Man charged in five-car accident

By MARCELYN BLAKELY
Special to the Register

A Winston-Salem man involved in a five-car accident Monday in front of Graham Hall has been charged with driving while consuming alcohol, according to campus police.

The man, Elijah Maurice McNeil, was also charged with driving the wrong way on a one way street and reckless driving.

The cars damaged in the accident were a 1986 Subaru, a 1976 Toyota, a 1965 Ford and a 1984 Honda and McNeil's 1979 Mazda.

Total damage to the cars was estimated at $8,000.

According to officer Charles Jenkins, the accident occurred while McNeil was putting his car in reverse. Jenkins said McNeil collided with another vehicle.

A&T gets another clean audit

By DAPHNE M. PAGE
Associate News Editor

Chancellor Fort has renewed his pledge to keep A&T's fiscal affairs sound, following the school's second consecutive clean audit during his five-year tenure.

Fort, in an interview, said one of his 14 priorities "continues to be to maintain the fiscal integrity of this university."

"Five years ago I made the commitment to the state and the university system that this administration would take the action necessary to revitalize our fiscal affairs," Fort said in an interview last night. "We are maintaining that commitment."

The clean audit means that A&T's financial books do not contain any deficiencies that violate federal and state guidelines.

Prior to Fort's arrival, A&T received several critical audits for unbalanced checkbooks, uncollected debts, unpaid bills, and misspent funds.

In 1977 the State Auditor's Office reported that A&T's books were so bad, they could not be audited. Fort inherited those financial problems when he arrived in 1981 and received critical audits until last year.

Fort said the clean audits are a result of the good work of the fiscal affairs staff he has appointed.

"I am tremendously pleased with the comments presented to the office by the state auditor," Fort said.

"The fiscal affairs staff and the auditors staff are doing a tremendous job under the leadership of Vice Chancellor (Charles) McIntyre."

The state auditor praised A&T for the clean books.

"I have noted in reviewing the audit report that your agency has done a very good job maintaining fiscal accountability," stated State Auditor Edward Renfrow in the report.

"I would like to commend you and your staff for a job well done."

Congress overrides South Africa sanctions

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate, rejecting President Reagan's veto and ignoring threats of retaliation from Pretoria, has voted into law stiff economic sanctions against South Africa.

Senators voted 78-21 Thursday, getting well over the two-thirds needed to override the veto.

The vote ended a yearlong battle between the White House and Congress over U.S. policy toward South Africa's white-minority government.

The House voted to override the veto earlier this week.

Reagan, despite warnings that Congress would defy him, vetoed the bill Sept. 26 and argued that quiet diplomacy is needed to persuade Pretoria to abandon its racial segregation policies known as apartheid.

The sanctions package, he said, would hurt blacks already living under oppressive conditions.

But Senators who supported sanctions, led by Sen. Richard Lugar (R-Ind.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, maintained that Reagan was out of touch with the international community and the American public on the South Africa issue.

"We are against tyranny and tyranny is in South Africa," Lugar said. "We're not destroying that government. That government is self-destructing."

Lugar's unusual position against the administration caused bitter Republican-against-Republican clashes.

GOP leader Robert Dole of Kansas supported Reagan, although Dole admitted Thursday before the final debate began that Reagan's cause was lost.

The veto override was a sharp foreign policy defeat for Reagan and came just nine days before a surprise super-power session in Iceland where he will go one on one with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Lugar gave an impassioned speech before the final vote.

"We are against tyranny and tyranny is in South Africa," Lugar said. "We're not destroying that government. That government is self-destructing."

The U.S. sanctions prohibit all new investment in South Africa, and add uranium, coal, textiles and agricultural products to the existing list of embargoed trade commodities. Effective in 90 days, the sanctions also cancel landing rights for South African Airways.

Suit challenges judges election

RALEIGH (UPI) - Ten blacks and one native American filed suit in U.S. District Court in Raleigh Thursday to block statewide election of Superior Court Judges, lawyers for the plaintiffs said.

The class action suit maintains that at least eight judicial districts could be drawn with enough minority voters to elect blacks or Native Americans as judges, and that the current system of electing judges violates the Voting Rights Act.

Charles Hobson Jr., one of the lawyers for the plaintiffs, said blacks and Native Americans cannot get elected if judges continue to be selected on a statewide basis.

The suit also seeks to carve out single-judge districts where blacks or native Americans would form a majority.

Hobson said the suit is a "natural progression" of legal decisions that compelled single member legislative districts and later applied the Voting Rights Act to the election of Superior Court judges.

Lawyers for the plaintiffs said they will seek a preliminary injunction to block the Nov. 4 election until the suit is resolved.

Robson said if the motion is granted, current judges will continue in office until the election is held so the courts would not be disrupted.

James White, one of plaintiffs in the suit, said minorities deserve to be represented on the bench.

"This is just representative of the mix we have in this country," White said. "This country was founded on the basis of being a melting pot, and yet we are denied full participation."

Entertainment Spotlight

Osborne and Baker

Top stars of '80s appear at the Coliseum

By Brandon Bowman
Special to the Register
and Ursula Wright
Entertainment Editor

The dynamic Jeffrey Osborne along with sultry Anita Baker will perform at the Greensboro Coliseum tonight at 8 o'clock.

Jeffrey Osborne is known for his elegantly polished vocals displayed through his many popular ballads.

His current album, Emotional, his fourth on the A&M label, signifies his diversity and style which has resulted in millions of record sales.

The contents of Emotional range from his usual beautiful ballads such as "You Should Be Mine (The Woo Woo Song)" to radical funky upbeat tunes like "Soweto."

"Soweto" describes the conditions of black townships of South Africa.

In 1969, Osborne's vocal gift was widely recognized after he joined the group LTD and became the lead singer. With hits such as "Love Ballad" and "Back in Love Again," Osborne led LTD to the top of the national charts with his crystal clear voice and talents as a drummer and songwriter.

His 10 years with LTD also gave him the opportunity to produce some of the most popular tunes of the '70s.

Osborne left LTD for a solo career in 1979. With the help of jazz musician George Duke, his debut solo album in 1980 launched what has turned out to be a successful career.

Scheduled to perform with Osborne is Anita Baker.

Combining sassy blues, scatty jazz and powerhouse soul, Anita Baker has established herself as a major rhythm and blues star.

Her latest Elektra LP, Rapture, which recently reached the No. 2 position on Billboard magazine's Top Black Album Chart, is a tight production which shows off the artist's command of diverse styles.

Its hit single, "Sweet Love," is performing as well on the charts as Baker herself, critics say, does on stage. The other tracks, most notably the tender "You Bring Me Joy" and the funky uptempo "Been So Long" should do as well.

The Detroit native debuted on vinyl as a solo artist in 1983 with The Songstress. With her current release, she assumed some of the writing and producing chores in addition to lead vocals.

Rapture boasts a warm, ambitious helping of non-synthesized music reminiscent of the styles of Sarah Vaughan, Ella Fitzgerald and early Aretha Franklin, to whom Baker has been compared.

However, this combination of classic soul and jazz techniques does not reduce the album to being simply an attempt to cash in on what has worked for other female artists of this genre.

Instead, Baker has the ability to borrow from her predecessors and mix their magic with her own smooth phrasing and passionate depth.

This makes Rapture a powerful set and Baker a major contender for the "Queen of Soul" crown.

Also appearing with Osborne and Baker is Oran "Juice" Jones who holds the current No. 2 position on Billboard's Black Singles Chart with "The Rain" on the Def Jam label.

Tickets are $15 and can be purchased at the Coliseum box office and all Ticketron locations.

Univeristy choir seeks to improve visibility

By BRANDON BOWMAN
Special to the Register

The University Choir will perform during the Fall Convocation next week as members take steps to increase the group's visibility.

The choir sings a variety of songs including religious, jazz and classical. Other plans for the semester include touring during Fall break and holding a special fund raiser.

"We are going to hold a drawing for a sheet of uncut $1 bills from the United States Mint," said Everett Simmons, a member of the choir. "We expect to get a good amount of support."

The choir is rehearsing for the chance to perform at the inauguration of the University of North Carolina system president, C. D. Spangler Jr.

"It is an important honor so we must work hard," said Dr. Sam Barber, director of the choir.

The choir is also emphasizing a "family" atmosphere this year.

A special gathering was held recently to enable choir members to get to know each other.

"If we're going to do all that we've got planned, we've got to work together," said Francis Mensah, president of the choir. He stressed that having a tightly-knit group is important.

The choir hopes to increase its visibility by performing more often on campus as well.

It has been approached by the Student Union Advisory Board to perform at an upcoming function, and has received requests to hold a concert.

The 1986-87 University Choir officers are: Francis Mensah, president and Mr. University Choir; Monique Purcell, vice president; Vandalia McAdoo, treasurer; Louise Truzy, secretary.

Also, Karen Porter and Brandon M. Bowman, reporters; Thane Morrow, Parliamentarian; Nichelle Carter, Miss University Choir; and Marcus Morrow, choir chaplain.

Osborne and Baker will display diverse vocal styles in the Greensboro Coliseum tonight. Also, appearing is Oran "Juice" Jones with the popular song "The Rain."

Points of View...

Well done!

Congratulations! A&T has had clean financial books for two consecutive years.

The school's financial debt began in the '70s and was so bad at one point that a State Auditor said he could not audit A&T's books.

It was then that the school began to receive negative publicity about finances. Checkbooks were unbalanced. Funds were improperly spent. Bills were unpaid. Debts were growing. A&T owed millions.

The school became the media's target. Every time there was something negative involving A&T, the media pounced upon it. It did not appear that the media cared to report that A&T was trying to get its finances in order. The financial problems came to symbolize all that could be wrong with the school.

Now, the bad publicity concerning the finances, is finally over because of the good audits.

Chancellor Edward B. Fort has promised to keep the school's fiscal affairs in order so that this problem won't happen again.

The clean audit means that there are no deficiencies in A&T's financial books which says the school does not violate federal and state guidelines.

It is hoped that the chancellor and his fiscal affairs staff will continue their good work. A&T does not need the debt nor the bad publicity. And the university community needs confidence that that this great institution is sound.

The administration should be commended for a job well done. With all the debt the school was in, one would think that it would never have gotten out. But with the hard work of the chancellor and his staff, it look's like we've made it.

Anti-porn law a problem

By ESTHER WOODS

A year ago, Oct. 1, 1985, North Carolina's anti-obscenity law took effect. One year later, arguments surrounding the state's anti-porn law have caught the nation's eye.

Some North Carolinians say the law has expanded the definition of what can be judged as obscene. But what is deemed as being "obscene?"

State Rep. Coy Privette, (R-Cabarrus County), who helped write the law, said he thinks the law clearly defines what is obscene. Privette was quoted in The Greensboro News & Record as saying, "We're not talking about magazines like Playboy. The only type of material prohibited is hard-core material which includes bestiality and child pornography."

But what does Privette classify as "magazines like Playboy"? Although he said bestiality and child pornography, what do he and other anti-porn forces mean by "hard-core" materials?

Privette and other anti-porn supporters need to differentiate between hard-core and soft-core material. If this isn't done then who knows what is permitted or prohibited.

Is this new law protection or persecution?

While sexual exploitation may provoke some minds and lead to crimes, it's the individual's responsibility to handle what he or she views. If someone looks at sexual intercourse and describes that as obscene, then they need help.

The anti-porn forces have their right of opinion but they need not force their views upon others.

When it comes to censorship in the schools, libraries, museums and bookstores, there's a big problem. Before you know it the professor won't have anything to teach, and the student won't have anything to learn.

The answer is role models

WARREN MCNEILL III
 News Editor

Today's adolescent and teen-age black Americans are in desperate need of role models. Correct?

Yes. But not in the traditional sense.

In the past we have equated role models with national prominence gained through sports, entertainment, education or politics.

That means Walter Payton, Bill Cosby, Marva Collins and Andrew Young.

According to a recent article in Ebony Man, there is a shift in how people are selecting role models.

"Our role models used to be people who had our collective interest at heart," said Dr. Naim Akbar, a clinical psychologist at Florida State University. "But now we're looking to blacks who've made individual accomplishments as our heroes," said Akbar in EM.

If that is the case, do you suppose that you, the ordinary student, falls into the the category of being a role model?

Most definitely, it does!

Whether you believe it or not, many people consider you an achiever because you are attending A&T.

Some of those same people also identify you as role models.

It's time that we, as young black Americans, come to realize our importance in today's society and become more aware of setting the right example.

Stanley elected

WARREN MCNEILL III
News Editor

William Thomas Stanley, executive assistant to A&T's SGA President Michael Brunson, has been elected speaker pro-tem of the legislature of the University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments.

Stanley was elected during the organization's conference held Aug. 30 at UNC-Wilmington.

His responsibilities will include assisting the legislature's board of directors which is composed of the SGA presidents of the 16 UNC campuses.

He will also preside over the 64-delegate legislature when its speaker is absent.

"As a member of the UNCASG I've learned that we, as students, and the unity of the student body have a great impact upon the governing of our campus," Stanley said.

Stanley said he has set three goals for his term.

"First, I would like to help make the black schools in the UNC system better," he said.

"Secondly, I would like students on campus to address any concerns regarding the environment of our school system, whether it be academic or governmental, to me.

"Lastly, I would like to increase the black schools' involvement in the policy making of the UNC system. Combined we're not larger but we can make a difference," Stanley said, referring to the black schools.

Stanley, 20, is a computer science major with a minor in marketing. He is from Washington, N.C.

SGA schedules Hands Across A&T

By DAPHNE M. PAGE
Associate News Editor

Hands Across A&T, an SGA-sponsored event to raise $10,000 to help students attend A&T and Bennett College, has been scheduled for February.

"Education is a means to a better future," said Carlus Hicks, SGA vice president for internal affairs. "The aim of the project is to bring out student participation and to promote education.

"The unique quality about this project is that patrons are the students."

Hicks said the proposed date for the event is February 1, marking the beginning of Black History Month.

The date also marks the anniversary of the beginning of the sit-in movement which was started in Greensboro in 1960 by four A&T students.

Hicks said he hopes students from A&T and Bennett will join hands and form a line from Memorial Student Union to Bennett College.

The money will be used to help students with financial need attend the university.

The SGA will distribute the funds based on criteria set by the financial aid office.

Hicks said he hopes every campus organization will participate by making pledges. Contributions will be tax deductible.

"I am looking forward to the participation from A&T students and I truly believe that Aggie Pride is definitely back," Hicks said

Polite rushes Aggies past Morgan State

By WADE NASH
Staff Writer

Stoney Polite's 104 yards rushing and two touchdowns led A&T to a 40-23 defeat of Morgan State University, pushing the Aggies record to 4-0.

The Morgan State team proved more difficult than their 24 consecutive losses coming into the game indicated.

For three quarters on the overcast Saturday afternoon, the overmatched Morgan Bears matched the Aggies nearly point for point.

"Our players played hard even if they didn't execute well," Forte said. "Morgan State played well, and we didn't."

"We were coming off two emotional wins, and we came out flat. It was a tough day, but I'm happy to come away with a win."

On the first series, the Aggies lost Herbert Harbison, who was the leading receiver in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference going into the game.

"I was trying to block the defensive back and my leg just buckled under me," Harbison said. "I'll probably be back next week."

Harbison was averaging seven catches per game.

"Losing him took something away from our game," Forte said.

Quarterback Alan Hooker had to rely on wide receivers

Arnold Drummer and Anthony Best, and tight end Joe Johnson.

Hooker scattered 11 completions between them for 116 yards.

The 5' 10" Polite had to shoulder a larger role after Harbison's injury. He was up to the task.

"I think Polite is an All-America candidate," said running back coach George Ragsdale. "He's rushed for over 100 yards for the third consecutive time."

Polite leads the MEAC in scoring with 52 points, and in rushing with 418 yards in four games.

Derrick Wootson was first to score in the game, kicking field goals from 24 and 32 yards after early drives stalled.

The Aggies "Nasty Dog Defense" gave up big plays in the first three quarters, but regrouped.

"We were inconsistent," said defensive coordinator Ray Petty. "They played hard and had some mental breakdowns, but they played tough in the fourth quarter when they had to."

The Aggies will face rival J. C. Smith University in Charlotte. Petty anticipates another hard-fought game from a team with a losing record. Smith has won one of three games this year.

"Smith always plays us a tough and real hard game,"

Stoney Polite, (44) the leading rusher and scorer in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference slides outside allowing Keith Matthis to block a Morgan State defender. Polite scored two touchdowns to lead the Aggies to their second MEAC win.

Petty said. "They get fired up to play us, and they've got a good ball club."

"They gave us trouble last year, and we had to make some adjustments at halftime after they jumped to a lead on us."

Smith defeated Bowie State 42-6 last week. That was a confidence booster for the Golden Bulls, Forte said.

"We certainly will have to execute well and continue to do the things we do best," Forte said. "I expect another tough contest. It certainly doesn't get any easier."

Aggie linebacker Vernon Davis drags down a Morgan State runner for a loss. Davis, and the "Nasty Dog Defense," played tough in the fourth quarter to keep the Aggies undefeated season in tact.

A&T official tours GM facilities

Representatives from A&T and 11 other predominantly black colleges received a close look at the automotive industry during the General Motors Flint-Area Minority Institutions Conference.

"Our primary goal was to familiarize administrators and educators with various GM Flint-area products and manufacturing and assembly technologies," said Calvin L. Wright, conference chairman.

"We also hope they gained an awareness of the career opportunities available in the Flint (Mich.) area for their graduates."

In addition to A&T, the participating schools were: Atlanta University; Florida A & M; Howard University; Prairie View A & M in Texas; Southern University in Louisiana.

Also, Tuskegee University in Alabama; Morgan State in Maryland; Hampton Institute in Virginia; Texas A & M; Norfolk State in Virginia; and Tennessee State.

The college officials toured eight GM facilities. They viewed advanced techniques as electronic welding, laser cutting operations, robotics, computer-aided design and electronic instrumentation.

The tours were highlighted by presentations from more than 40 employees who operate programs involving cooperative education, summer internships and graduate training.

The employees work with students from the schools represented by the university officials.

"The students are currently employed in such disciplines as accounting, industrial technology and electrical and manufacturing engineering," Wright noted. "We wanted the college officials to see how their students have benefited from practical experience in the workplace."

The conference was sponsored by GM's Flint-area facilities.
