Blue addresses students

Daniel Blue, speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives prepares to address student concerns.

Chief Reporter

Rep. Daniel Blue, the first African-American speaker of the N.C. House of Representatives, addressed questions of concerned North Carolina A&T students at the political forum in the Memorial Union Ballroom Feb. 8.

Blue was a member of the N.C. House for 10 years and was chairman of the N.C. Black Caucus.

Blue who attended Winston Salem State University, said A&T was an inspiration to him. "I always feel good when I come on A&T's campus. As a child I looked at A&T for stimulation and motivation.

He said the decisions in the legislature will depend on the student's commitment to their university.

Blue was asked about his views on the proposed plans on the increase in tuition. Blue explained that the increase in tuition should go to scholarships and to aid the needy; whatever is left over would go to the deficit.

He added that a increase in tuition without restrictions would guarantee stratification. "The haves would get more and the have nots would get less," he said.

One student wanted to know what Blue thought about the possibility of a lottery and if the profits would be used for education.

Blue responded by saying a bill is being introduced to allow the citizens to vote on the implementation of the lottery. This would enable the legislature to duck responsibilities if the lottery fails, Blue said.

The proposal was introduced to the house committee. Studies show that most citizens would vote for it. "I don't know if they'll be given the chance," he said.

If it is passed, the proceeds should be for specific purposes, such as making capitol improvements on campuses, etc. according to Blue.

"How does the general assembly plan to attack the infant mortality rate?" asked a student.

Last year North Carolina ranked 50 in infant mortality. "A child born in North Carolina had a greater chance of dying before the age of 1 than anyone else. Their chance of dying before they reach age 1 was better than those children in most third world countries, Blue said.

The government appointed a task force to look at the situation. They appropriated $10 million to improve health services and make services available to teens and improve prenatal care.

The house committee of appropriations are monitoring what is happening in the health department in the rural city areas.

The problem of the national low ranking policies and plans in education was put forth to Blue. "I made the decisions on the make up of the leadership of the education house," said Blue.

Blue has implemented local school units and has given them the power to spend the money however they see fit, as long as they can show how it is spent.

Blue wants to concentrate on preparing the elementary level children. Scholarship programs should be implemented for Head Start, according to Blue.

A student asked about the speculation of merger between A&T and UNCG. Blue explained that preserving a semi-homogenous nature is not advisable. The kinds of experience you bring from varied backgrounds is instrumental. Some come here to be molded, some need a jump start. It is no different from any other campus, Blue said.

Blue discussed the inadequacy about the money spent on prison facilities as compared to that spent on education. According to Blue, it costs about $60,000 to $70,000 to build one jail. It is cheaper to give scholarships to kindergartens than to prisons.

A $60 million jail holds 500 people. "The more we spend on the front end, the less we'll spend on the back end," Blue said.

Council of Presidents discusses proposals

Theresa Washington
A&T Register
Chief Reporter

A proposed $300 increase in the room and board fee and a proposed $40 increase in athletic fees was discussed during a Council of Presidents meeting on Jan. 31

The increase would not affect the tuition which is determined by the N.C. legislature, according to Andre James, director of auxiliary services.

"Many black universities are indicative of problems-most of which go back to the residence halls. We are trying to work out our problems," said Sullivan Welborne, vice chancellor for student affairs.

The project would cost $12 million. A&T was awarded $3 million from the state to address the project and $5 million from the school, according to Ronald Gales, university engineer.

The program will enter into phases-three and four-if the proposals go through.

In phase three, six dormitories would be renovated. They are: Vanstory, Morrison, Curtis, Scott, Cooper and Holland Hall, according to Gales.

In Cooper and Morrison Hall lower level rooms would be implemented. In Vanstory the mechanical system (heating and hot water) would be replaced.

Six million dollars would be set to renovate Scott Hall. The electrical system would be stripped out and a new one would replace it and each section would be divided. The date for completion is the first of August.

There will also be a security project for Scott and Cooper Hall to replace the exterior exits. They are beaten down and need new ones, said Gales. The exits on the east and west landings would be closed in.

In phase four, five residence halls would be affected, they are: Vanstory, Cooper, Scott, Morrow and Gamble Hall. Mechanical, electrical and general construction and an upgrading of the entrances will be done, according to Gales.

In Scott Hall each heating system would supply each individual section in Scott hall rather than all three combined. The public announcement system would also be repaired to enable every resident to hear the announcements.

The plumbing system will need to be replaced and it will also serve each section in Scott individually in order to prevent the shut down of all the sections when something is wrong with one section, said Gales.

Electrical improvements would be done in Vanstory. "I fail to say we're going to do in Vanstory what we will do in Scott," Gales said.

Twenty circuit breakers would be installed in Cooper and Morrow Hall. "This is to help the ladies in Morrow in the morning when they're using hair curlers," said Gales. Four outlets would be installed in each room. "There would still be a contract which you (females) will have to adhere to," Gales explained.

All of the five dormitories would have upgraded finishes-the floor tiles in the lobby, carpet in the lounge, repainted walls and new lights.

The proposed improvements would also include the replacement of the roof and windows in Morrow Hall and also repainting of the walls to eliminate the cracks, Gales said.

Gamble Hall would also have a new roof and the renovation which has been occurring for nine months would be completed. A new laundry facility would be established.

Gales wants to improve the appearance of the entrances to Scott Hall. "We hope that we will have something close to the contemporary architectural style of today," said Gales.

One side project, according to McIntyre, is the converting of Haley Hall into a female dorm by August 1991. The carpeting, showers, modern laundry facilities, doors and window replacements will be made. "I think the ladies are going to like it," Gales assured.

The reason for the conversion, according to Gales, is that there are more females waiting for housing than males. There are 330 plus vacancies on the male side. It is costing the university extra money to maintain a male dormitory with vacancies when there are females who need a room.

The other proposal involves the improvement of the athletic department. This will enable A&T to go after the good high school players and increase the game attendance two to three percent, according to Dr. Willie Burden, director of athletics.

One of the presidents asked about the funding for lights in the football stadium. According to Burden, it would cost $400 thousand, however, it would benefit the community.

Also the university could generate more revenue at night, which is the standard football time, according to Burden.

The NCAA requirements for all schools in division one are: seven-sports for both men and women. Currently there are seven for the men at A&T and six for the women.

The next requirement is that the university must provide a minimum of 50 percent of the maximum allowable grants in each sport they sponsor.

The last requirement is they must schedule and play 10 percent of the minimum number of the required contests against division one competition and 50 percent of all other contest against division one members.

The housing and athletic proposal are not yet definite.

The issue concerning funding for lights in the football stadium was discussed during the meeting. It would cost $400 thousand, however, it would benefit the community, Burden said.

Mandela personifies black love and pride

February is a very significant month. Black History Month, Valentine's Day, and President's Day are all celebrated in February.

February is Black History Month. The 28 days of February are set aside to honor the contributions of African-Americans.

Valentine's Day is celebrated on Feb. 14. It is the day on which sweethearts bestow gifts of love as a sign of appreciation felt through the whole year.

President's Day honors George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. These two are considered America's greatest presidents.

Feb. 11 is another day which the world must commemorate.

On Feb. 11, 1990, just 11 days into Black History Month and three days before Valentine's Day, South Africa made Black history and gave the world a symbol of love and peace.

Nelson Mandela was released from 27 years of imprisonment. Mandela's, leader of the African National Congress, freedom was a step forward in ending apartheid in South Africa.

This event is another distinguishing milestone for Black History Month. Twenty-seven years of Mandela's life were stripped from him and his family. He endured imprisonment for the anti-apartheid movement.

In his 27 years of bondage, Mandela was separated from his wife, Winnie, who patiently continued her love and support of her husband.

What a wonderful symbol of love. She devoted her life to challenge apartheid in South Africa. She kept faith in her marriage by not letting time destroy their relationship. Feb. 11, 1990, just a year ago they were reunited in front of the world together as husband and wife, a perfect example of Black pride and Black love.

The Mandelas' continuing anti-apartheid movement strengthens the importance of Black History and gives greater significance to the month of February.

Stages of Truth

It has been said that truth goes through three stages; ridicule, violent denial, and self-evidence. The ideology of racial equality has traveled through these stages and is contested daily.

In the first stage, ridicule, ignorance swells to insurmountable proportions and disallows logical and rational thinking. The thought of a Black man being equal to a white man was comical when our Black fore-fathers initiate the idea. White people mocked Blacks with radio shows like "Amos & Andy, a 1920's comedy about two Black men who started their own cab company. The cab had no top so they called it the "The Fresh Air Cab Co." The actors were white men who acted the way they thought Blacks behaved:stupid. The thought of Black entrepreneurship was only a joke to them.

Once the laughter stopped, the stage of violent denial was engaged. Equal rights were being demanded and the white society could only tell itself, "They are not as good as we are, no matter what anyone says." Blacks were killed in order for whites to maintain their "supremacy." There are many horror stories of lynchings, house burnings, fatal beatings, and other executions as methods of degrading the Black man and furtherance of the white-man. Though equal rights have been denied for many years, it was inevitable that the truth would become visible.

This leads to the final stage, self-evidence. Many Black men and women have accomplishments as impressive as white people. Just from A&T we have Ronald McNair, a NASA astronaut, Jesse Jackson, former presidential candidate, and a large number of educated blacks that continue to conquer the tasks created by society.

Though the struggle is not over, great strides have been made and will continue to be made as the thirst for intelligence and intellectuality grows with unquenchable desire. A&T is a great example of this as we celebrate our 100 years of existence and accomplishments. A&T started out as a school in which manual labor was the objective, but as truth conquered ignorance, progression to the present state of uninhibitedness of education in technical as well as physical areas has surpassed any pre-established goals set by society. Whether the facts are admitted or denied, the truth is that God created all men equal, with no exceptions to race.

But we as a people, the Black race, must be prepared for the validity of our intelligence and competence to pass through the stages of truth. With endurance and persistence, all oceans can be swum, all battles can be won, and self-evidence of the true strength of the Black race will be manifested.

Where have our men gone?

This space was to be used to offer two viewpoints on a subject that I and my colleague Robin choose to write about.

Our focus for this edition was "Who is to lead the Black family." It was a subject of the utmost importance. She would give her side--females, and I was to give my side--males.

Unfortunately, there is something terribly wrong with our African-American males. Somehow, somewhere, we have lost hold of who we are in society and what this responsibility means.

And, we just cannot continue to blame the African-American woman or the white man for our short-comings any longer.

It is true that the majority of African-American males do live upright and moral lives. A look at a cross section of McNair Hall engineering males with 3.0 or better GPAs will prove that. One could even find a "few good men" in liberal arts and other sciences.

It will be these men who pioneer and chart our race into the year 2000 and beyond. Living examples of the power of positive thought and determination.

However, I cannot, for the life of me, wonder how a significant number of college educated, "mature" African-American adult males can find pleasure in destruction. I am talking about the dope smoking, crack selling, no bath taking, no hope making brothers who willingly contribute to that "one-in-four" statistic.

For the inner city African-American who cannot afford college or the southern/rural area African-American who have not aspirations of attending college, I can readily accept and begin to work out their social problems.

But, how does that equate with those brothers who have a chance to attend college? The fact of the matter is that they should know better, and they give those who will live with backbone and character a bad image to our African-American females and our own race.

I am beginning to preach now--I need to end this. In conclusion, I would like to say that I firmly believe that our history rests on the shoulders of the African-American male. There are those who are in training and study now that will rewrite history--and there are those here now who seek self-gratification. They will bring us down. WAKE UP MALES OF AFRICAN DESCENT. OUR LIVES ARE IN ALL OF OUR HANDS!

MOTHER: ROLE MODEL FOR FAMILY

There use to be a time in our society when the males were considered to be the role models of most families. There also use to be a time when men would work long, hard and prosperous hours at work just so that he could provide for his family.

When I sit down and view the black family I see the mother as being the leader in the majority of black families. She is the individual who pushes the children to excel in school. She is the person who encourages her husband to continue to work hard and she is also the person who will stick with you and by you during your times of depression.

However, I can't understand why so many people take their mother for granted. I also can't understand why so many people feel that the mother owes the family everything and has not received respect in return.

For those individuals who feel that the mother does owe the family and she is not suppose to receive respect in return those I see those individuals as being self-centered and cold-hearted individuals.

Today, I see the mother as being the bread winners for our families. She does not and will not settle for less than what is expected of herself and or her family. She constantly instills in her children that if there is something that you want to do in life, it can be done and it will be accomplished if only you have confidence in yourself to excel.

The mother is the bread-winner for the family, the mentor for her children, and most importantly the heart of the family.

Just think about it for a moment... What would your family be like without your mother? Who would encourage you to be the best you can be in life? and who would always be there when you needed that special friend to confide in? No one else but your "the mother".

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Kuwait, Iraq, Saudi Arabia Reject Islam

The governments in Kuwait, Iraq, and Saudi Arabia were not established on the basis of Islamic rules, nor do they implement the rules of Islam in their systems. In particular, the economic and political systems in these countries are derivations of western capitalistics and democratic ideologies. The Saudi government, however, likes to be portrayed as an Islamic state, and the criminal laws in this country are used as proof that the regime is Islamic. It is true that most of the criminal laws are based on the Islamic Code, but Islam does not consider a state to be Islamic unless all laws from the Islamic Code are followed. Therefore, Kuwait, Iraq, and Saudi Arabia are not Islamic states, where as Iran, based on the Shiite Muslim Code is an Islamic government.

Removing the border between Iraq and Kuwait complies and is consistent with Islamic law. After the collapse of the Ottoman Empire (which was an Islamic state), Britain and France took control of the Middle East. In 1916, they divided the Muslim world into 50 countries and the Arab Nation into 22 countries. Before division of the area by the British and French, Kuwait did not exist. This area of land was a part of Al-Bassra, a city in southern Iraq.

The West divided the Muslim world in a way that distributed the wealth into the hands of a small population and left the masses in poverty. The division of land into many small countries created a lot of border disputes between the Muslim countries; actually, there is a border dispute between all countries in the Middle East...Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq, Iraq and Turkey, Turkey and Iran, Iran and Iraq, Turkey and Syria, Syria and Jordan, Syria and Lebanon, Egypt and Sudan, Egypt and Libya, Libya and Teshl, etc. ... These borders were designed by the British to keep Arab and Muslim countries fighting each other. Therefore, the act of removing borders between Kuwait and Iraq is seen as unifying the area and returning it to its original boundaries. Unifying the area is consistent with Islamic ruling.

Poetic Tribute For

Never to say "I am Sorry"

I am at the bottom of the totem pole
I am a woman, poor and black

For this, the world wants me to apologize
Indeed, my great and my great great grandmother had to.

But me/I will never give that pleasure because/if I did, that would be displeasing to myself

To say I am sorry
for WHO I am
would be very sorry of me.

The Noblest Fight

Through those trials and tribulations and through those darkest nights, there comes a time when we must rise to face the unimaginable fight.

There comes a time when the spirit calls;
when humanity, above cowardice, must rise,
to face those demons, inside, as out and fight them all without compromise.
so steady and so sure, letting no obstacle impede your irresistible force, a power beyond compare, and it's assuring to know that for us you're always there.

The quality of leadership is a rare thing indeed, and one who commands it, even in silence, must lead
all others around them toward that ability they show:
along the paths of greatness flying as high as one can go.

by Jody Martin

Artificial Moon

When we stray from the proper course you are there,
and in times of disappointment, you always show you care.
If we ever are in need of a sure, helping hand, all we do is look for you, and there you always stand.

Though inundated with work, you help us move on by lighting the paths we use. If our strength is gone:
quickly to the rescue, we'll feel your presence near.
An angel you truly are; that's why we hold you so dear.

But so much more than a guardian angel, you're a friend on whose guiding hand we've all come to depend.
And through memory of special efforts might often evanesce, our memories of you will always be of love and happiness.

And so, dear guardian angel, let Heaven hear this call, with you standing there beside us, we'll never have a fall;
you're always there to help us, to lead us out of the night;
with you we need not worry, our wondrous angel of light.

Egyptian Flower

Oh my flower of Egypt, so stunning and so fair, with your tanned skin aglow and your lovely brown hair,
hair that frames the face whose beauty can hypnotize,
and what mysteries are kept in those dark, dark eyes.

The fragrance of your body is intoxicating, beyond compare;
to hold you close is my desire, I'd show you how I care but I am just a coward, still I want your favors won-for you're the only thing of beauty in a desert of none.

Graceful motions speak with each sway of your hips,
I long for your embrace and for the touch of your lips.
Though soundless, the message is clear to senses like mine:
the gods have sent to barren earth a woman divine.

My Egyptian flower, so fair of form and face, whose sultry movements glide with a soft, exquisite grace.
Your body creates the music, that calls me in the night, tempting me ever so gently with your sensual delights.

by Jody Martin

Angel of Light

When I awaken late at night, or early some morns when the night's grip has not fully worn away, sometimes I look out of my window and sight not total darkness, but the glow of an artificial light.

Salvation from total darkness in a neighbor's yard, and a softening of the night which assails me so hard and long. Eight ebony hours might scare me, true, except for that lunar light which is mimicked in you.

Don't get me wrong, darkness is not that hard to take, but the moon and the stars exist, and I don't want to make that brave choice. Yet Luna and Stellas notwithstanding, it's the comfort of your radiant voice I'll keep demanding.

Sometimes fear does come, although I love you dearly,
and the assurance of a light is appreciated yearly.
But without the sun and days to polarize the night, we'd have no respect for your dark, though muted, might.

by Jody Martin

Ghost in the Night

Not pale white or sheet-like but pitter-patter on four little feet, these ghosts sit beneath a tree in the morning dark.
Their eyes aglow from the slightest light as silence speaks volumes, quiet being their boasts.
They are the color in an existence bleak and stark.

Anxiously looking at me as I walk past,
I pick up the morning paper as they stare;
haunting me, hungering for both affection and food.
Little green eyes wide with anticipation:
will the tall, lanky thing stop and care, or doesn't it realize the honor; their being here is good!

Circling around, they shout their displeasure;
growling, meowling, and hissing, these lords of the night plot revenge. "He is on our space," they say.
They purr-fectly plot as they also ponder patience, showing wisdom of which tall lanky's don't have the sight,
until yes, they are appeased with an offering each day.

by Jody Martin

The Power Behind the Throne

Is it sometimes true that the power behind the throne may be one who's silent, but whose skill is yet known?
Well if this is the case, then the power is with you,
and in your quiet confidence your reign is marked true.

Yes, the stuff of a legend, so steady and sure;
while all those around you with their fears must endure
those frailties of humanity; our doubts and our pains, until we see you and grow calm once again.

Just to see your example is an honor indeed;

But though the pain is hard to bear
we must still go forth and strive;
and if our bodies meet with mortal death,
our souls will eternally survive.

by Jody Martin

A New Road

In this life time of mine, I have been through so many changes
been in so many places:

I've been somewhere called Good Timing
even made my way to a place called Loneliness
-which was about thirteen miles from Pity Place-
But now I've passed Fear Boulevard and Hopeless Street and I'm headed to Wisdom-Strength Avenue.

Lift Every Voice and Sing

By James Weldon Johnson

Lift ev'ry voice and sing
Till Earth and Heaven ring.
Ring with the harmonies of Liberty.
Let our rejoicing rise
High as the list'ning skies,
Let it resound loud as the rolling sea.
Sing a song full of the faith that the dark past has taught us,
Sing a song full of the hope that the present has brought us.
Facing the rising sun of our new day begun,
Lest us march on till victory is won.

Stony the road we trod,
Bitter the chast'ning rod.
Felt in the days when hope unborn had died;
Yet with a steady beat,
Have not our weary feet
Come to the place for which our fathers sighed?
We have come over a weary way that with tears has been watered,
We have come, treading our path
through the blood of the slaughtered,
Out from the gloomy past,
Till now we stand at last
Where the white gleam of our bright star is cast.

God of our weary years,
God of our silent tears,
Thou who hast brought us thus far on the way;
Thou who hast by Thy might Lead us into the light, Keep us forever in the path we pray.
Lest our feet stray from the places, our God,
where we met Thee,
Lest our hearts, drunk with the wine of the world, we forget Thee, shadowed beneath Thy hand,
May we forever stand,
True to our God,
True to our native land.

Soviet students, faculty visit A & T

Moscow State students and faculty hold informal panel discussions.

Betsy Peoples
A&T Register
Staff Reporter

Students and faculty from Moscow State Institute of International Relations held an informal panel discussion Feb. 6 in Webb Hall.

The students and faculty are visiting college campuses across North Carolina.

The N.C. Consortium for International Intercultural Education is sponsoring the group to travel to schools within the consortium program.

According to Dr. Samuel Moseley, faculty representative for A&T, the visits will help the Moscow students establish a positive identification with African-Americans. "The students now know that there are black institutions of higher learning and we are involved in international affairs," stated Moseley.

The consortium of schools includes: A&T, Bennett, Johnson C. Smith, Winston Salem State, North Carolina Central and St. Augustine.

The consortium sponsors an annual Model United Nations Annual Conference. This conference is similar to the characteristics of the United Nations. Students have the opportunity to discuss current issues and to pass resolutions for issues of today.

Moseley said in November 1990, two of the consortium students, one from Winston Salem State and the other from Johnson C. Smith, and faculty representative Jesse Dent from Smith had the opportunity to travel to Moscow.

Moseley said it was Dent who then established an agreement with the Moscow institute of Intercultural Education.

The agreement implied that students from the consortium program would have the opportunity to go to Moscow and the Moscow students will have the opportunity to visit the United States.

"The Moscow Institute was so positive about the idea that before Dent arrived to the states, the institute proposed the idea of visiting in January," Moseley said.

The agreement was worked out were by the consortium was able to bring them here.

Moseley said the consortium hopes to send a delegation of students to Moscow this summer to return the favor of what the students did here.

According to Moseley, the consortium is thinking long term arrangements with Moscow. "We want to be able to establish a student exchange program where they will come here and study for a semester or year and we will send students to Moscow to study," said Moseley.

The consortium program for each school has two representatives from each school, administrative and faculty. Dr. Ron Smith is the administrative representative for A&T.

Sergei S. Houdjakov, faculty representative for the Moscow State Institute of International Relations, said people now have a chance to compare the Soviet Union. "We must change our system way of life," Houdjakov said.

The topic of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev efforts to finding a way to recover from the fallen government was the key issue discussed at the forum. "Perestroika is the only way out of the situation, because the country has already had serious economic decline," said Houdjakov.

According to Time magazine, perestroika is the restructuring of centralized socialism. Gorbachev wants to steer the country away from a centralized system, this is where everyone took orders from above. His goal is to move toward a society where decisions would come from below and be coordinated with a reduced administrative center. "Perestroika is the only possible way for Russia," Houdjakov added.

The Moscow students stated that education is free in their country. "However, you must do well on the entrance exam," said Dmitry Tsvetov, president of the student government.

To answer the question "what is it like attending Moscow Institutions?", Irackly Mtibelishvily said students read, study and party just as Americans.

"The importance of communication" was the theme of the lecture given by the former associate producer of CBS' "Nightwatch" on Feb. 12 in 123 Gibbs Hall.

Professor Teresa Jo Styles, director of women's studies and mass communications at Bennett College, gave the lecture at the 14th annual Dr. Arthur F. Jackson Memorial Lecture. Dr. Jackson was a former chairperson of the sociology and social work department at North Carolina A&T.

According to Ruthena Smith, associate professor of the sociology and social work department, it is fitting that the lecture takes place during Black History Month. "We are learning about the life, legend and contribution of a great Afro-American, Dr. Arthur F. Jackson," she said. "It is an important, noteworthy, historical and educational event."

Styles, a native of Atlanta who earned her bachelor's degree from Spelman in 1972 and her master's degree from Northwestern University, felt that Dr. Jackson had "foresight and vision in new technology." She also said that his interest and concern was with human beings and correcting social ills.

Dr. Jackson taught the first audio-visual class at A&T in 1945 and tried to implement the use of instructional video in classrooms. He was, according to members of the sociology and social work department, "committed to inspiring every fiber of aspiration embedded within an individual to produce his ultimate

When discussing the importance of communication, Styles, who was an associate producer for the Emmy Award-winning documentary, "What Shall We Do About Mother," mentioned the media coverage of Operation Desert Storm. "It's an editorial judgement," she said. "Some people think we have enough war coverage, some think we don't."

Styles, a former senior producer for National Public Radio's "Morning Edition," advised the communications students who were in attendance to be "constantly aware of day-to-day changes" once they leave A&T.

Youth over experience

How many bouts will it take before these boxers of old realize that their time in the ring is over? It seems as if they've had no satisfaction throughout their career.

What does it take? A total beating, humiliation or just being knocked senseless; I wonder?

Saturday night this became all the more ironic as Sugar Ray Leonard took to the ring against Super Welterweight Champion Terry Norris.

Though the fight was highly publicized as being one of the all time greats, it turned out to be very one sided. Critics thought because of Sugar Ray's ring experience and fight savvy, he could overcome the younger Norris.

However, they forgot one thing; one very important aspect of the fight: "the age difference."

Boxing is a sport of reflexes and speed, especially in the lower weight classes and Saturday night this became highly noticeable.

Time and time again, Norris beat Sugar Ray to the punch, flooring him twice and eventually winning by a unanimous decision after 12 rounds.

But not to take anything away from Sugar Ray. He was a great champion and will always maintain the respect throughout the boxing world, but as far as fighting in this decade, he should just call it quits.

So who benefits from fighters going too long? Looking back, fighters like Larry Holmes, who beat Muhammad Ali and Rocky Marciano, who beat Joe Louis and now Terry Norris.

These guys beat what was in the present instead of what use to be. How can they feel a sense of accomplishment when they beat an old man on his way out. In a way they didn't gain anything except for the obvious, the win.

Coming soon, George Foreman will try his hand at the youth movement where he will be facing the Heavyweight Champion, Evander Holyfield. Should he get by this bout he will soon have to face the wave of the future, Iron Mike Tyson.

Nothing is more important than education to Deidra Cheeks, Center, North Carolina A&T Women's Basketball Team.

Cheeks, a senior Chemical Engineering major from Southfield, Michigan, places her schoolwork above all else, including basketball. "It's never been hard for me to manage my time," said Cheeks. "I was always taught to do my homework first," she added.

She decided to take a year off from basketball last season so that she could end everything at the same time. "I knew I would be here another year, and I wanted to graduate and stop playing basketball all in the same year," said Cheeks.

Cheeks, 22, says that after she leaves A&T that it will probably be the end for her and basketball, unless she eventually decides to coach.

She plans to work at a pharmaceutical company for one year before she goes to law school to obtain a degree in environmental law. "I was going to go straight to law school, but

Aggies Triumph over S.C. State

B.J. Evans
A&T Register
Sports Editor

N.C. A&T had four players hit in double figures as the Aggies rolled to a 70-67 win over South Carolina State here Saturday.

From the start, the game was to the fans delight. Dana Elliott gave the Aggies their first spark by hitting four straight points before the game was a minute old.

Fastbreak play and some tough defense enabled the Aggies to take an early seven point lead. The Aggies were also shooting the ball well from the perimeter, for a 56 percent first half effort.

But storming back was the Bulldogs. Travis Williams, who led all scores with 22 points gave the Bulldogs a push with his "put back" slam with 15:14 to go in the half.

The Bulldogs managed to close within three following the push by Williams, but to their dismay, Bobby Moore was inserted into the game and sparked the Aggies with eight straight points extending the Aggie lead to 33-20 with 5:29 to go.

The rest of the half was to the Aggies likings and they cruised into halftime leading 43-32.

Coming out of the halftime the Aggies appeared to be opening up the game behind Glenn Taggart's three point play and a Dana Elliott basket. The score now read 50-38.

However, the Bulldogs did not give up. They managed to battle their way back and make a game of it. By the 4:44 mark the Bulldogs had closed within five. The Aggies, however, kept their composure and outlasted the hard fought comeback by the Dogs.

Head Coach Don Corbett was pleased with his guys' effort and play. "We are playing very consistent now and that helps a lot going down the stretch."

In the women's action, the Lady Aggies dropped a heartbreaker to the Lady Bulldogs 62-55.

Throughout the game the Lady Aggies were suffering from some icy shooting from the outside and South Carolina's zone defense closed off any attempts at getting the ball inside to Deidra Cheek and Helena Creamer.

However the Lady Aggies hung tough with some defensive pressure and managed to scrap their way within two before going into halftime, 30-28.

In the second half the Lady Aggies came out and tied the game at 36 all with 14:44 to go. From there the game was up for grabs. Each team was looking for that one spark that would put them over the top

The lead see-sawed back and forth until their was :44 seconds left to go. The Lady Aggies were down by one when Creamer was fouled; however, the Aggies were not in the bonus and had to take the ball on the side. A turnover by the Aggies resulted into a free throw opportunity for the Bulldogs.

They missed the free throw but rebounded the ball and put it back in for a 56-53 lead.

The Aggies still had one last breath when Tammy Hammond hit a basket with :19 seconds to go to close within two, 57-55.

However, the Lady Aggies had to foul to stop the clock and the Bulldogs nailed five free throws to end the game.

Life continues after heartbreak

Betsy Peoples
A&T Register
Staff Reporter

Valentines day is traditionally a day where there are greeting cards, flowers, balloons, smiles, and heart shaped boxes filled with chocolates.

During this time of year, love is supposedly in the, however many are experiencing a loss of a love through heart-ache.

After your valentine has gone, you may be wounded, but your not out for the count.

According to Pamela L. Valadez, director and counselor of minority affairs at A&T, the stages to recovery from a breakup are similar to the stages to grief when you have lost a love one to death.

She says it is not unusual for there to be denial, anger, and then gradual acceptance. At this stage there is a lot of grieving and crying. They are left with a lingering sadness that will last for awhile, but they feel okay. Like they have passed it.

"There isn't any timetable that recovery goes by. Everybody takes there own length of time to move through these stages," Valadez stressed.

For each person, the stages last the length of time that is right for them," she added.

Dr. Gwendolyn Goldsby Grant, psychologist, and advice columnist for ESSENCE magazine said in a March 91 article that one should not wallow in their pain for too long.

"We should appreciate and respect ourselves for having the courage to carry on," said Goldsby.

Valadez says that people around a person who is grieving should not try and cheer the person up, because this sends a message that I am not comfortable with your grief. So it tends to shut people down and they can not move through the stages like they need to.

"If a person is trying to be cheerful and hide their feelings, they cant go ahead and move through their stages," Valadez said.

Valadez suggest that friends should listen to friends who have experienced such grief.

"Do encourage them to be active, but don't insist that they be cheerful while there doing this. Give them permission to feel what ever way they feel." Valadez said.

Clinical Social Worker Kit Duncan of Human Services Consultation, encourages people who have experienced a breakup to stay active. "People should keep their lives in balance. Try doing the things you usually do," she said.

Valadez suggests not being a hermit. "Do not hide and lick your wounds, get out with people."

If you feel you need to call your ex-boyfriend or girlfriend, try not to.

According to Valadez this prolongs the agony. "Try calling a friend and talking it over with them," she said.

"However, if a person has not had a chance to vent their feelings, you should have a chance to do that. As long as it is non-violent and not abusive. Try to stick to the I message instead of the You message - I feel really bad, I'm suffering, I'm hurting - this is okay to say, because this is the truth. However it becomes abusive when you say your lousy or your no good," said Valadez.

Valadez noted that the person who ends the relationship has had time to think about it. And when they finally make their move they have been thinking about it for about three to six months.

The other person is usually shocked with no preparation it will take them time to recover.

The one who ends the relationship is viewed as cold and heartless, but the fact is they have been suffering with trying to make the decision for several months and they finally made it. This person is probably relieved.

Valadez said there are two levels of pain involved in the end of a relationship.

The brand new hurt of losing that person and the rejection that stirs up old pain.

This is about 75 percent of the pain we feel after a breakup; about 25 percent is new pain from losing that new person.

There is stored up pain because you didn't have a chance to process through it at the time. when you get rejected in the present it hurts ten times a bad. As it would have if that new rejection was standing by itself. For example, you may remember the time you didn't get a Valentine card in the six grade from that certain someone you had a crush on. all the old messages come crashing down.

"If you have been rejected and your in pain this is a good time to examine the pain that your carrying, not only the new but the old too," said Valadez.

"When we love another deeply, we take emotional risks. But even if we lose we learn. You learn how to care, how to cope with your losses. You learn that if a person leaves, the love in you is still there. And once you are healed, you will probably learn that you are a better person for having loved," wrote Grant.

Council from page 1

Also, the university would generate more revenue at night, which is the standard football time, according to Burden.

The presidents of the Men's and Women's Council will be contacted this week to conduct a housing survey and discuss the proposed $300 increase for housing, according to Gerard A. Morrison, president of the Council Of Presidents.

Morrison also encourages all organizations to donate a "love offering" for a bone marrow transplant for Carmen Ross. Donations will also be raised for Ross at the Gospel Choir Concert on Feb. 24 at 5:30 p.m. in Harrison Auditorium.

The next council meeting will be Feb. 20 at 6 p.m. in room 111 Murphy Hall.

Know When To Say When

This nationwide consumer education and awareness campaign began in 1983 and is designed to encourage responsible consumption of beer. A series of prime time television commercials and other promotional materials reminds consumers not to overindulge, and provides suggestions to bartenders and hosts on responsible serving. "Know When To Say When" has allowed us to apply our marketing expertise and deliver a message of personal responsibility to a broad cross section of the American public.

Pit Stop

This program was developed to encourage responsible behavior by college students during Spring Break and other school vacation periods. In cooperation with local and state governments, "Pit Stop" personnel provide coffee, doughnuts and, to those of legal drinking age, a message of personal responsibility and caution at state-owned rest areas along major highways. "Pit Stop" has been so successful that it has been expanded to other travel occasions.

S.A.D.D.

We are the major corporate sponsor of S.A.D.D. (Students Against Drunk Driving). This independent organization has used the power of the students themselves to fight the drunk driving problem among teenagers. The program encourages a healthy dialogue between parents and their teenagers on drinking. While not condoning underage consumption, S.A.D.D. provides a real-life solution to a serious societal problem. We have provided a special grant to expand the program to colleges and universities. Write: S.A.D.D., P.O. Box 800, Marlboro, MA for more information.

Good Sport

As the world's largest sponsor of sporting events, we are committed to seeing that they continue to be enjoyable, family entertainment. "Good Sport" is a program that brings facility management, team owners, and concessionaires together to actively encourage responsible fan behavior. It provides a comprehensive action plan carefully designed to help keep sporting events fun and safe for all fans.

I'm Driving

We support the designated driver concept through sponsorship of the "I'm Driving" program. "I'm Driving" is promoted with counter cards, table tents, buttons and other educational materials. This program is not a substitute for responsible drinking, but it offers a sensible option in potential drunk driving situations.

Your Alcohol I.Q.

This program is designed to educate consumers about alcohol use in an easy-to-understand, entertaining format. A video starring "LA Law's" Michael Tucker and Jill Eikenberry takes the viewer through the truths and myths surrounding alcohol. Anheuser-Busch has developed this program in the belief that education is the best tool available to encourage responsible consumption and reduce abuse. "Your Alcohol I.Q." is available as a free rental at 25,000 video outlets around the country.

At Anheuser-Busch we, like any responsible manufacturer, are concerned by the abuse of our products.

The vast majority of the 80 million Americans who enjoy beer do so responsibly. But those few who abuse it can have an impact far beyond their numbers. An impact that reflects on us as a company, on our products and employees, and on the much larger population of responsible beer drinkers.

On this page you'll find a brief introduction to a few of the programs we've helped create, or help sponsor, to lessen that impact.

The absolute solution to the abuse of alcohol isn't on this page. That's a challenge our society as a whole has before it. We must all continue to take the problem seriously, as parents, hosts, friends and citizens.

As a brewer we feel an added responsibility. The ancient craft we practice is designed to produce a beverage of friendship, refreshment and moderation. We brew beer to be enjoyed responsibly.

If you have comments or suggestions, please let us hear from you. And please take a few moments to see if you can play a role in any of the programs mentioned here. We'd welcome your help.
