Athlete Promotes Drug Awareness

Sherry Rogers
Associate News Editor

In an effort to aid in the war against substance abuse, the Student Union Advisory Board, Women's Council and the Department of Student Developmental Affairs, sponsored a drug awareness program Tuesday in the Student Union Ballroom.

The program, which is a part of the Positive Image Lecture Series, featured former Wake Forest basketball star Mike Helms, who shared his personal experiences related to drug misuse and handling.

"I never thought hell on earth actually existed until I spent four years, 10 months and two hours of my life behind prison walls," said the Virginia native.

The 28-year-old Helms was first convicted for the sale and distribution of marijuana and cocaine in March 1983.

Helms

After receiving a two year active sentence with work release, he was apprehended again in September of the same year on charges of intent to sale and distribute drugs.

He then was sentenced to 14 more years.

"Along with my freedom, went my dreams of ever playing professional ball," said Helms, who had been a Houston Rockets draft choice.

Helms, who was released in July of this year, began speaking about the evils of drug use in February 1986.

"By conveying my story perhaps I can prevent the same thing from happening to someone else," he said.

Being faced daily with violent acts such as rape, suicide and homosexuality, Helms said, was nothing compared to being isolated from the outside world and his loved ones.

Helms disagrees with the idea of legalizing drugs.

"The world is chaotic enough, no, I just can't see it."

Helms is currently establishing his own consultant firm in High Point while promoting drug awareness.

He is engaged to Suzanne Williams, an A&T graduate.

Female Students Relocated

In the September 9 edition of The A&T Register an article was printed concerning the living conditions of several female students in Morrison Hall.

Some students were living in temporary rooms in the kitchen and learning center areas located in the basement.

Since then, all the girls who were located in temporary spaces in Morrison have been moved to permanent spaces in various female residence halls, according to Kenneth Chavis Jr., director of Housing and Residence Life.

"In fact they were our first priority as far as moving when spaces became available, the

NEWS BRIEFS

Canadian Track Star Dethroned for Steroid Use

TORONTO (UPI)- The body that licenses doctors in Ontario said Thursday is launched a preliminary inquiry into reports Ben Johnson's personal physician provided steroids to the dethroned Canadian sprinter.

And the Canadian government promised a full inquiry that would involve those surrounding Johnson, who won the Olympic 100 meters Saturday in a record 9.79 seconds. He was stripped of his gold medal less than 72 hours later after testing positive for use of a performance-enhancing drug.

The inquiry by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario is informal at this point and no decision on an official investigation will be made until more is learned, said spokeswoman Linda Franklin.

A meeting between college officials and Dr. Mario Astaphan, who has become enmeshed in the controversy surrounding Johnson's expulsion from the Games in Seoul, South Korea, is expected next week, she said.

"Strictly speaking, there is nothing illegal about prescribing anabolic steroids-there are some legitimate medical uses," Franklin said. "But under our regulations it can be considered professional misconduct to misuse the right to prescribe drugs, and that could include prescribing any medication or drug for a use which is not medically indicated."

Sports Illustrated magazine said Johnson was given anabolic steroids at Astaphan's clinic on the Caribbean island of St. Kitts.

Astaphan, who returned to Toronto with a disgraced Johnson after his disqualification from the Games, denied providing steroids to the sprinter. Johnson tested positive for use of the steroid Stanazolol.

Astaphan said he provided Johnson with cortical steroids, not anabolic steroids, and added the substance the sprinter received was not banned by the International Olympic Committee. The injection Johnson received, he said, was for bursitis.

Franklin said Astaphan, licensed in Ontario, heard the college wanted to speak to him, and he called officials Wednesday.

"We were not launching an official investigation at this point but wanted to talk to him about the reports," she said.

Astaphan was asked to leave his phone number, but refused, and instead left his lawyer's number, saying he would, after speaking to his attorney, contact the college again Friday and set up a meeting for next week.

"Certainly, we're going to want to talk to Ben Johnson if he has something to add," she added.

In Ottawa, the government again was forced to respond to the growing scandal, the biggest in modern Olympic history.

"This government feels, and I think Canadians share in the feeling, that Ben Johnson may be a victim of sorts," Sports Minister Jean Charest said. "If that's the case, I think we would want to get the bottom of that and an inquiry will seek to do that."

Johnson remained inside his mother's suburban Toronto home while well-wishers delivered cards and messages of support.

Two U.S. television reporters bearing gifts of Jamaican bananas and dried seaweed spoke briefly to Johnson inside his home. Outside, supporters chanted his name and delivered cards and petitions. A local T-shirt manufacturer is producing a "Ben didn't do it" shirt and early sales have been brisk.

Public support is swelling for Johnson. A phone poll a Toronto newspaper ran received 24 calls in support of Johnson for every 1 call of outrage. The federal government has backed off an earlier position that Johnson would be barred from competing for Canada for life. Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has ordered an inquiry into the affair.

Hijacked

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)- A lone hijacking commandeered a Brazilian jetliner carrying at least 98 people Thursday and killed the co-pilot and a passenger, officials said. Mona Cury, a spokeswoman for the domestic carrier VASP, said Flight 375 was on its daily run from the Amazon jungle city of Porto Velho to Rio de Janeiro when it was hijacked. Federal Police Chief Romeu Tuma said in Brasilia, the capital, that the hijacker apparently was a mentally disturbed man.

The Duke

Democrat Michael Dukakis Thursday accused the Reagan administration of foot-dragging in cleaning up toxic waste and sid chronic polluters "better vote for Mr. Bush" in the November election. Republican George Bush was speaking at rallies in Missouri and Michigan. On Wednesday, Bush took aim at Dukakis' plan to step up enforcement efforts against tax cheats, saying Dukakis wanted to increase Internal Revenue Service manpower.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)- Three American boxers brawled their way into the Olympic finals Thursday but it was the U.S. women, paced by sisters-in-law Florence Griffith Joyner and Jackie Joyner-Kersey, who led a march to victory stands once seemingly reserved for East Europeans.

Florence Griffith Joyner graced the Games with one of its most spectacular performances. Twice she set world records in the 200-meter dash-21.56 seconds in qualifying heat and 21.34 in the finals -to win a matching gold for the one she earned in the 100.

Joyner-Kersey broke two barriers by becoming the first American woman to win the Olympic long jump and the first to win the heptathlon.

FOCUS

Adulthood?

The North Carolina Student Legislature may think that making condom machines easily available in public university residence halls is a needed step against the AIDS virus. But their resolution calling for installation of these machines shows that they haven't thought of the implications of such a move.

The University of North Carolina is a state agency. And the state should take no action that implies official approval of casual sex among students. Certainly, college students engage in sex, and the university system should do all it can to educate students with counseling—as most probably already do. But that is as far as it should go.

Further, the legislature—comprised of more than 20 A&T students—doesn't have to worry about image. But image is important when it comes to winning support for higher education. Those who fight those battles, whether for state money or gifts from alumni, would have a hard time explaining the presence of condom machines.

Students are quick to defend their rights as adults against overly rigid university regulations. But in this case they seem to want to be pampered like children. As adults we can acquire birth control counseling from our universities and birth control devices from pharmacies.

Relationships

Paula A. Hamilton
Managing Editor

Although I am a mere 21 years old, I sometimes wonder what happened to the old fashioned values of society. One particular concept I ponder is the male/female relationship. And in analyzing many of the relationships in today's society, I am sometimes grateful in being single.

There use to be a time when the man not only respected the woman, but the woman respected the man as well.

When I look around at many of the so-called relationships today, however, I see that the respect has faded and has been replaced by a lust of men to women and visa-versa. I can't help but wonder where our values are headed.

No longer do men and women seem to look for long-lasting, meaningful relationships. It seems more like a race of who can get further the quickest.

As college students, we are at a point where we are beginning to experience the types of relationships that may determine our partners in marriage later in life. But we must also understand that, in this world of promiscuity that is often accompanied with sexually transmitted diseases, college is not the time for "experimenting" with sex.

Relationships should be based on a mutual respect for yourself, your partner, and his/her beliefs. A partner should be allowed to say that they are not ready to take the step toward a sexual relationship and not be condemned or ridiculed for his/her beliefs.

The lines of communication between partners should be kept open at all times. Don't just "hear" what your mate is saying, but also "listen" and try to respect his/her beliefs.

Open-mindedness is the key in developing a longlasting relationship. If you do not feel that you can be open-minded about your decisions, then you should be honest with your partner and yourself. Maybe you are not ready for a mature relationship.

Materialism

Sherry Rogers
Associate News Editor

Today's black youth are growing up in a society where many values are being misplaced and misguided. Our world has become so materialistic that we are not aware nor competent of what is going on around us.

We have Liz Claiborne, Gucci, Fendi, Coach and fat gold chains, which are all temporarily satisfying. But to accentuate the fine clothes and jewelry, we definitely need to obtain knowledge, a sound education, something that will be of permanent gratification and is guaranteed to get us further than any named brand shoe.

However, as long as we allow minor things to captivate our minds and distort our judgement, we will always be one step behind our counterparts.

We need to put the shopping carts down and leave Four Seasons at 6:00 to watch the evening news and find out what's going on in the world. As we walk across the yard, we should buy a newspaper. That will be change well invested.

We need to have an interest in what is happening in the world because, whether we realize it or not, it effects us in one way or another.

In not trying to mislead anyone, I'll say that having nicer things in life is perfectly fine and we all want them. But, as my dad always told me, you've got to have something to go along with those fine clothes and fancy cars in today's world. Being black Americans, we are definitely not promised anything.

So the next time you're driving down the street in your candy-apple red convertible Mercedes sports car, stop for a moment and make sure you're headed in the right direction.

Do you think that Ben Johnson took steroids willingly or involuntarily?

freshman

"I believe that Ben Johnson may have taken steroids willingly, probably knowing that he had a good chance winning the gold at the Olympic Games. He probably didn't want to take a chance in losing it to Carl Lewis."

Reggie Dixon
junior

"Many times athletes get caught up in being the best that they loose site of what being a true competitor is all about. Yes, I do think Johnson took the drugs to assure himself the gold."

Jeremichael Steele
junior

"I think Ben Johnson took steroids voluntarily, but I think both athlete and trainer should take full responsibility for the action and not just the athlete."

Carol Munn
junior

"I think Ben Johnson took the steroids willingly to increase his performance in the Olympics. I think he just wanted the whole world to see him beat Carl Lewis."

Dukakis Blasts Bush over Shame

(UPI)-Michael Dukakis, targeting what he calls the "administration's hall of shame" on ethics, says presidential rival George Bush "may be satisfied with Japan making the cars while his former colleagues make the license plates."

The Democratic Massachusetts governor hardened his ethics attack Wednesday on Bush and the entire Reagan administration. At the same time, he pledged support for strict ethical conduct in a Dukakis administration.

Dukakis tried to project a presidential appearance Wednesday as he talked with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, who met with Vice President Bush earlier.

Dukakis was to meet Thursday in New York with French President Francois Mitterrand before going to Rutgers University to pick up endorsements from several environmental groups. Among those scheduled to hand out the endorsements was movie star Robert Redford.

Bush was campaigning in the Midwest, where he pressed farm issues and sought to hang former President Carter's highly unpopular grain embargo around Dukakis' neck.

Bush scheduled campaign appearances Thursday in St. Louis; Mount Clemens, Mich.;

Blacks Must Be Educated

To the Black Student:

"This time around, the revolution will not be televised." The revolution they are speaking of is not with bullets and guns, but with books and knowledge. We, as Black people, have to become educated if we want to achieve power and equality.

"Discrimination is worse today than it was thirty years ago, because more Blacks are trying to do more things." Case in point, the 1988 Democratic Convention. Jesse Jackson should have been nominated as the Democratic Vice Presidential candidate. Dukakis refused to choose Jackson, basically because Jackson is black. That's discrimination. How can I, a Black voter, vote for a candidate who so blatantly practices discrimination based on race?

The alternative, Bush, is not the answer either. Bush said that he is for the man who is out working and paying his mortgage. What about the man who just lost his job and can't pay this month's rent?

In November, we have a tough choice to make, either way, we will loose.

ENTERTAINMENT

New Edition Performs in Coliseum

Willie 'Willove' Jones
Special to the Register

The traffic was terrible on West Lee Street Sunday night as my date and I struggled through chaos en route to the Greensboro Coliseum. Bobby Brown, Al B. Sure, and New Edition were in town to perform and I had to be in the place to be!

Bobby Brown came out strong and really entertained the crowd with his singing and suggestive body movements, as well as his "antics" with a young lady whom he brought on stage while performing his hit song 'Roni'. He sent the ladies into a frenzy of screams as he rocked the house with his two dancers and his band. Brown had set the tone for what would become an evening of musical entertainment for everyone in attendance.

Brown enticed the crowd as he continued to sing songs from his latest, as well as his debut, albums. He left the stage as we sang along and screamed for more, only to return to the crowd. He finished his act with his big hit "Don't Be Cruel."

When the lights dimmed once more, the cheers escalated as the band played and Al B. Sure appeared in the spotlight. He devastated many ladies with his act, including my date.

His performed his hit ballads "Killing Me Softly", "Naturally Mine" and "Oooh, This Love Is So."

As the lights went down for the climax of the evening, white smoke billowed from the center of the bandstand on stage. The crowd's silent anticipation for New Edition gave way to cheers and applause as the M.C. introduced the group.

As a new spectacle of lights pierced the darkened coliseum and a message from New Edition echoed throughout the building, the band pumped out music for the boys from the Boston/D.C. area. They appeared on stage in metallic jump suits.

After an introductory song from their N.E. Heartbreak album, the group sang a medley of their hits from over the past five years.

There was a change in mood, as well as a change of outfits, as New Edition re-emerged and individually introduced themselves.

Group newcomer, Johnny

Gill, then stole the show after his introduction. Plain and simple...the boy is good! He wooed everyone (and I do mean everyone) with his vocal wizardry.

After the group made its final wardrobe change they proceeded to get busy and rocked the house with their sounds and their precisioned dance steps, ending their performance with their monster jam "If It Isn't Love".

WNAA Begins Fundraising Drive

UBIQUITY: Presence everywhere or in many places. Especially simultaneously.

—Webster's Dictionary

WNAA Radio, 90.1 FM is the broadcast voice of North Carolina A&T State University. The radio station will begin a fundraising drive starting on Oct. 1.

UBIQUITY '88 is the theme, chosen because of the many aspects of WNAA. Entertainment and education programs are aired each day with an emphasis on public service and alternative music. All of this is done without commercial interruption.

But commercial free does not mean cost free. WNAA pays a fee for every program included on the program roster. Funds must also be maintained for service to the broadcasting equipment. The station is able to handle these current costs.

The management and staff want the station to grow and for growth, the operating budget must do likewise. Growth means expanded broadcast hours. Broadcasting Aggie football and basketball games, creating community programs and increasing our practicum capacity for communication majors.

WNAA needs the help of the entire family if these dreams are to become reality. A series of events, all designed to raise money, are scheduled between October and December 1988. The broadcast voice of North Carolina A&T, needs your support on each of them.

A&T Graduate Possesses White House Potential

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a graduate of A&T, was unsuccessful in his bid for the presidency of the United States.

But if a Democrat wins the highest office of the land, there will be an Aggie in the White House, and it will be Joe Warren, a 1969 A&T graduate.

Warren is currently serving as campaign secretary for Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis, the Democratic Nominee.

Warren, whose regular position is that of director of community relations at Northeastern University in Boston, credits A&T with providing him with the training needed to succeed in life.

He is another one of the former economics students of Dr. Ollie "Ma" Tate, the late outstanding professor at the university. Others who have done well include Jackson and Dr. James Heffner, the president of Jackson State University.

"The whole economics program at A&T was solid," said Warren. "There was electricity in that department. I also appreciated the science department."

There is little doubt that Warren has the ear of Dukakis. He prepared the Black Campaign Strategy and he is coordinating efforts to reach out to black voters. He is one of the top three officers of the campaign.

"I have known Dukakis for about 15 years," said Warren. "I served as assistant secretary of education for him during his first term."

Warren, a native of New York City, has a distinguished record of public service dating back to 1960, when he was a Street Club Worker for the New York City Youth Board. He served as a supervisor for that group, then went to Washington D.C., where he became director of the United Planning Organization. For two years he was a VISTA training coordinator and worked for a year in poverty programs under the late Bobby Kennedy.

Warren enrolled at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., where he earned a master's degree in social research and the Ph.D. degree in social research.

During his career, he has taught at Brandeis, Northeastern, and Boston University. Although at the highest level of politics, Warren said in a recent telephone conversation from the Dukakis campaign office in Boston that he does not aspire to elective office.

"I think that my son will be the elected officer of the family. He is very popular in high school and has been elected president of his class four times," he said.

Warren said he knew Jackson while the two of them were A&T students in the early 1960s. "I think that the political future of blacks in this nation is good," he said. "Jesse has really opened things up."

Winstead Puts Together Winning Streak for Aggies

That junior quarterback Hilton Winstead has keyed A&T's resurgence in the young football season is in itself remarkable. Winstead still winces when he recalls the day his playing career almost ended.

"It was early in my sophomore season in high school when this oversized lineman tackled me and broke my leg," Winstead said.

"It was scary. I never thought I'd play again."

He's playing again. He's playing with much aplomb. He's the major reason A&T has put together a two-game winning streak leading up to Saturday's encounter at Norfolk State. The modest winning streak has vaulted the Aggies (2-2 overall, 2-0 in the league) into first place in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

The fact that A&T would be leading the MEAC was a far-fetched notion as recent as early as September. A&T supported the notion by promptly losing its first two games against CIAA rivals N.C. Central (15-2) and Winston Salem State (26-6).

But back-to-back victories, including an impressive 38-21 victory over Morgan State last Saturday, have yielded confidence in the team and especially in Winstead.

"I always felt we are a better team than our performances in the first two games of the season," said Winstead, a 5-foot-10, 210-pound product of Portsmouth's Manor High School.

"We're now playing together as a team whereas we were trying to learn each other when the season started."

A&T opened the season under a new coach, who had only 17 days to sell the team on the Wing-T offense in contrast to the pro-set of the previous coaching staff of Mo Forte, who resigned in March to join the NFL's Denver Broncos as an assistant coach.

A&T's new coach is Bill Hayes, who spent the 12 previous seasons guiding nearby Winston-Salem State to three CIAA and six divisional titles. Although Winston-Salem State is an annual opponent for the Aggies, Hayes admitted he was unfamiliar with A&T's players when he came aboard.

"It took me a long time just learning the names of the players who would be returning," Hayes said.

"Our problems were compounded by the fact we were changing offenses, going from one the players were more familiar with to a more complex system."

But Hayes indicated he had no reservations about giving the starting quarterback assignment to Winstead.

"He's a hard-nosed type of competitor," Hayes said of Winstead.

"My philosophy always has been to suit the offense to the type of quarterback we have. Certainly, we wanted to be more run oriented and Winstead is like having another runner in our backfield."

But Winstead is well aware of the inevitable comparison fans will make of him and his predecessor. Departed quarterback Alan Hooker claimed a passel of awards in three years as the A&T field general and led the Aggies to the MEAC title in 1986. Winstead watched eagerly as Hooker rewrote the A&T record book, knowing that his day would soon come.

"It seemed like I would never get to play while Hooker was here," Winstead said.

"But he was such a talented athlete and could do so many things, most of them great. I knew I would get my chance, but it seemed like a lifetime the past two seasons."

Prior to this season, Winstead's most extensive action came last season against Morgan State. Hooker suffered badly bruised buttocks in the second game of the season against S.C. State. Winstead responded against Morgan with A&T's most prolific offensive outing of the year, leading the Aggies to a 35-17 victory, a bright spot in an otherwise dismal 3-8 season.

"At the outset, I knew people were going to make the comparison," Winstead said.

"But I feel I'm more of a team player. I'm not knocking Hooker. He was an outstanding athlete and a lot of our players felt they didn't had to do much with Hooker in the lineup. With me, they realize they've really got to play."

Winstead has amassed modest statistics so far this season. He has completed 25 of 63 passes for 368 yards and one touchdown and has rushed for 177 yards and one touchdown on 67 attempts.

Those figures compare favorably in his final year of competition at Manor under Coach Cornell Gordon, an A&T graduate who played in the NFL with the New York Jets. In his senior year at Manor, Winstead passed for over 1,000 yards and added 700 yards on the ground, and earned a berth on the All-Region team as a cornerback.

Forte's staff recruited him heavily, but Winstead also drew serious consideration from Wake Forest, Virginia, Florida A&M and Alabama A&M.

Winstead comes from a family of brothers who also played collegiately. Harold played at Duke and Huron played at Virginia Union. A younger brother, Harrison, is currently playing at Manor.

Aggies in 1st Place

Cedric Bryant
Sports Editor

The A&T football team is in first place in the MEAC and they're slowly making believers out of many who considered them "losers".

The Aggies won their second straight conference game last Saturday, a 38-21 triumph over Morgan State.

After losses to non-conference rivals, N.C. Central and Winston-Salem State, the Aggies have battled back to even their record at 2-2.

A&T fell behind Morgan State 21-16 in the third quarter but fought back behind the running of Keith Mathis and a strong defensive effort.

Offensively, the Aggies gained 447 yards and were led by tight end Jack Sharpe, who was named MEAC offensive lineman of the week.

The A&T defense limited the Bears to minus ten yards rushing and just 174 passing. The Aggies lead the MEAC in total defensive, allowing only 273 yards a game. Defensive back Mike Reives had a 37-yard interception return for a score against Morgan.

The Aggies lead the conference due to a surprising victory by South Carolina State over preseason favorite and previously unbeaten Howard Bison.

A&T received another honor this week when they were ranked for the first time in the Black College Report Top 20. The Aggies are ranked 16th.

Norfolk State is the next opponent for the Aggies. Although Norfolk is a non-conference game, it is important for A&T to continue their momentum as they enter conference play.

Kickoff time for the game is 1:30 in Norfolk, Va.

Class of 1990 Leaves Freshmen Program Funds

In 1986 David Hill, presently President of the Junior Class, ran for freshman class president and was elected. Sarah Brown served as Vice President, Stephanie Howard as Secretary and Cathy Smith as Miss Freshman.

These officers did a superb job of leading the freshman class of 1986. They had exceptional fund raising capabilities and excellent programming. However, Hill recognized the difficulty a class can have getting started without sufficient funds. The officers soon realized that it is difficult to generate money for class projects. It was then that the class officers committed to making certain the freshman class following them would have money to start their fund raising projects.

Hill and the class officers of 1986 have kept their promise. They have granted the current freshman class $131.00 which was carried over from 1986. They would like the Class of 1992 to have this seed money to begin the year and for starting their fund raising projects. "We felt the need to enhance the freshman class because through serving and helping, God will serve and help you," said Hill.

Our hats are off to Hill and the other freshman officers of 1986 for their dedication. "My first year at A&T was challenging; but it gave me a strong sense of pride and understanding. Our promise and commitment to this University is yet to be fulfilled," said Hill.

Dukakis

and Grand Rapids, Mich.

Wednesday, Dukakis said if elected he would immediately order that no top officials who leave his administration be allowed to lobby former colleagues.

Former Reagan political director Lyn Nofzinger was convicted of illegal lobbying and Michael Deaver, another top Reagan aide, was convicted of lying to Congress and to a grand jury about his illegal lobbying activities on behalf of Canada after leaving the White House.

"In a Dukakis administration, we're not going to turn the wheel of fortune for future foreign agents," Dukakis said. "In a Dukakis White House, my staff is going to pledge allegiance to only one flag and that's Old Glory."

The Ethics in Government

Act bars top administration officials who leave office from lobbying former colleagues for one year.

Dukakis proposed that on his first day in office he would sign an order banning the roughly 800 top appointed officials of his administration from lobbying the administration for its duration.

At a rally in Greensburg, Pa., Dukakis hammered Bush's connection to an administration "where self service replaced public service and dishonest consultants are ripping of the Pentagon."

"George Bush may be satisfied with this administration's hall of shame, dozens and dozens of top administration officials who broke the law and violated public trust," Dukakis said.

"He may be satisfied with letting Japan make the cars while his former colleagues make the license plates. I say America can do better than that."

Bush toured several small towns in Illinois Wednesday with country singers Loretta Lynn and Crystal Gayle. The group traveled aboard a bus nicknamed "Asphalt 1", a takeoff on the vice president's official airplane, Air Force Two.

Decked out in casual khaki pants and a Western-style shirt, Bush traveled to tiny El Paso, where he sat at the counter of the Playpin Restaurant, ordered black coffee and chatted with the locals.

Later at a rally in Minok, Bush said, "What I want is to expand our markets abroad, to alternate sources of energy where we rely more on ethanol, using our corn crop."

He also pushed tax incentives to bring business to rural areas and argued: "Mine is an optimistic approach, a growing approach and I can tell any member of the agricultural community here that under George Bush there will never be on of those Democratic grain embargos.

Campaigning in President Truman's hometown of Independence, Mo., Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen ridiculed Republican opponent Dan

Quayle and said he would "pray for Bush's health" if the GOP ticket won.

Quayle was in Texas, where he attacked Dukakis for serving on an advisory board at "Jobs for Peace," a group Quayle said advocates an $80 billion cut in defense spending.

Presidential Debate Draws Mixed Emotions for A&T Students

Dave Brewster
Special to Register

The first of the two scheduled 1988 presidential debates took place Sept. 25 at Wake Forest University.

Vice President George Bush and Massachusetts governor Michael Dukakis squared off to let the public know how they stood on certain issues.

Many thought that the presidential candidates would cease the endless name calling and mud slinging long enough to give voters who were undecided in their presidential choice a chance to see a candidate's stand above his opponent.

According to several A&T students, the presidential debate was an exercise in disappointment.

"Overall, I was not impressed by the debate because neither candidate had much to say, Howard Saunders said.

"I think that Bush carried himself really well during the debate, but Dukakis did better towards the end and some of the issues they debated over were petty, like the pledge of allegiance for example.

The debate was held in Wait Chapel on the campus of Wake Forest University.

"I don't think that the debate was effective at all," Allan Finch. "They didn't say much different from what they had been saying all along.

"I think that they got too nasty with some of their comments, but I didn't see anything that I didn't expect. I think that neither candidate exposed himself to any significant extent. There was no clear winner."

Another student agrees.

"The debate didn't show a stronger candidate but they did show how prepared the candidates were to speak on the subject," Kevin Littlejohn said.

Freshman Rap Session Helpful

Shermonica Scott
Staff Writer

Freshmen and Transfer students were given the opportunity to become better acquainted with campus life and with services offered in the surrounding community at the 3rd Freshman Rap Session sponsored by the Alpha Mu chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc, according to sorority public service chairperson, Natasha Osborne.

The session was in the Memorial Student Union at 7 p.m. Monday Sept. 26.

Some of the topics discussed at the rap session were the functions of the Student Union Advisory Board (SUAB) and the Student Government Association (SGA).

Students were informed that these organizations were for their benefit and were urged to take advantage of them by becoming actively involved.

Other information included a listing of the different churches in the area according to denomination preference, and personal grooming services offered at the various beauty salons, barber shops, and cleaners in the area.

The importance of supporting the area black businesses was also stressed at the rap session.

"We think it's important to support Blacks in business because if we don't support them no one else will," Osborne said.

The freshmen students were given the opportunity to talk one-on-one with the upperclassmen in their corresponding major of study.

Freshmen Biology major Lisa Bolds found the rap session helpful.

"It was very enlightening and I was able to find out about different organizations on campus, different black businesses and who I could go to for help," Bolds said.

The first event will be the third annual WNAA carwash. It is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 8th from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Wendy's Resturant on Summit Avenue. The cost will be $3 for cars and $5 for vans, trucks and limosines.

WNAA takes the responsibility of broadcasting very seriously. The staff is working to increase the service given to the university. Listen for special features on Aggie life, that start airing this month. They include: Aggie daily calender; the Aggie football or basketball player of the month, highlighting the accomplishments of students, staff and faculty members.

And coming soon will be the president's corner, a 15 minute program with the student government association president, Lee Christian as the host.

Everyone who works at the station is a volunteer. Although, the staff is not paid for their jobs, most have been putting in extra hours to produce these special features.

Radio is all encompassing. For WNAA, that means bringing the principles of radio broadcasting and those of the Aggie tradition together for students, faculty, staff, and the triad community.
