Terry Sanford, former Duke University president, said this week that experience has taught him that students can be the key in any political issue.

Sanford, a Democrat, is running against Jim Broyhill, a Republican, for the U.S. Senate.

Sanford was campaigning in Greensboro with 6th District congressional candidate Robin Britt who is challenging Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford.

Sanford and Britt spoke to approximately 200 students and faculty members Wednesday at a noon rally outside Elliot Center at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

"I am told that we have student organizations on 76 campuses in this state representing nearly one million students," Sanford said.

"The same old tired heads of Washington are telling us that you cannot expect to enjoy the same lifestyle of your parents.

"I don't want you slipping back past your parents, you should have the same lifestyle as they did."

Sanford encouraged students to get involved in politics and said he has always been willing to hear their ideas.

"That is why I wanted students involved in my campaign, and that is why I want their energies and enthusiasm and intellect channeled through the U.S. Senate when I reach that office,' Sanford said.

Sanford rejected the popular contention that students are only concerned about money.

"I remember, for those who doubted the wisdom and vision of the youth, that the youth of the nation at your age, a mere decade ago, turned around a grossly mistaken political decision that sent thousands of young people to their deaths in Southeast Asia," Sanford said, referring to the Vietnam War and student protests against it.

"That great tragedy was reversed because young people knew it was wrong, said it was wrong, convinced others that it was wrong."

Sanford said students should be aware of the impact they can have while in school and not wait until they graduate to become politically active.

"I remember that it was less than two decades ago that the young people, white and black, were a powerful force in turning this nation away from its century-old policy of denying free people full freedom," Sanford said.

"You can make your lives fuller, you can make America great.

"I am not talking about sometime in the future, as commencement speakers are likely to say, but I am talking about now." Sanford said.

According to Students for Terry Sanford co-chairman Kevin Monroe, Sanford had planned to visit A&T on Oct. 22, but the visit was rescheduled to Oct. 29 because of fall break.

Monroe said the latter visit was canceled because schedule.

Ballot will contain private college issue

BY ESTHER WOODS

Private colleges and universities in the state will be making a second attempt Tuesday to get permission to raise money through the sale of bonds.

High Point College and Elon College are denied the right to sell taxes and bonds," Ross said.

Although these colleges are the primary institutions involved in presenting the referendum, he said there are 38 independent colleges and universities in North Carolina that would like to renovate and construct new buildings but cannot.

If Amendment One is passed, private institutions will be allowed to borrow money at an interest rate lower than the prime.

Ross said private colleges should be allowed to sell bonds because private colleges contribute to the well-being of the state just as public schools like A&T and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

"Out of the 38 independent colleges, one-third of the students receive undergraduate or baccalaureate degrees while one-half receive medical and law degrees," he said.

This amendment, if adopted, would not cost taxpayers anything directly or indirectly, Ross said, because the bonds are guaranteed by the colleges and universities.

"Once the voters in North Carolina recognize that it won't cost the taxpayers any money, it will bring us into the future and give our independent colleges the tool to tackle the future," he said.

Ross said that because the amendment concept was developed by a nonpartisan committee of Democrats and Republicans, he expects to get support from both parties during the election.

The referendum is supported by political leaders including Harvey B. Gant, mayor of Charlotte and U.S. Senate candidates Terry Sanford, a Democrat and Jim Broyhill, a Republican.
Congressman Gray speaks to students

By BARBARA L. SILVER
Staff Writer

Congressman William Gray campaigned in Guilford Student Union Thursday telling students they can determine the outcome of next Tuesday's elections.

"Just by the registered voters on campus exercising this right to vote," Gray said in an interview, "we can oust a person like (Howard) Coble who hasn't been with us on issues such as supporting sanctions on South Africa."

Gray, a Democrat, was campaigning on behalf of former congressman Robin Britt, a Democrat who is trying to win back the Sixth District seat from Rep. Coble (R-Guilford). The Sixth District includes Greensboro.

Gray said re-electing Britt to Congress would be in the best interest of not only A&T students, but all students, because Britt would favor continued federal student aid, such as Pell grants.

"Sixty percent of all A&T students are here because of Pell Grants," Gray said. "Britt would not vote against student aid but will cast votes supporting education and student aid."

Since the Britt-Coble contest may be determined by as few as 1,000 votes, it is imperative that students vote, Gray said.

"Remember all the folks who died for the right that you have now," he said. "Don't let that right go unused because you can make all the difference, and right now it is a close race."

Education is a concern for Britt

WARREN MCEWELL III

Education is a key concern of Rep. Brit, in his bid for the 6th district congressional seat held by Rep. Howard Coble (R-Guilford), Britt said last week.

He also said he believes that A&T will play a vital role in the election.

"A&T will play a very important role in me getting elected. A&T has done tremendous things in their voter registration efforts."

"Sixty percent of all students at A&T are receiving Pell Grants, we must fight to protect the Pell Grant."

"We have got to be sure that everyone has an equal opportunity to education."

"The federal financial aid system is getting too complicated. We must simplify this process so that it's not a burden."

Britt said he is appalled at the complexity of application forms for federal student aid.

"There also should not be any restrictions on student loans for those who need them," Britt said.

Britt is also a supporter of the King holiday and of sanctions against South Africa.

"I am strongly in favor of severe economic sanctions against South Africa," Britt said.

The opposition, Howard Coble, voted against the sanctions. Coble said in his debate with Britt recently that the sanctions would hurt black South Africans.

Britt is proud of his support of the King holiday.

The day after Senator Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) stet the King holiday legislation, I stood with other Representatives and voiced my support of the holiday and my displeasure over Sen. Helms remarks," Britt said.

"Getting people out to vote may be the single determining factor in this campaign," Britt said.

Attempts to contact Howard Coble were unsuccessful.
Grimes has leading role in play

For Mary Grimes, a junior professional theatre major, playing the lead role in "The Sty of the Blind Pig" is like being her own grandmother.

Grimes, 24, plays Weedy, a mother who is overprotective of her daughter, Alberta. Grimes said the relationship she once had with her grandmother is similar to the relationship the mother and daughter have in the play.

"My grandmother, who is the wife of a pastor, was very protective of me and tried to hold on to me, but I rebelled and broke away," Grimes said. "I like the play because it deals with being vulnerable and that's an emotion most people are afraid of."

Grimes, a native of Los Angeles, attended Los Angeles Southwest Community College as a nursing major. She was acting in plays for fun until the National Association of Dramatic and Speech Arts selected her to receive a Best Supporting Actress Award and Dr. H.D. Flowers offered her a scholarship to come to A&T.

"I feel that A&T is giving me the best training for my career because the program here enables me to perform more than I would at another university," she said.

Flowers is director of the Paul Robeson Theatre. "Dr. Flowers, a professor at A&T and the president of the association then, saw me act and told me about the theatre program at A&T," Grimes said. "He asked me if I would like to come to school here and I said yes."

Grimes, an honor student last year, said coming to A&T was the best thing that could have happened to her career. "I feel that A&T is giving me the best training for my career because the program here enables me to perform more than I would at another university," she said.

Grimes said she enjoys acting because it allows her to be creative. "Mary Grimes is an excellent actress who brings real life to her characters," said William Simmons, an actor who plays Rev. Goodlow in the play.

After graduating from A&T, Grimes plans to attend Yale School of Drama. "I want to study at Yale and after graduating become a professional actress," she said. "But if I don't make it as an actress, I will be happy teaching acting."

Privilege

On Sept. 17, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and the Rev. Moflalepula Chabaku spoke to students in Harrison Auditorium about a privilege that we, as students, could use to bring about many changes in the world. That privilege is the right to vote. Jackson talked about his many experiences and the many crises previous A&T students’ had endured to gain their rights.

One of the crises included the sit-ins at Woolworth’s in 1960. Four A&T students sat the lunch counter in the store which had until that time refused to served blacks. The sit-ins continued with the support of other students until the store changed its policy of serving blacks.

Chabaku, a South African who is living in exile in Asheboro, told of the suffering that her people face. If only they could vote, a lot of this suffering could and would decrease.

At the end of the program, Jackson asked the students who had not registered to vote to line up in the aisles of the auditorium and register. Something was accomplished as these students and many others were registered.

According to Dr. Roland E. Buck, vice chancellor for student affairs, 75 percent of A&T’s students are registered to vote which is an all time high for the university!

But isn’t enough if only five percent of them get out and vote. If this happens, what is the need of registering?

The 1986 Guilford County General Elections will be held Nov. 4. A&T students can vote here on campus in the Memorial Student Union. This doesn’t leave much room for an excuse.

So students, I challenge you to get out and vote! It is a privilege that we should surely be proud of and make use of.

Women on the ballot

By Esther Woods
Managing Editor

After paying their dues at home, women have moved from the prolonged stereotypes as housewives and sex symbols to a place on the ‘86 ballot.

Whether they win or lose, the November 4 election will spark a breakthrough year for a new wave of female candidates- including 6 nominated for the Senate, 54 running for the House of Representatives, 9 for governor and 11 for lieutenant governor.

While many credit this year’s outburst in female candidates to Democrat Geraldine Ferraro’s historic nomination for Vice President in 1984, it only makes good political sense that women run for local, statewide, and national offices, being that they make up 52 percent of the national electorate.

In the past, fund raising has discouraged many female candidates from running for political offices despite their strong credentials. But in Florida’s hoi senate race, incumbent Republican Paula Hawkins has collected $5.3 million, about $225,000 more than her rival, Democratic Governor Bob Graham. In Missouri, Democratic Senate candidate Harriet Woods who says she has to raise $25,000 every day in her race with former Republican Governor John Ashcroft, has kept pace with net receipts of $3.3 million, according to latest reports of the Federal Election Commission.

Unlike the past, it is no longer just a sideshow for women to compete against men for political positions.

According to a U.S News and World Report nationwide poll, women led strongly in having concern for women’s rights, compassion for poor people, honesty, and intelligence.

Even though women really do have a long way to go to achieve politically equality with men, at least they can somehow sense some truth to the words “We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal”.

Thanks to women leaders as Geraldine Ferraro, Shirley Chisom and Barbara Jordan, sisters are coming out of the kitchens, setting a higher level of political ambition and taking their place on the ballot.

We can make a change

by Daphne M. Page
Associate News Editor

Many pertinent issues have arisen on A&T’s campus such as: The cost of education, the national issue of Apartheid, and voter registration. Though all of these issues are of extreme importance, the latter serves as a priority for A&T.

Many organizations must be commended for setting the environment for the birth of the curiosity of A&T. They include: SUAFSVA, The Student Government Association, The A&T Register, The Political Science Society, and Sororities and Fraternities here at A&T.

Moreover, more than 95 percent of the campus is registered to vote. Thus, we are in a position to make candidates realize the importance of our existence. We are the seventies generation of getting our own piece of the pie. We are a generation of caring and sharing with our brothers and sisters in other countries.

We are a generation of radical change. And we again can put A&T in the history books for changing the attitude of the politicians.

A few of the candidates actually at the forum at A&T on Thursday night in Gibbs hall sponsored by The Political Science Society. They are: Kattie Dorsette, candidate for County Commissioner, Terry Sherrill candidate for Superior Court Judge, Robin Brit, candidate for Congressman, and Senatorial candidate William Martin. Some of the other candidates sent representatives.

However, Senator Broyhill did not appear, nor did he send a representative. It is obvious to see the attitude of the politicians seeking a victory. But what will be obvious is the attitude of A&T. We must stress to these politicians of the issues concerning not only colleges, but issues concerning Black colleges.

It is imperative that we participate on election day. A&T will no longer be passed by on the road to white colleges. We must make politicians wake up and smell the coffee brewing on our campus.

My dear A&T it is crucial that we all participate on Tuesday November 4. We must labor our future to leaders who can fight for the rights of Black college students.
By MARK MIDDLETON

The diligent voter registration crusades that have occurred here at A&T are no secret. Thanks to the efforts of the campus, we now boast over 4,000 registered voters according to information obtained from registrars who were involved in the registering process at A&T.

According to election results of the Greensboro Board of Elections, it can justifiably be concluded that A&T has the ability to determine the congressional victor in the Sixth Congressional District.

That and the fact that A&T has been registering her students to vote, puts Aggieland in a whole new perspective. A perspective of political power and influence.

One can only marvel at the greatness of this university when considering the sons and daughters she has sent forth, the excellence of her academic programs, and the intense school spirit that is present in her students.

However, when you add the ability to elect a public official at whim to the list of A&T's attributes and achievements, the marvelling one engages in is suddenly graduated to a level of immediate and serious respect. Not only a respect for the leaders of the future A&T will produce, but also for the leaders and trendsetters of today and now. We at A&T, are here at a time which could prove to be very exciting and historical if we make it that way. We have started an ascension up a ladder of political sophistication and maturity.

There is still a great way to go, but one must crawl before walking. The tactics of high visibility which encompass marches, protest, sit-ins, letter-writing campaigns, etc, are extremely important and must never be abandoned.

However, there comes a time in the atmosphere of politics when a marriage must occur between the visibility and the vote. Afterall, is not suffrage the most fundamental and practical way to affect the outcome of public policy in a democratic society. Therefore, there is an open invitation to every eligible Aggie to attend this wedding. The only gift you would be required to bring is your informed vote.

The first part of the Aggie ascension to power has been completed. The registration process is done. The second part is to now mobilize the vote.

Presently, there are many interested parties watching A&T and waiting to see if we will wield our newly acquired political sword and change attitudes toward public policy, or if we will keep the powerful weapon sheathed and apt to pay lip service thus placing us in the position to be written off as not to be taken seriously. This is why the second part of our ascension to power must be successful.

On November 4th, the time for exercising our power will be on hand. It is imperative that all eligible Aggies get up, get out, and vote that day. However, I urge you not to vote for the sake of voting. Research and learn about the candidates. Find out what each one stands for and compare it to what you stand for. An uninformed registered voter is like a child with a loaded gun.

One of the dilemmas that we who have been working on voter registration have met is finding a way to motivate people to get out and vote. It is my personal conviction that exercising the right to vote should be because of one's own sense of social responsibility and self interest, not because of peer pressure or coercion.

Nevertheless, it is of utmost importance and No. 1 priority that the vote is mobilized. Therefore, the idea of a "Parade to the Polls" was conceived.

The Parade to the Polls will be just one event in a day of ongoing activities geared towards getting out the vote.

At 12:00 noon on Nov. 4th in Holland Bowl, several students including SGA President Michael Brunson and Miss A&T, Stephanie Tidwell, will address students on the significance of getting out the vote. Members of the A&T Marching Band will be on hand to provide music.

After the speakers are finished, the parade will begin. All students are welcome to join the parade. Its purpose will be to call attention to the fact that it is election day and to encourage people to get out and vote.

Many students and non-students are looking forward to great things for and from A&T.

Therefore, let us make plans and a commitment to turn on the power this upcoming election day. If we maintain and take our political activities seriously, the day may come when we need to alter some of our school paraphernalia to read, "Aggies Are In The White House."

The A&T Register is always interested in writing stories featuring students who have had incredible achievements and are little out of the ordinary. If you know someone who has these qualifications, please relay your information to us by calling our office at 334-7701/7702. Thanks for your ideas and support.

Aggies suffer loss

By WADE NASH
Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — The A&T defense gave up 607 yards total offense to Howard University last week and the Aggie offense was not productive.

Results. A 42-10 defeat. A&T dropped out of the NCAA-I-AA poll, fell from second to sixth place in the Sheridan Black College Football Poll, and to third place in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference standings.

This week's opponent in Aggie Stadium, Bethune-Cookman College, appears to be just as tough.

Harvey Reed led the Bison rushing attack with 151 yards and three touchdowns. Ronnie Epps added another touchdown and 143 yards rushing.

Quarterback Lee DeRone earned MEAC player of the week as he passed for 178 yards directing the Bison option, and rushed for 44 yards. "Our defense didn't get off the bus at Howard," said an upbeat Mo Forte. "Howard is over with and we're looking to Bethune-Cookman."

The Bethune-Cookman Wildcats bring a potent offense into Saturday's contest. It is a must win for the Aggies. Wildcats wide receiver Remi Watson leads the conference in receptions with 41 catches, and nine touchdowns.

Bethune-Cookman leads the conference in total offense, passing offense and total defense. The Wildcats are 2-4. They have lost to Grambling, Delaware State, Central Florida and last year's I-AA champs Georgia Southern.

Coached by Larry Little, a former all-pro guard with the Miami Dolphins, the Wildcats will be a tough contest for the Aggies. "It's going to be a hard fight, a struggle just like every game we've played has been," Forte said. "Bethune throws the ball well, they run well, they have excellent defense. We've got to play good football to win."

Leading the Aggies will be quarterback Alan Hooker, an improving offensive line, and steady wide receiver Herbert Harbison, a senior from Shelby. He trails Watson in receiving in the MEAC with 33 and five touchdowns.

Harbison feels confident that the Aggies will return to the win column this week. "We've got to get more consistent, stop getting penalties inside the 20, and punch the ball in the end zone. The defense has got to be more aggressive."

Aggies success is no wonder

By Drexel Ball

It's no wonder why the A&T football team is producing the best season the school has ever had. Actually, it's more like five wonders.

Appropriately labeled the "Wilson Wonders," running backs Karey Gee, and Juan Jackson, wide receiver Anthony Best, defensive back Pat Artis and linebacker Vernon Davis are giving new meaning to the term community service.

Each member of the quintet is from Wilson, a city in the eastern part of the state about a three-hour drive from Greensboro.

With their help, already the Aggies have set a record for consecutive victories — six of them — and garnered their first-ever national ranking in a wire service poll.

"They have made a tremendous impact on our program," said Mo Forte, head football coach. "And they're among the best group of players to work with."

Several weeks ago playing before a sellout Homecoming crowd, the Aggies defeated Mississippi Valley State, 20-14, lifting their record to the time to 6-0, and earning the longest winning streak in the history of A&T.

As usual, the gang from Wilson had a big hand in the triumph. For example, Jackson returned two kickoffs for a total 72 yards, providing the team excellent field position in both instances.

Jackson, a 5-foot-11 and 190 pound junior, has been slightly hampered by an early season hamstring injury. He sustained the injury a week before the opener, but he's returned to his old form and is being used as an alternate in the backfield.

Jackson had a spectacular sophomore season, scoring nine touchdowns, including seven on receptions.

After playing his freshman season as a reserve, Best is now a starter and one of quarterback Alan Hooker's favorite targets. Though held without a reception against Mississippi Valley, he's the team second-leading receiver with 22 catches for 295 yards and two touchdowns.

Davis earned a starting berth at linebacker as a walk-on. He's 6-2 and 220 pounds and ranks among the team's leading tacklers.

Gee, a senior, is a reserve fullback who sees action in special situations. Like Gee, Artis is also a senior and reserve at his position and has been getting spot duty.

Gee and Artis played high school football at Wilson Bkeepingfield while Jackson, Best and Davis played at Wilson Hunt.

With their help, A&T hopes to win its first outright Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference championship.

1,000 students expected to attend University Day

More than 1,000 high school students from across North Carolina and nearby states are expected to participate in the second annual University Day at A&T on Saturday, Nov. 8.

"We have planned this day to make the university's communities aware of the variety of educational opportunities available to them at A&T," said Dr. Clenton Blount, director of admissions and chairman of the University Day planning committee.

"Our community includes local, regional, state and even the national localities." Students and parents will participate in an Information Fair in Corbett Center at 8 a.m. After the orientation session, they will tour the campus and then attend Open Houses in the various departments.

Blount said information will be available during the day on careers, financial aid, academic careers, job placement, evening and weekend college, the admissions process and counseling services.

At noon, groups including the University Choir, the Gospel Choir, the Pep Band, the Marching Band and the Jazz Band will present mini-concerts. Also, the dance group, the drill team and the Richard B. Harrison Players will perform.
