Deja vu?

Homecoming concert still an issue a year later

Reminiscent of last year’s controversy over whether to have the concert at Corbett center, the SGA struggles to bring the Homecoming spirit back home with the traditional Saturday night concert. President Arthur Smith spoke with The A&T Register on whether this year’s Homecoming festivities would be held “on the yard” and which of two purported “Homecoming” concerts is the “official” Aggie event.

The A&T Register: Is there an A&T Homecoming concert at the Coliseum?

Arthur Smith: No, that’s not A&T’s event.

Register: Who is it?

Smith: It’s being sponsored by Diamond Life Concerts, promoted by Tony Williams. He’s the former promoter... He got his origin at A&T... doing shows and doing promotional events for Homecoming. But there are a lot of legal concerns which we have... (over the use of A&T’s name) to promote the Coliseum concert. What I’m being told... the logo (the A&T seal) is protected... (But) we do have what’s legally called a “word mark” on the word “Aggie.” So, anyone can use the term “Aggie.” It could refer to A&T or Texas A&M... “Homecoming” is a generic term. But all these terms are alluding to certain things, we know that. And, lastly, the term “official” are the three terms that...

Ferry sports A&T colors

A&T’s emblem and colors were recently unveiled on one of 25 ferry’s in the NC Ferry System. The ferry Cape Fear was revealed Sept. 27 in Wilmington where alumni and students gathered to celebrate this occasion. Each of the 16 UNC schools will have a ferry with their colors and emblem on it.

Chancellor Edward Fort and Transportation Institute unveiled the emblem on the ferry.

“This was a historic event for A&T,” said William Nelson, transportation management/logistics major from Philadelphia. “It was wonderful to have alumni of the area and students helped make the day a success.”

The A&T University Choir sang the National Anthem to begin the ceremony. Speakers included Chancellor Edward Fort, Wilmington’s mayor Don Betz, Oscar Blankens from U.S. Rep. Eva Clayton’s office, Willie Riddick from Governor Jim Hunt’s office, Capt. John Williams, U.S. Coast Guard.

Curtain up: Players stage 99th year

By Mickey Colbert

The A&T theater program is now 99 years old. From its modest beginnings in the 1890s, the Players are now expecting a bright future. Its first play this school year will be Zooman and the Sign which opens tonight under the direction of Miller Lucky.

The idea of a theater school was thought of in the last century. Susan Dudley (1865-1933), wife of the school President James Dudley, thought of a theater for the school, which was then called the Agricultural and Mechanical College; when she founded the A&M Players in 1898 and wrote, produced and directed How Shall I Go Up To My Father?, a commencement play. In the play the character Liberty challenged the first A&M graduating class “to set excellence upon all acts of noble, daring and true value.”

Susan Dudley also staged such original plays and pageants as Crusades and Crusaders in 1901, Practical Christianity in 1907, The Land of Opportunity in 1917, and A Christmas in 1922. Under the persuasion of his wife, President Dudley in 1923 hired actor Richard B. Harrison who directed a play and taught a course titled expression and dramatic art each summer until 1930 when he left to star on Broadway. As a tribute to the actor, the A&T players took his name in 1932.

Many teachers taught the acting students in the next 20 years. Among the professors in the English department who directed the Richard B. Harrison players from the 1930s to 1955 were Percy J. Barnes, Roy Howard Brown, Pearl Jean Bledsoe, Sylvester Clark (famous for his production of Shakespeare), Sandra Bowen Motz and John Kilimanjaro.

Kilimanjaro was the person who brought big changes to acting and to the University. Up until his time, drama classes were taught under the English department, but he was successful in having the curriculum in speech and drama separated from the English department. He added theater courses to the curriculum and turned the acting students into a disciplined theater group that traveled throughout the United States. He also oversaw the design and construction of the Paul Robeson Little Theater and named it after the famous black actor and singer.

In 1982 Professor H. T. Flowers accepted the executive directorship of the theater department, and under him the theater program prospered and professional critics praised the school’s productions. The Richard B. Harrison...
Couch Club returns to A&T with impact

By Donte McGill
Staff Writer

Umar Riggs, 1996-97 Zeta Phi Beta Man of the Year, is definitely a man on a mission. He and other students have established one of the main scenes at A&T. One of the many events Riggs has created on campus is called the Couch Club.

The Couch Club is a student organization with members, who have come together to create a student atmosphere for the betterment of the student body.

"We want to make the Couch Club interesting. They enhance the atmosphere with artistic expression and melodic readings," Riggs said.

Riggs plans to take the Couch Club to another level this year. There are now two parts, the Jazz Cafe and the Spoken Word.

The first part of the club is the Jazz Cafe, an evening of live jazz in an intimate atmosphere which allows the people to relax, recline and embrace the soft jazz melodies. The second part is the Spoken Word, an open mic poetry reading with an eclectic blend of readers from all over the world.

"The Jazz Cafe is a night in which people will never forget, like the poetry scene in Love Jones," said Riggs.

Dwayne Adams, accounting major from Raleigh, said: "The Jazz Cafe is a friendly setting that has scented candles, motif jazz beverages and worldwide jazz musicians.

"I don't want anybody to think that they are doing me or anyone else a favor by coming to the Couch Club," said Riggs. "We only want people to come and experience it for yourself to know what it is all about.

"We are not pulling arms nor are we closing any curtains. A lot of people did not have faith in the Couch Club when it first started out. It made me stronger. I had to put my total faith in the hands of God, and he has blessed me to be successful this far.

"The best part of the Couch Club for me is to see black people having a peaceful, good time and each other. This is what determines a successful Couch Club, not how many people show up," continues Riggs.

Larry Bronson, communications major from Cleveland, OH, said: "Positive people like Umar Riggs, 'Kinetic Consciousness' and other people that are trying to keep unity and love among the people should be commended. In spite that you will always have someone or somebody say negative things because they have nothing better to do with their own lives but to criticize good people for doing positive things for their people."

The first Couch Club for the school year drew nearly 450 people on Sept. 19 in the Memorial Student Union Ballroom.

A&T student lands teaching job in Japan

Throughout her childhood, Amy Echols fantasized about traveling all over the world. She dreamed of going to Europe, Japan and other countries, and of one day teaching abroad. “I have always been adventurous and had a passion for traveling,” says the 1997 North Carolina A&T State University graduate. “I have always wanted to see the world.”

Last month, the history education major’s dream of visiting Japan and teaching abroad became a reality. Echols accepted a teaching position with the Department of Defense Dependent School (DoDDs) in Yokosuka, Japan.

Teaching in a foreign country isn’t exactly new to Echols. Last year, she and three classmates completed their student teaching experience in Germany as part of A&T’s Student Teaching Abroad Program.

Echols, who had previously lived in Germany, says her experience teaching in that country, where she interacted with different cultures and taught a diverse population, will certainly be a plus for her in Japan.

“Amy did an outstanding job as a student teacher,” says Guy. “She set as her goal to teach abroad and the A&T Student Teaching Abroad Program gave her the avenue to realize her goal.”

According to Guy, students participating in the program have strengthened their student teaching experience and have been exposed to a more global and culturally diverse teaching experience.

“Amy’s position with DoDDs illustrates how the teaching abroad program can broaden career opportunities for A&T students,” says Guy. “The professional contacts they establish throughout participation in the program gives them an international realm of access. Amy has utilized this valuable resource.”

According to Echols, teaching in Japan will provide her an opportunity to learn and experience new ventures.

“It will provide me with a better understanding of my role in the world,” she says.

Is knowledge your God?

There are many religions, beliefs, values systems, and ideologies on NCA&T’s campus. Some believe that all of these things are truth. But is this possible? Can two things that contradict one another both be true?

The point is everyone’s search for truth, or believe that they have the truth. Everyone has a different interpretation of truth, so this article is written based on my interpretation of the Bible’s definition of truth.

I am a born-again Christian therefore my spirituality and information lies solely on the foundation of Jesus Christ (1 Cor. 3:11). This is not an attempt to religion bash, but and attempt to exalt Jesus Christ, God, the Son with permission of God, the Father, in the power of God, the Holy Ghost.

I am concerned about the increasing hunger of knowledge. It is true, “My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: Because thou hast rejected knowledge...” (Hosea 4:6). Looking at mainly the increasing new religions it seems as if the foundation is knowledge.

Knowledge defined in Hebrew is cunning, aware. This is not necessarily a bad thing, but truth defined in Greek is deliver, make free. Notice these two words have different original meanings. Confusing knowledge with truth could be the destruction of a man if he allows himself to be consumed by having knowledge above having God, who is truth, according to Christianity.

I know that a lot of religions are similar in this day and age, and may even have some of the same beliefs. But, we must recognize that even the small differences could determine whether a person will be eternally saved or eternally damned. Some may not agree, but again this is my opinion based on my foundation, Jesus Christ.

As Ecclesiastes 1:9 states, “The thing that hath been is that which shall be done: and there is nothing new under the sun.” The idolization of knowledge is nothing new under the sun, in fact the Bible prophesies about this period we are experiencing now.

Here are some scriptures that talk about today.

“But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bringing upon themselves swift destruction.”

And many shall follow them pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of,” (2 Peter 2:1-3). Are you one of the many? “But these, as natural brute beast, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption; And shall receive the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure to riot in the day time. Spots they are, and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you; Hav ing eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls; an heart they have exercised with covetous practices: cursed children...” (2 Peter 2:12-14).

Some of us have deceived knowledge is the way to be free, but Jesus said in John 8:32, “The truth shall make you free.” This issue is not at the fault of any race. As a matter of fact, in an attempt to fight the so-called human enemy we have forgotten about the spiritual enemy, Satan, that operates behind humans. Satan could care less about who you are or what you look like as long as you are following everything but truth (Eph. 6:12).

Please, we cannot allow ourselves to be deceived. “Not everyone that crieth Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in Heaven (Matt 7:21). Christians: If you profess Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior and the baptism of the Holy Ghost, then act on it! Act is a charge, “But ye shall receive power, after which the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.” The great thing about this charge is God gave us the power to carry it out and to fulfill it.

Greeks defined Power as miraculous, ability, abundance, meaning, might, (worker) of miracle, strength, violence, mighty work. It’s in you!! Birth it out and walk in the anointing that God has given you. I am not trying to be a know-it-all, but an encouragement, and ultimately, a witness. (2 Cor. 10:3-5; Eph. 6:13-20) No compromise!!. Is knowledge your God?

Students hot about no A/C

By Langston Logan

Staff Writer

Changes in residential halls are always an issue among the students at A&T. Students always dream of coed housing, 24-hour visitation and the single bedroom arrangement.

But many students endure semester after semester in hot and stuffy rooms. This brings attention to the air-conditioning unit. A&T residence hall rules prohibit air conditioners in the rooms, unless a medical excuse is provided. Many students on campus feel this is unfair, since we provide the same information year after year. Alvetty Kingsbery, a junior from Durham, admits it is hard to study and sleep in a hot room. “Why do we need a doctor’s excuse to keep ourselves comfortable?” What students do not realize is that tuition now includes air conditioners (for Cooper and Vann Story).

Tuition increased $430 per student on campus, supposedly for air conditioners in every room according to the SGA last year – that aren’t there. The rapidly circulating issue is that students are paying for a high-rise residence hall to be built within 10 years that they won’t be living in.

Athletic fees also increased and there are only four home football games and the basketball teams are being furnished with new uniforms by Michael Jordan. Something’s not right. Is that someone is telling students one thing and doing another? Awareness of how student money is handled is essential.

SGA expecting productive school year

By Schwanda Rountree
Staff Writer

According to the A&T Student Government Association's agenda, a lot will be accomplished this semester. The SGA officers are President Arthur Smith, Vice President of External Affairs Nathan Ingram, Vice President for Internal Affairs Thomasina Lentz, Attorney General Yi-sanna Jones, Miss A&T Bridgett Herring, Secretary Tanisha Townsend and Treasurer Angela Willis.

SGA plans to have "Black Monday," which is an economic development day developed to create and expand avenues for managing money proposed by SGA President Smith.

"Black Monday" will be held every first Monday beginning in October," said Smith. "It will be like last year's Economic Empowerment. SGA also wants to establish corporate sponsorship (traveling smarter). The purpose of cooperative sponsorship is to establish cheaper rates for cheaper travel, according to Smith. SGA will be going to the conference mandated by national organizations. Miss A&T went to Atlanta to the National Black Collegiate Hall of Fame. Communication and Technological Advancements will be strengthened by incorporating a technology fund. The idea is for every student to give an extra dollar for new software and new office materials that are needed for the executive office.

SGA will have a home page that will provide general information such as e-mail addresses of SGA officers, a chat line and an area for questions and responses. Gary Santana is in charge of the home page, and this will be updated each month.

SGA also places emphasis on community development. The Third Thursday Lecture Series will be restructured.

"There needs to be more evidence of documentation, research and visual aids," says Smith.

Miss A&T Bridgett Herring is head- ing the University's Big Brother/Big Sister Program. Each SGA officer will have a little brother or sister. The program should play a big role in community development for the youth.

Smith also plans to utilize A&T's communication resources, such as WNAA and the television station, to increase the efficiency of SGA.

They hope to access information for off-campus students and people in the community through WNAA and the A&T television station.

In an effort to increase campus events for students, A&T Student Government Association circulated a petition demanding that Chancellor Edward Fort lift the ban on students' rights. SGA, along with a group of presidents from student organizations, recently met in William Cafete- ria to discuss the petition.

SGA's purpose was to fight for student's rights to have "weekly" religious, cultural, and social activities, as well as Gym Jams "after" home football games.

"Students should have access to campus facilities that have already been paid for," said Ingram, vice president of external affairs.

The purpose of the petition was to give students the ability to have events on campus on a regular basis.

Aaggie men needed as Big Brothers

By Latonya Best
Staff Writer

The organization Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Greater Greensboro, is teaming up with A&T to match qualified men with 200 African-American boys. They hope to accomplish this with a special program, "To a Brother to a Brother," matching black boys between ages six and 14 with male volunteers from A&T.

Said program recruiter Duane McClure: "College is more than an education and books. And being a true Aggie is doing something for your community."

Through a "Pass It On" grant awarded this year, the goal was to match 80 Aggie men with 200 students between January and December '96. Unfortunately, the youths outnumber the volunteers.

The program's main focus is to reinforce a positive mentoring relationship. Visiting a little brother twice a month can really make a difference in a young man's life, making them less likely to engage in at-risk behavior. Other studies have shown — use illegal drugs or alcohol.

Interested Aggies can contact McClure at 378-9100.

THEATER from front

Players have worked several honors and awards, including the American College Theater Festival Invitation to perform at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

Flowers drew up a Ten Year Plan which helped persuade the University to expand the theater teaching staff to more than five members and the theater was accredited by the National Association of Schools of Theater in 1987.

The last decade has been rewarding to the theater department. From 1987 to 1993, Frankie Day Greenlee acted as executive director of the theater department and because of her hard work and excellence in teaching more graduating students from A&T have been accepted in graduate theater schools throughout the United States than at any other period of the University's history.

Dr. Samuel Hay is now chairman of the theater department. He became chairman in 1993, the year that Paul Robeson theater was closed by OSHA because of building damage and asbestos. The years that the campus theater was closed made it necessary for the drama department to present its plays elsewhere.

The Paul Robeson theater reopened in the spring of this year with a successful play Crack, Cream and Brown Sugar.

Dr. Tyte said that the four years the theater was closed did not hurt the program. When plans are drawn for buildings, it was expected to take about seven years to have them approved and for money to be allocated and for construction to be completed. The Paul Robeson theater was renovated and reopened in four years—a commendable fact.

Dr. Hay says that the school's theater has a bright future because it has an excellent teaching staff, excellent students and actors and actresses who are working hard to present the October play Zorom and the Sign which he urges all students to come out and see because it has a message for all people.

Aggie Den continues to enhance services

By Kenny Lima
Staff Writer

As students walk by the Aggie Den located in the Student Union, they can hear the latest tunes emanating from the jukebox, see students and teaching faculty socializing, laughing, and relaxing, and feel a Café ambiance at the Aggie Den.

This is a far cry from the greasy spoon environment experienced when students first walked onto to A&T's campus in the early 90s. The person responsible for the Aggie Den is a gentleman named, Christopher Toote, this man has an infectious enthusiasm and pride for the Den you notice immediately. Like Jessie Bell, Toote has a genuine concern for his customers, he has an open door policy and implores you to bring to his attention anything you feel that needs to be addressed. The dedication towards these ideals have earned Toote, the Marcorp Southeastern Division's Manager of the Year Award, awarded in August. The southeastern division consists of NC, SC, TN, AL, LA, and TX. So with the award, comes added responsibilities, Toote is now in charge of the Faculty Dining Area in the Williams Cafeteria, he is also in charge of Human Resources. What allows Toote to take on these added responsibilities is his faith in student employees.

Employees such as the recent recipient of the 'Employee of the Month Award', Chen Jones, a sophomore elementary education major. She states: "The work here is challenging, yet fun and I get to met allot of people." Another Aggie that Toote relies upon is, Jamiko Sherman. She is a Political Science major who has shown herself to be accountable and responsible for her actions, so much so, that Toote has made her the weekend supervisor of the Aggie Den.

I asked Toote, what does he think of the Aggie students and he responded: "I find the students to be supportive, honest, motivated, creative and a pillar of strength for our operation and I respect them highly."

Toote has brought in Krispy Kreme donuts, Haagen Dazs and Nestle Ice Cream, Otis Spunkmeyer Cookies and Muffins served fresh and hot. Freshers Yogurt 20 different flavors, he plans to serve two different flavors a week. 15 different candies from Tropical Nuts & Fruits are also available, enough drinks and juices to please the most refined palates. All of these items are available for customers to get on their own, Toote relies upon the Honesty System. He says: "The students of North Carolina A&T are people of integrity and honesty, filled with pride, Aggie Pride! We have a 99.5% honesty rate."

On the menu at the Aggie Den you will find a wide variety of offerings, Aggie Bologna, which is popular with old-school Aggies, fresh fried fish, burgers, veggie burgers, veggie subs, 12 other kinds of subs, and salad.

Toote will not rest upon his laurels, he is constantly looking for ways to improve upon the service and add to the Aggie Den's ambiance. Future plans for the Den include an expansion to the downstairs area of the Union, construction which is slated to begin next year will add a Pizza Hut, Chick-Fil-A, Taco Bell, and a Krispy Kreme Donut Shop, all under the supervision and management of Marcorp Food Services.

Toote also plans to continue his monthly special events, there will be a Hallowe'en party, a Christmas party, a Valentine Dance. There will be free cake and fountain drinks provided and fun to be had by all.

The hours of the Den are 8 a.m. - 10 p.m. on Monday - Friday, and 2-5 p.m. to 7-10 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. You can always find students hanging out at the Aggie Den, Christopher Clemens, a sophomore Electrical Engineering major says: "The right time short order cooking is great, especially Walter Thomas' chicken tenders." Phillip Steele, a sophomore Electrical Technology major: "Like the workers attitudes and the friendly environment at the Den." Jamaal Hill a sophomore Mechanical Engineering major added: "The Aggie Den's breakfast is luming, especially the egg and cheese biscuits, they're on the one."

Toote has begun to create a environment in which honesty, integrity, Black Culture, and Black Pride is omnipres- ent. He asks that you come in and share in the: "... Aggie Den's Spirit, the Aggie Den's experience, the Aggie Den's philosophy, the Aggie Den's ideology!"
in some instances of the A&T campus, we have even had students fighting over who gets to use the Coliseum, and I have to wonder if that is a viable solution. We need to find a way to better accommodate the needs of the students and the promotion of A&T.

The meeting was adjourned with a reminder to all students to attend the next meeting on December 2nd, 1997.

Students grow 'Kente Gardens' in Arboretum

By Mickey Colbert

Students use a drafting board to design their landscapes and have sometimes one project a week to design or one every two weeks, depending on the types of projects they have. They have projects for each class so they have more than one project to do in a week. Normally, the projects are just drafting board projects which will not actually be installed.

Karen McCray said that he worked on his own bed at the Arboretum like the other students and installed the plants grown at the greenhouse on campus.

Most of the drafting of the plans for landscape architecture will be in color.

Jewell Hazel said that students aren't allowed to plant anywhere else in the city — their class work is entirely designing landscapes.

Kente gardens are derived from an African cloth woven in Africa. The cloth has different symbols woven into it. The kente cloth can be obtained from the cloth reps hierarchy within African civilization.

"One may look at the cloth and tell who the people are who wear it."

The lots which are planted at the Arboretum represent the color arrangements of the Kente cloth.

This is definitely a fun flick but nothing to write home about. If you're cut to see a movie for the heck of it, Money Talks is a Go-To-See! The combination of the established Charlie Sheen and the rising talents of Chris Tucker is a refreshing attempt to diversify the scenario. Tucker plays a loan shark owning, short-tongued, hood dweller (too arrogant for his own good), who comes up short one too many times on the dinners he owes.

Out of the blue, Sheen, who plays a reporter whose career is fading out, uses Tucker in an effort to make exciting news. This is only the beginning. Soon there are diamonds, helicopters, snipers, heavy artillery, French folk, Italian folk, rich folk, poor folk, a girlfriend, a fiancée etc. And as karma has it, Sheen and Tucker bear the burden of finding the pieces and putting them together. The initially incompatible duo put their grips aside for the common desire to live.

The high-life of this movie is without a doubt the finale. The tension bred between those trying to get it and those trying to take it developed into a blast of simulta-

Although the plot was rather predictable, it was made for a good laugh and candid entertainment. No thumbs up, no thumbs down, I give it a thumb to the middle.

Cagers suiting up in Jordan gear

Michael Jordan introduced his signature shoe label to the world on Sept. 9 in New York. The apparel line will bear his surname and spontaneously become the third largest behind Nike and Reebok; once operations begin in November.

The Jordan line is a subsidiary of Nike, but Phil Knight, the Nike CEO, will not be making the decisions. Michael Jordan is said to have total control.

The Jordan line will completely outfit the athlete from head to toe and feature the Jumpman logo. The logo is an actual silhouette of Michael with arms and legs spread as he soars through the sky.

Prices are set to range in price between $60 to $150.

A&T enters the picture as one of the three division one men’s basketball teams to feature the Jordan gear.

A&T was selected in part because of Michael’s wish to support a historically black colleges and universities and in part due to it’s strong basketball tradition.

The partnership is scheduled to last five years and Jordan will outfit every need of the team and coaching staff; except shoes. The shoes for the team will provided through the terms of a previous deal with Nike.

Lady Aggies dive into swimming

By Sonia Clark-Murray
Staff Writer

History is in the making this year with the Lady Aggies swim team. This is a first, as A&T has never had a women’s swimming team. There was a men’s team from 1961-1969, 1970-1971 and 1972-1973.

According to Dr. Willie Burden, Chairman of North Carolina A&T’s Athletic Department, the Lady Aggie swim team was added after a recent survey on campus. The results of the survey named swimming as something that interested the students. Students also showed an interest in bowling and a bowling team was started last semester.

More importantly, the survey showed that two-thirds of the opportunities on campus are for men, while only one-third are for women.

“Our goal is to increase opportunities for women on our campus,” Dr. Burden said. For the first year or two, Dr. Burden expects the team to develop their talents and the individual swimmers to fulfill their own personal goals.

The team is being coached by Denise Adams, a graduate of Frostburg State University in Maryland. She has coached swimming at other levels for over 20 years, with this being her first college team. Adams, also known as Coach D, says she hopes to have a full squad, promote Aggie pride and build a swim legacy at A&T.

In addition, she hopes that with the swim team, perspective students will see an opportunity to get a scholarship that was not there before. “Now maybe athletes would come to A&T before going elsewhere,” says Adams.

The team has seven full scholarships.

In terms of long term, Coach Adams hopes to increase the amount of interest in minority swimming. Of the 4,300 registered swimmers in the U.S., only two dozen are minorities.

Including A&T, there are only three women’s swimming teams in the MEAC division.

Dr. Burden is optimistic about A&T’s role in swimming for sport. "We are hoping to lead the effort in swimming at HBCUs".

The lack of minority swimmers was the key to Rhonda Jones joining the team. "Many minorities don’t swim,” says Jones, a senior. The biology major says she is eager to strike out on new ground. Clarissa Goodson, also a member of the Lady Aggies, had the same thought in mind.

“I wanted to do something different and I wanted to do something with A&T,” says the Jacksonville native.

The lady Aggies will be competing against the likes of Howard, UNC-Chapel Hill, Florida A&M and Duke. All but one of the matches, November 17 (vs. Fлегther) are away. Adams explained that since is the teams first season ever, none of the other schools have fit A&T into their budgets.

Despite the fact that they are going up against seasoned swimmers, the Lady Aggies all agreed that they are not concerned about the competition. “We are not Olympians, but we’re going to do okay,” says Wilson native Shaunna Allen.

Freshmen Janice Reseta says she is not intimidated at all. The Hillsborough native has been swimming for eight years and says she is just “excited to be on the team.”

At a recent practice, there was no doubt that the ladies are motivated. According to sophomore Crystal Wright, “Although we are new, we have a lot of energy and that is going to help keep us together.”

Mashandra Dowell, a landscape architecture major, adds “Everyone is giving 100 percent.”

Whether they win or lose this season, the team hopes to make their mark in A&T sports history. “We want to prove that we are just as good as the other teams,” says freshman Diane Rogers. But they know that they have their work cut out for them.

In reference to other Aggie sports teams, Angela Rappa says, “Every-one else is so well known.”

A&T gridders hope to recover in Indy

The Aggies venture up to Indianapolis, Indiana this Saturday to re-deem themselves from last week’s disappointment to Hampton in what was an awesome defensive battle.

The Aggies will meet the Tigers of Tennessee State in the RCA Dome for the annual Circle City Classic. A&T defeated the Jaguars of Southern University in their first visit to the Classic in 1994, 22-21.

Tennessee State will meet the Aggies sporting a misleading 1-3 overall record. The Tigers should prove to be tough challenge for the team, in that they have led every opponent at half time. Coach Bill Hayes has taken a careful appraisal of the Tigers and feels that in order for the Aggies to be successful, the offense must make the correct reads to exploit the big play opportunities presented by the specific defensive schemes of the Tigers.

The offense should be able to take advantage of the fact that Tenn. St. will be starting two freshmen. Another concern will be Lamar Carter, who is the Tigers’ number one pass-rusher. The 6-2, 255lb. defensive end will require special attention.

Coach Hayes adamantly stressed that there offense, “must be patient and do what we do best; and we must have confidence in what we do.”

Starting QB, Ben Garrett has recovered from a slight shoulder injury and is scheduled to start. As always, the Aggies must run well in order to create offensive balance and allow the ball control system to operate.

Top 20 MEAC rushers Maurice Smith (sixth), Reginald Shufford (12th) and Michael Basnight (15th) can provide the foundation for that balance.

On defense the “Rottwellers” on the defensive line must maintain their strong play, while the defensive backs must step up and play better than a 37th ranked pass defense (second in the MEAC). They will be tested by Pitt transfer Leon Murray at quarterback and All-American candidate wide-receiver Juan Hall.

Michigan transfer Tyrone Butterfield is also a threat at wide-out. Hopefully, Jerome Knight, who leads the MEAC tackles, will continue to “zzap” opponents from sideline to sideline. Fellow MEAC tackles and sacks leader, Troy Pelchak, should assist Knight. Defensive tackle James Clyburn is returning and is expected to halt inside running.

If A&T can avoid costly turnovers and pass effectively, which will open running lanes. Tenn. St. will not enjoy their visit to Indianapolis. Maurice Smith and Mike Basnight should get “nice” on the turf and provide a few big runs. The Aggies cannot afford to give the Tigers a large head start.

Aggies ‘do it up at hair showcase

The Gamma Chapter of Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority, Inc. presented its annual Fall Hair Show on Sept. 18 in the Student Union Ballroom. The purpose of the event was to showcase the talent of local hair salons and beauticians, as well as to raise funds that support the Greensboro Urban Ministries. Tanya James of 102 Jamz emceed the event.

Several current A&T students participated in the show by modeling the latest hairstyles created by area salons. Aggies Jocelyn Crawford, Christina Brim, Nartasha Davis and Monique Foster all modeled hairstyles done by Krisha of Reba’s Hair Designs. Natalie Sutton also modeled a hairstyle created by a student at Dudley School of Cosmetology. Other featured salons were Cut Up & Dye, N-Vogue, and representatives from Mary Kay Beauty Cosmetics.

“We’re glad it turned out as successful as it did,” said Tashima Ricks, Sigma Gamma Rho epistoleus. “And in the process we were able to get a lot of canned goods to the Urban Ministries as well as educate the students how to take care of their hair.”

Free manikures were given by Greensboro Technical Community College. Door prizes were given to spectators from the sponsors. Some prizes included gift baskets courtesy of Dudley Products and some coupons for services at the various salons. This year was the first year that Sigma Gamma Rho held the event on A&T's campus. The chapter stated that it would like to have another hair show during the spring of 1998, but plans for the seasonal show are not definite. Latinicia Henry, Sigma Gamma Rho President, said: ‘I thought that the turnout was nice. We really appreciate Aggie support and the support of Dudley Products. We know that the donations will benefit worthy causes such as the Greensboro Urban Ministries.

Admission for the show was $1, with two canned goods which were donated to the Urban Ministries.
