Blue to speak at centennial commencement

Gerald Morrison: Making a change

A banking and finance major, one of Morrison's many aspirations is to open a Black owned bank in order to help with Black economic development. He believes that giving back to the community is essential and never hesitates to lend a hand wherever possible.

The 21-year-old Hampton, native only feels his hand, but encourages and motivates other individuals to do the same.

Gerard Morrison

Along with encouragement, Morrison tries to instill a sense of sincerity and trust amongst his peers.

Morrison strives to open a-minded and innovative, yet conscious business when dealing with peers as well as administrators, thus employing a grass roots style.

When asked what message he would like to convey to the younger generation, Morrison replies, "Don't let anybody impose limitations on you. You should want to control your own destiny."

Be steadfast and unyielding in reaching your goals. Remember your heritage and help someone up the ladder because it's lonely at the top."

In the fall, Morrison will be handling the challenging task of business manager for The A&T Register, where he hopes to get "hands on" experience.

As an effective legislator, he has chaired several major committees and Blue formerly served as chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus. He has received the Outstanding Legislator Award given by the N.C. Association of Trial Lawyers, and by the N.C. Black Lawyers Association.

Blue is active in the North Carolina and American Bar associations, the North Carolina Center of Public Policy the North Carolina National Bank Community Development Corporation, the Davie Street Presbyterian Church, the Raleigh-Wake Cinema Association, the Kennedy Club and Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity.

A native of Lumberton, N.C. Blue received his undergraduate degree from North Carolina Central University and his law degree from Duke University. He practiced law for nearly 20 years and is managing partner of a law firm in Raleigh. He is married to former Edna Emma Smith. They have three children, Daniel III, Karita and Dhiaman.

Accreditation teams to visit A&T

The Professional Educators: A Catalyst for Learning is the theme of the school of education as they prepare for a visit from national (NCATE) and state (SDPI) accreditation teams from April 28 to May 1. Dr. Dorothy Ramot, dean of the school of education, said it is necessary to be accredited to receive national recognition.

Ramot noted that students coming out of an accredited program have access to higher systems with Qur questions being raised. The school of education has been preparing for the accreditation teams visit for the past year. NCATE and SDPI mandated certain changes in the teacher education program that require a level of quality that assures that the graduates are prepared and rigorous academic standards in professional education.

Teacher Education expanded beyond the school of education and prepares professional educators to be catalysts for learning in other areas such as agriculture, theatre arts, and data processing.

Twenty-four undergraduate and 21 graduate programs will be reviewed. NCATE will inspect the unit which is the school of education, and its policy-making body, the Teacher Education Council, of which the dean of the school of education serves as chairperson. SDPI looks at each of the 14 programs' standards, goals, and content.

They will also inspect quality of programs, instruction, involvement of faculty in public school, library and instructional programs.

Another bloody summer?

As the summer approaches, thoughts of hanging out at the beach and having parties are on the minds of many students. However, one issue enters my mind: black-on-black crime. Last year, there were nearly 1,000 homicides committed in Los Angeles and D.C. combined. Many of these occurred between May and August involving African-Americans one way or the other. Last year in D.C., there were more than 100 homicides committed between May and August. An estimated 80 percent of those homicides involved incidents of black-on-black crime.

The U.S. Crime Survey reported that 96 percent of all criminal shootings are committed by African-Americans.

We seem to have forgotten that we as a people must stick together to face our problems in order to overcome them. If we don’t value each other’s lives, how can we expect someone else to value our own? I can’t answer the question for you, I can only bring it to your attention. You must answer it for yourselves.

Miss A&T, why not SGA President?

Only two Student Government Associations presidents have been female at A&T. My question to the women that apply for Miss A&T is why not SGA president.

I feel that there has been a barrier that appears to many magazines, this is maybe the reason women choose this title over president. The magazine itself is like a competition, not easy to receive but easy to send clothing expenses. This eliminates the secondary factor as a decisional incentive.

I know that many women are interested in running for Miss A&T but the position of SGA president is too political bearing the title of being political. Everyone receives this as a negative factor. Women like being in the positive role of Miss A&T, who has no political vote in SGA. I hope that Aggie women will stand up and be heard with a strong political power in SGA like the future to kill this myth that we will avoid politics.

Sharon Jenkins, Miss A&T 1991-92 started this myth, feminism, a graduating senior before she completes the Miss A&T that can do more than just show a description that has been labeled to the position. She has denied the calling of just local selections and has projected her talents as a modeling specter. This is a role that Miss A&T 1991-92, Pam Addow should continue.

I questioned Addow on why she choose this title over SGA president. Addow on accounting major has a 3.9 GPA. She is highly qualified for the position of presidents but elected the title for Miss A&T because it was her first time running. Certainly, Addow wants to be politically involved in student government.

I commend Addow on the acceptance of her title. I hope that she has her intelligence and resourceful more Aggie women to challenge the male dominance of the position of SGA president.

Miss A&T is a role that women need to consider more often early on in their career. This is the twenty-first century.
A&T hosts gospel music fest

Rita Harris
Special to The A&T Register

The auditorium filled to capacity of standing room only with A&T family and friends, who gathered to worship in song.

A variety of music was heard from the groups. Songs ranged from contemporary gospel to rap and "old time" spirituals.

John Kee and the New Life Community Choir performed last as the highlight of the night. Ministering in song and praise, Kee and his choir kept the audience standing on their feet.

"I'm happy to see so many young people worshipping with us," Kee, who sang and directed both the choir and audience.

Spirit Led, the first group to perform, came from Reidsville. Transformation Crusade was discovered by Commission, a contemporary gospel group, ministered to the audience through christian rap. The A&T Fellowship Gospel Choir just finished tour and are new participating in engagements in North Carolina.

They have received numerous awards for their outstanding performances, including most outstanding campus organization.

The concert was sponsored by Student Government Association in celebration of the centennial year.

MEMORANDUM

TO: NORTH CAROLINA A&T STATE UNIVERSITY'S STUDENT BODY

FROM: Dr. Sullivan Welborne, Jr. Vice Chancellor - Student Affairs

DATE: April 18, 1991

RE: Discontinuance of the University's Laundry Operation

This memorandum is written to officially communicate the phase out of the Campus Laundry Operation. Effective the Fall Semester of 1991, students will no longer be required to pay the annual linen fee of $34 or provide the $10 deposit to secure sheets and pillows cases.

The decision to close the Laundry was based on a recent student survey conducted by the offices of Economics and Auxiliary Services. It revealed that only 11.8% of students utilize the laundry service, though 60.1% of the students are aware of the services provided. It was concluded from these findings that discontinuing the Laundry Operation will not adversely affect student life.

Inquiries relative to the closing may be directed to the office of Auxiliary Service at (919) 334-7876, Mr. Andre' James, Director.
