"Carl went in there and did his job. He had his mind on four medals and he got them."

Bynum added, "I'm proud of Valerie because she was the only female to win three gold medals in the track and field events."

This summer was not the first time has served as a trainer in sporting events.

He worked in the National Sports Festival in Colorado in 1979 and in the PanAmerican Games in 1983.

Besides working as an athletic trainer, he has also worked as a registered psycho-technician at Moses Cone Hospital.

Bynum and his wife, Yvonne have been married 24 years. They have a 12-year-old daughter.

What is next for Bynum nationally?

"I don't know, but I'll be ready for whatever comes," he said.

Cross Country to begin Sat.

By JOE BROWN
Special to the Register

The MEAC Cross Country Champions, better known as the "Aggie Express", will start their 1984 season Saturday at Pembroke State in the quest of regaining the MEAC crown.

The Aggie team won the MEAC Cross Country Championship last year at S. C. State College with a dramatic five-man win that placed four runners as All-MEAC candidates. The 6.2 mile course record was captured and the Aggie distance runners had regained the title for the second time in the last four years. Leading the attack for the Aggies is All-MEAC record holder, Joe Willis, a sophomore from Greensboro. Willis finished first at the Cross Championship last year with a new course record of 32:08, shattering the old record of 33:58 set by Ricky Meekins (UMES) in 1982.

"I feel I can repeat my performance from last year by increasing my training and increasing my will to win," said Willis.

Strengthening the attack will be All-MEAC Joe Brown captain, a senior from Charleston, S. C. Brown was one of eight runners that also beat the old course record with a time of 33:25.

"Even though we are lacking in runners, I feel we can patch that up before the championship," said Brown. "I just want A&T to be recognized as the dominant force in MEAC Cross Country."

Sammy Livingston, a senior from Georgetown, S. C., who delivered the deciding blow with a time of 34:42 to win the championship, stabilizes the team's final attack.

"I expect to have a much better time consistently this year than last year. Winning the championship again means a lot to me since this is my last year."

The Aggies will have to recruit heavily to replace the strength of both All-MEAC Christopher Taylor and Kenny

Govt. Internship

A chance to change theory

By TRACI BROWN
Staff Writer

"The North Carolina State Government Internship Program gives you a chance to change theory into practicability," Alexander Killens told a group of students in the Memorial Student Union on Wednesday.

Killens, an administrative assistant to Gov. Jim Hunt, came to A&T to urge students to join the government internship program.

The Internship Program operates during the summer and offers students experience in fields such as public relations, political science and journalism. Students are paid the hourly minimum wage of $3.35.

According to Killens the students work 40 hours per week and have the opportunity to attend seminars, tours and other activities.

"The program is geared to a development process. Don't get discouraged if you don't get the job right away. We all have to experience some growing pains," said Killens.

Killens has a bachelor's degree in public administration with a minor in political science from North Carolina Central University and a master's degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He worked in Greensboro with the program budget administration and says he worked here until he received a call from Gov. Hunt to work as his administrative assistant.

In the internship program, Killens makes sure that there is minority representation, ensuring that they are not excluded for insignificant reasons.

He spoke highly of A&T student Maria Morse, a junior political science major. Morse worked in the internship program last summer. "She did a great job, and I want to commend her right here in front of her peers," Killens said.

Morse said of her internship that even though the pay was low, it was worth it.

"I was able to work with the governor and make a lot of connections," she said.

Roy Thompson is new coach

Keith. They both finished, respectively, 9th and 15 with time of 33:26 and 33:49.

The new additional runners to help spark the Aggies this year are David James, Ivan Mosley, Leroy Sharpe Jr., and Darrell Johnson.

Coach Roy Thompson, the new head coach of the men and women track and fiels team, takes the helm as the new cross country coach after last year's outstanding Coach of the Year, LeVonne Wilson, retired the position.

"I'm really happy to be the head coach of the men and women track and field and cross country team," said Coach Thompson. "This is my alma mater and to become the head coach is just a

Coach Mel Pinckney serves as the stretching development coach. He also constructed the 1984 cross country championship course which will be ran in Greensboro.

All prospective persons wanting to run cross country can contact Coach Thompson on the track field at 4:00 p. m. Monday through Friday.

Can you identify this spirited Aggie? Look for her at the Hall of Fame football game Saturday when the A&T Aggies take on the South Carolina Bulldogs. Six former A&T athletes to be inducted into the Sports Hall of Fame, will be attend the game, which will begin at 1:30 p.m.

EVEN STRAIGHT A'S CAN'T HELP IF YOU FLUNK TUITION.

Today, the toughest thing about going to college is finding the money to pay for it. But Army ROTC can help—two ways!

First, you can apply for an Army ROTC scholarship. It covers tuition, books, and supplies, and pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect.

But even if you're not a scholarship recipient, ROTC can still help with financial assistance—up to $1,000 a year for your last two years in the program.

For more information, contact your Professor of Military Science. ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Students voice Career Day opinions

Carolyn Hedgepeth, a senior computer science major from Scotland Neck, said, "I hope in the future the underclassmen will take advantage of Career Day because it is very exciting and they can make a lot of contacts."

But one student had a different point of view.

"I didn't get anything out of Career Day because they didn't have anything dealing with my major. There should have been more opportunities for everyone in all majors."

Good friends will give you a break when you're broke.

The dinner was sensational. So was the check. The problem is, the theater tickets that you insisted on buying broke your whole budget. Enough to declare bankruptcy by the time the coffee arrived.

A nudge under the table and a certain destitute look in the eye were enough to produce the spontaneous loan only a good friend is ready to make.

How do you repay him? First the cash, then the only beer equal to his generosity: Löwenbräu.

Löwenbräu. Here's to good friends.
