The Register, 2002-04-01

North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digital.library.ncat.edu/atregister

Recommended Citation
North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University, "The Register, 2002-04-01" (2002). NCAT Student Newspapers. 1262.
https://digital.library.ncat.edu/atregister/1262

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Digital Collections at Aggie Digital Collections and Scholarship. It has been accepted for inclusion in NCAT Student Newspapers by an authorized administrator of Aggie Digital Collections and Scholarship. For more information, please contact iyanna@ncat.edu.
Crowned in SGA

The elections were filled with surprises

By T.J. Moore
Register Staff

This year’s SGA elections had all two of the main elements for a movie: surprise and drama.

However, in some of the major executive races, there were no surprises at all. The 2002-2003 SGA president is Nashett Garrett. Garrett received 700 votes (66 percent) while her opponent, William Levette received 465 votes or 40 percent of the total.

The race for vice president of internal affairs was won by Paulette Foster, who received 698 votes (61 percent) while her opponent Jose V. Barros received 443 (39 percent) of the votes.

While soaking in the realization of their win, Foster had these thoughts. “It feels great,” she said of the victory. “It’s good to know that the student body supports me in my efforts to make A&T extremely successful.”

In one of the biggest upsets of the night, Brian “Barbados” Holder defeated Karen Fairey in the race for vice-president of external affairs, with 56 percent of the student vote.

What made Holder’s win such an upset was the fact that he did not have the flyers or the gimmicks of the other candidates and the students responded to that.

Holder thinks that the students responded to his popularity. “My campaign was not about flyers,” Holder said. “It was about people knowing me and trusting me.”

There was also some controversy in the external affairs race. Holder’s opponent, Karen Fairey, went on 102 Jam FM morning show on March 27, the day of the elections, and criticized the Student Government Association and its relationship with the student body.

Those who heard Fairey’s comments on the radio may have been inclined to vote for Holder.

The race for Miss A&T wasn’t as close as people had anticipated. Delta Sigma Theta member Melissa Shade was arguably the favorite in the race but lost toassy. Miss A&T had an overwhelming 815 votes (61 percent) to Shade’s (30 percent).

After Myatt gained her composure, she had this to say about her win. “Words can’t describe what it feels like to know that all this hard work that I and my wonderful teammates have put into allowed me to be crowned Miss A&T,” said Myatt. “I thank God for the way that he has worked miraculously.”

Speech and Communication hold 10th NABJ short course

Meanwhile, in the “Newsroom” Group B went through the TV experience. The professionals guided the students as they went through the newsgathering, production and editing process. Members of Group B ventured out of the confines of Crosby Hall to produce and film stories around campus and throughout Greensboro.

Later in the day, the students had a chance to audition for anchor of a half-hour news program. This optional event had positions for two news anchors, sports anchors and weathercasters.

Short Course lead instructor Anthony Wilson expressed surprise at the skills that the students possessed.

“We have a lot of very talented people in the program. They have more talent that we expected,” he said. Because of this talent, for the first time in the history in the program, the short course would tape two newscasts instead of one.

Please see RESULTS, Page 2

Hall of Fame ceremony honors service in defense

Randy St.Clair
Register Staff

Two ROTC graduates from N.C. A&T were honored for their commitment and courage in the United States armed forces by being inducted in the A&T Hall of Fame.

Retired Col. Alfred A. Scenck and Col. Joyce M. Walker were recognized for their guest speaker, retired Brig. Gen. Clara L. Adams-Edeiner, called the five cornerstones of serving in defense: commitment, concern, candor, courage and caring.

“African Americans have always participated in defense of military even though they weren’t always appreci- ated,” said Adams-Edeiner. “African Americans have made tremendous contribu- tions to defense by their commit- ment to excellence and determination to succeed, by their concern and interest in knowing what’s going on around them, by their candor, by their courage and by their ability to care.”

The ceremony was the fifth of its kind

Please see FAME, Page 3

INDEX

News 2 E-Vibes 6
Opinion 4 Sports 7

Meredith Egletti/Register Staff

From left to right - Nashett Garrett won in her quest for SGA president, Brooke Myatt was crowned Miss A&T, and without a campaign, Brian “Barbados” Holder won in the race for vice president for external affairs, and Paulette Foster won convinc- ingly over Jose Barros for vice president of internal affairs.
Durham journalists speak at Moore lecture

The department of speech and communication at N.C. A&T has named its lecture series in honor of the late Dr. Richard E. Moore, a distinguished journalist, educator and spokesman for A&T. The inaugural Richard E. Moore Memorial Lecture will be held at 6 p.m. April 11 at the Smith Hall Ballroom. Moore served at the helm of A&T’s Public Relations Office for more than 28 years and in 1998, he was appointed assistant vice chancellor for university relations, a position he served as until his death in 1995.

An associate professor in the speech communication and mass arts department, Moore was the organizer of the University’s Mass Communications Conference.

A team of journalists whose work won the online equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize will be the featured speakers. Jim Shamp and Joe Hart of the Durham Herald-Sun will present a lecture and multimedia demonstration of “Touching Hearts, A Story of Hope and Help in Nicaragua,” which appeared Feb. 1, 2001, as a special, 24-page section and an online presentation at www.heraldsun.com/heart.

Shamp, the Herald-Sun’s health and science reporter, and Weiss, the newspaper’s multimedia editor whose work appears online and in print, spent 10 days in the city of León, Nicaragua.

Their assignment was to document the life-saving surgeries performed by a team of doctors, nurses and other medical professionals - most from Duke University Medical Center and Boston Children’s Hospital - who specialize in children’s heart ailments.

Grad honored

Willie Dierse, senior vice president of global procurement at GlaxoSmithKline, will be the honoree and speaker for N.C. A&T Chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma National Honor Society induction ceremony. The ceremony will be held 6:30 p.m. Monday, April 11, in Memorial Union - Stalling Ballrooms.

Dierse received his B.S. degree in business administration from N.C. A&T in 1977. Dierse held leadership roles in purchasing for SmithKline Beecham’s Worldwide Supply Operations and Clinical Laboratories.

Dorn named

Dr. Gladys Hope Franklin White, a retired associate professor at N.C. A&T, has a new women’s dormitory named in her honor at Hampton University.

Dr. William R. Harvey, president of Hampton University, dedicated the new 40,059-square-foot complex at the University’s 109th Founders Day program.

"This building couldn’t have been named after a better person who has taken ownership in our vision and been a more loyal daughter of Hampton University," said Harvey. "She has let her life do the singing."

White has been the recipient of the Hampton University National Alumnae-Hatums-Large Award and many other honors.

She is a reading specialist at A&T and as the first director of the A&T Reading Laboratory. She organized the university’s reading program and developed its girls’ reading-special major.

Omege week uplifts community

Lloyd Mckens (left), an 11th grader at Dudley High School, speaks with Allen Ingram, a member of the Mu Psi chapter of the Omegas.

By Jason Boyd

N.C. A&T was the host site for Omega Week, which was held from March 25-28.

The week, sponsored by A&T’s Mu Psi chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Inc., is designed to uphold the principles of the fraternity while at the same time assist in the upliftment of the community.

"Omega Week always happens during the week the chapter was founded," said Quentin Brown, fraternity president and member of the Alpha Mu chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc.

One of the events associated with the week was the idea that the majority of African-American women are "gold diggers."

"We make a trip out to the movies they don’t even walk up to the counter. They just stand behind you waiting for the guy to pay," said Lamonte Rolle, junior chemical engineering major.

"It’s a way down to how you were brought up and raised," said Tracy Thompson, sophomore computer science major.

On Tuesday, March 26, the Omega provided a health awareness information table outside in the quad from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. The table was decorated with pamphlets and brochures on health issues that commonly affect African-American. Literature about ickle cell anemia, HIV and correct condom usage were available. Free ask pens and condoms were also on hand courtesy of the Sebastian Health Center.

"Often people talk about campus health awareness and not do anything. They just get the informa- tion out to the public. It’s one thing to talk about it, we like to get down in the trenches and do things hands on," Brown said.

On Wednesday, March 27, the Mu Psi chapter decided to give back to the community by mentoring a group of high school males.

The Omegas traveled to the cafeteria of Dudley High School to eat and talk with the young men one-on-one about life and how to achieve their goals.

"Omegas are helping me decide on the important decisions I need for college," said 11th grader Justin Onipot.

Fraternity members such as senior engineering major Allen Ingram and Demrick Tabron, a doctoral candidate in electrical engineering, believe that positive African-American male role models are exactly what the children of today need.

"Dudley being a black high school, I think it’s important that these kids see a black fraternity and goals and aspirations. The three most important things they need to learn how to set goals, work toward those goals and achieve their goals," said Onipot.

Fransene Scott is Dudley High School’s coordinator for communities in schools.

She explained the time the Omegas spend mentoring her students will pay dividends in the future.

"We have a lot of young men that we want to connect with positive older men from the community and the Omegas are ideal role models. We want our students to know that the Omegas are interested in them because the Omegas are a major community resource," Scott said.

"If we increase Dudley’s graduation rate back into the 90s, then it decreases the amount of kids that will end up in the juvenile system. Mentoring will help mold their lives the right way," said Ms. McClusky.

It’s been established that the Latinos Hughes Memorial Poetry Night Thursday, March 28, in the Memorial Student Union Ballroom. The program included a DJ and an open mic for any Lupe who wanted to showcase his lyrical talents.

"We wanted to give the campus the opportunity to see how talented they are by expressing themselves," Brown said.

Dr. Jeffries is named Outstanding Achievement Award winner

Dr. Jeffries is named Outstanding Achievement Award winner

Dr. Howard L. Jeffries, professor of mass communication at N.C. A&T University Police reported the following incidents during the time period of March 20-March 27.

Larceny

Two male students reported their Earth Science textbooks were taken from Blueford Library where they had been studying. They left the books unattended on a table for a short period of time.

MV Accident

A vehicle operated by a male student was traveling west in the main drive at the Aggie Inn collided with a vehicle operated by another male student.

He was attempting to make a left turn onto the main drive from the first parking lot near the student center.

There was an estimated $200 damage to each vehicle. No injuries were reported.

Controlled Substance

An off-campus student and a Cooper Hall resident were found to be in possession of marijuana cigarettes on the south side of Cooper Hall. This case has been forwarded to student affairs.

Larceny

A female student reported that her vehicle was broken into and entered in the rear passenger window on Luther Street. Approximately 50 CDs were taken. There were no suspects.

Vandalism

An off-campus male student reported that the driver’s side door window of his vehicle on Luther Street was broken, possibly in an attempt to gain entry, however no property was taken from the vehicle.

Incident

Female staff of Crosby Hall reported a subject running through the hallway wearing a gorilla mask and frightening people. A male student around the age of 18 was located and the mask confiscated. This incident was forwarded to student affairs.

Dr. Jeffrey is named Outstanding Achievement Award winner

Dr. Jeffrey is named Outstanding Achievement Award winner

Dr. Howard L. Jeffries, professor of mass communication at N.C. A&T University Police reported the following incidents during the time period of March 20-March 27.

Larceny

Two male students reported their Earth Science textbooks were taken from Blueford Library where they had been studying. They left the books unattended on a table for a short period of time.

MV Accident

A vehicle operated by a male student was traveling west in the main drive at the Aggie Inn collided with a vehicle operated by another male student.

He was attempting to make a left turn onto the main drive from the first parking lot near the student center.

There was an estimated $200 damage to each vehicle. No injuries were reported.

Controlled Substance

An off-campus student and a Cooper Hall resident were found to be in possession of marijuana cigarettes on the south side of Cooper Hall. This case has been forwarded to student affairs.

Larceny

A female student reported that her vehicle was broken into and entered in the rear passenger window on Luther Street. Approximately 50 CDs were taken. There were no suspects.

Vandalism

An off-campus male student reported that the driver’s side door window of his vehicle on Luther Street was broken, possibly in an attempt to gain entry, however no property was taken from the vehicle.

Incident

Female staff of Crosby Hall reported a subject running through the hallway wearing a gorilla mask and frightening people. A male student around the age of 18 was located and the mask confiscated. This incident was forwarded to student affairs.

Do not hallucinate.

Dr. Jeffrey is named Outstanding Achievement Award winner

Dr. Jeffrey is named Outstanding Achievement Award winner

Dr. Howard L. Jeffries, professor of mass communication at N.C. A&T University Police reported the following incidents during the time period of March 20-March 27.

Larceny

Two male students reported their Earth Science textbooks were taken from Blueford Library where they had been studying. They left the books unattended on a table for a short period of time.

MV Accident

A vehicle operated by a male student was traveling west in the main drive at the Aggie Inn collided with a vehicle operated by another male student.

He was attempting to make a left turn onto the main drive from the first parking lot near the student center.

There was an estimated $200 damage to each vehicle. No injuries were reported.

Controlled Substance

An off-campus student and a Cooper Hall resident were found to be in possession of marijuana cigarettes on the south side of Cooper Hall. This case has been forwarded to student affairs.

Larceny

A female student reported that her vehicle was broken into and entered in the rear passenger window on Luther Street. Approximately 50 CDs were taken. There were no suspects.

Vandalism

An off-campus male student reported that the driver’s side door window of his vehicle on Luther Street was broken, possibly in an attempt to gain entry, however no property was taken from the vehicle.

Incident

Female staff of Crosby Hall reported a subject running through the hallway wearing a gorilla mask and frightening people. A male student around the age of 18 was located and the mask confiscated. This incident was forwarded to student affairs.

Dr. Jeffrey is named Outstanding Achievement Award winner

Dr. Jeffrey is named Outstanding Achievement Award winner

Dr. Howard L. Jeffries, professor of mass communication at N.C. A&T University Police reported the following incidents during the time period of March 20-March 27.

Larceny

Two male students reported their Earth Science textbooks were taken from Blueford Library where they had been studying. They left the books unattended on a table for a short period of time.

MV Accident

A vehicle operated by a male student was traveling west in the main drive at the Aggie Inn collided with a vehicle operated by another male student.

He was attempting to make a left turn onto the main drive from the first parking lot near the student center.

There was an estimated $200 damage to each vehicle. No injuries were reported.

Controlled Substance

An off-campus student and a Cooper Hall resident were found to be in possession of marijuana cigarettes on the south side of Cooper Hall. This case has been forwarded to student affairs.
FAME
Continued from page 1
ence degree in industrial electronics in 1970, has served 29 years in the armed forces where he received honors such as Defense Superior Service Medal, Legion of Merit, the Mentioned Service Medal, the Joint Service Commendation Medal, the Army Commendation medal and the Army Achievement medal.

"This is where I got my start," said Schenk. "For 29 years I served very proudly. and was caring as well as committed, showing concern and very conded."

"N.C. A&T gave me the preparation, ROTC gave me the will. I could not have done it without a legion of supporters who believed in me."

Schenk also gave credit to Adams-
Edner for her courage serving in a time where women were not welcomed in defense.

"I am eternally grateful to Brig. Gen. Adams-Edner," he said. "The road wasn't always smooth, but it's good to know that there were people that came before you to make it a little smoother."

Waller was just as grateful to Schenk about the opportunity to serve her country and her people.

"Nurses rule!" she said in response of

NABJ
Continued from page 1
Day two went exactly like the first. Now, it was Group A's turn to go and cover stories while Group B learned in the sessions.

Later in the night, the students met with the Triad Black Media

Professionals at a reception. After those festivities, the producers from groups A&B met into the night and early morning preparing rundowns for the taping.

On the final day, the groups spent their time taping the two shows. During that time, the students really felt the pressure of deadlines. The students, from the first to the last day felt the pressure and responded.

"It was well. I felt like I was in boot-camp," said Bennett's Kyra Dillard. "I even though Dillard viewed the course as a bootcamp, she didn't hesitate to praise the program. "Programs like this, when well structured, can benefit students in the long run," she said.

For one student, the experience was all about appreciation.

"You can appreciate deadlines more and the editing process and voice tracking more," said junior broadcast major

Vette Carrow.

For another, the experience was a revolution to the up and comers trying to get their feet in the door.

"I felt like it was an eye opener," said broadcast major Rikki Smith. "It revealed to you the things you need to know about the industry and its also an opportunity to network with some wonderful people."

A&T students take part in state, national Model U.N. conferences

BY DELAY JONES
Regular Contributor

Dr. Earnest Mosely, the "Dean of Gibb's Hall," is returning with the Model U.N. team from the national conference March 26-31 and preparing for the state event.

"The debate team itself is based essentially to mimic the actual U.N., in debates and procedures," said Mosely. "Ultimately, it aids the students to engage in active learning, and also to help establish an insight to networking." The Model U.N. club has existed since 1989.

In the Model U.N., each school attending is given three or four counties to represent. A&T has been given the U.K., Israel, Iraq and Afghanistan to research and prepare valid arguments regarding world issues.

After the delegations have been established, the groups are broken into comnittees: Humanitarian, Financial, Political and Security Council. The only time that a school has to attend the Security Council is when it has a country that is actually a part of it (U.S., U.K., France, Russia and China).

"The group is a positive endeavor, everybody works together no matter what status they obtain," said Kelly

Ebron, a member of the Model U.N. Ebron will attend the state conference, April 11-14 in Winston-Salem, along with the rest of the group. It is held in the fall and spring of each year, and each year students grow in understand-standing the procedures. The knowldge they acquire at these conferences can be applied to any number of fields.

The state conference shows the level of knowledge by A&T students, as well as students from Bennett College, Central, WS State, Johnson C. Smith, Fayetteville State and St. Augustine; also Wake Forest, Salem, Greensboro College, Catawba University, Pfeiffer, and U.N.C.:

The National Model U.N. is considered a "separate entity" from the state conference. Although the state conference is open to more delegations from A&T than the National Model U.N., held in New York, the final ranking at the national event has no impact on the classification into the state.

Aggie delegates have brought back many trophies and awards. At last year's event in Charlotte, A&T had the Secretary General on its team (Shanita Dove) and gained distinguished delegate awards. A&T has won 60-70 awards Model U.N. awards for excellence.
It's time to take action

We've struggled through oppression, suppression and poverty. We've had the duty of balancing family and work, and when family came before work we were fired. We had to prove through the thickest looks, inequality and disrespect. Disrespect was when you called me nigger. Disrespect was when you attacked me because you feared me. Disrespect was when you belittled my existence to just 3/5 of a man when we were all "created equal."

Yeah, let's talk about disrespect. Let's talk about being labeled as someone who is socially disadvantaged, let's talk about the stereotype of dumb, black and no good. Let's talk about the many double standards that exist. Like, do as I say and not as I do, or same job but unequal pay.

Things have changed but some has remained the same, and because of the hypocrisy of this nation, to set laws but yet break them, our country is in a rut. It may not be as obvious as it was 30 or 40 years ago, but it is still exists. The prejudice, the racial profiling -- when will it stop?

When will this nation, that is supposed to be founded under the principles of Christianity, begin to live the life that symbolizes it. Turmoil still echoes in the streets in black, impoverished neighborhoods. The cry for a leader who will do what it is that he or she says is desired in a society that lacks, so it seems, any leadership.

It's time for a change.

It's time to get back to the root of why we're here. It's time to establish ourselves as legitimate citizens with a voice that deserves to be heard.

There's absolutely nothing wrong with enjoying the finer things in life, by all means, it is true to be successful, don't limit yourself. But by no means should gaining success mean forgetting about those who don't have the opportunities you have.

African Americans have made great strides in not just accepting inequality to be the norm. African Americans have advanced in ways that no one thought they could. We hold positions in the Senate and in the House of Representatives. It's truly a blessing to see that time heals wounds.

But what I'm not satisfied with is that when we African Americans, get into more positions we think that that's it. Not to mention there's so much more work to be done. We still have to change people's perceptions about politics and let them know getting involved doesn't hurt.

If we really want to change how we are treated and viewed we must begin to take active roles in the area, that's treating us and viewing us in ways that are contrary to who and what we really are. The answer isn't in violence, the answer isn't in hating or payback, but the answer is standing up and making our needs and your concerns known to those who are in positions of leadership.

The bar has to be raised for African Americans. We have to start caring because things haven't changed as much as we would like to believe they have. Black men are still treated as less than white men, women are still considered inferior to men, racism still exists, the gap between those who have and those who don't continues to widen and the rich keep getting richer and the poor even poorer.

That's the truth loud and clear. It's our duty to change that. It's our duty to make a name for ourselves and to make the next generation proud of our accomplishments, and the fact that we worked hard to give them an opportunity to succeed.
One of our job requirements includes “being yourself.”

How can you grow as an individual if you’re being forced into a mold?

At Ernst & Young, we empower you to push the boundaries. We offer the chance to generate creative ideas that really count. On our teams everyone has a role to play and something to contribute, so not only do you have a voice but you can make a difference with clients and co-workers alike. Break the mold.
Verge models steal the show at annual fashion competition

Verge came out on top at the second annual Fashion Show Competition held March 22 in Harrison Auditorium.

The event, sponsored by TI04 Productions, featured modeling troupes from Shaw University, Fayetteville State University, East Carolina University and N.C. A&T.

A Look at the Stars by Trina Logan

"Raw Essence" from Shaw University opened the show. The theme for their fashion disaster was "Resurrection of Fashion."

The hottest part of their show was the model who wore a red, white and black dress with a "Jill Kim MTV Award type" bust. The announcer moaned, grinned and rolled on stage as if he felt the same pain and agony that the audience felt watching the performance.

"Black Millennium" from FSU presented "Killer Instruments." The models dressed in white and black outfits matching their giant banner.

The models had a very nice routine and everybody clapped and laughed for the return of the outrageously stunning announcer from last year's competition. He came out in a gold sequined outfit with what looked like a matching choker, twisting and turning more than 140.

Ed Jones, president of Black Millennium, closed the scene with a very nice modeling routine with a lot of attitude.

During intermission, Amaris Howard did a great job of reciting a positive, deep and inspirational poem about black culture. Alex McNell won a pair of tickets to Carowinds from Jones and Jenkins by winning the percolator dancing contest.

The queen in Verge's modeling troupe came out next, with a performance titled "Airika Bumbaddah." Verge members shocked the audience by entering through the aisles wearing very little clothing, dancing and making various screaming noises in an outstanding reenactment of the '80s movie classic "Coming To America."

"The Lion King" theme music played while the audience was invited to the land of Zamonda. A black and gold lion's head dropped down on the stage. Stephen McQueen was featured as the Lion chosen to protect the queen from danger.

The queen, portrayed by Josina Meade, worked the runway in black and gold. Her crooner, Donald Grissom, sang, "She's your queen to be..." as the whole crowd laughed and cheered.

But Verge's performance was far from over. Next, Verge modeled in front of a blue and silver banner that stated, "Verge The Cutting Edge of Fashion." Male models came out with Verge spray-painted on their shirts.

The women wore black tops with a silver Verge logo, and jean skirts with Verge spray-painted in black. Numerous assualt skin cutoff outfits sparked things up.

EUCO Omniace Modeling Troupe's theme was "Expressions of Freedom."

Finally, after the extremely long-awaited red carpet, the final tally was in. Raw Essence came in fifth place, Black Millennium in fourth place, Omniace in third place, Couture in second place and Verge with first place.

"I am ecstatic about the outcome. We put forth a lot of effort and it paid off. I am glad that we had the chance to perform with all of these talented schools and organizations," said Verge president Mitchell McCraw.

"I'm not disappointed in any way by the outcome. We put in time and effort and it paid off. We got a prize and they had a high obtain performance. Verge did this year and we will see them again on April 6 in the Carolina Theatre," said Patrick Lynch, president of Couture and last year's winner.

We have a surefire way to predict the future.
Hire you to invent it.

Cyberspace controls and laser defense systems came as no surprise to the U.S. Air Force. In fact, they came off our drawing boards. No wonder we are always looking to hire the best and brightest. You can leverage your degree immediately and get hands-on experience with some of the most sophisticated technology on earth. To find out how to get your career off the ground, call 1-800-423-USAF or visit our Web site at airforce.com.
Aaggies place 35 athletes on All-Academic team

By Chris Wallace

The NCAA Tournament wrapped up tonight with the National Championship Game. April 1, 2002

Student-athletes honored

By Terry Farrow

The Lady Aaggie softball team is back in the swing of things this spring as they start the race for a M.E.C. Championship. However, they have gotten off to a slow start, winning just four of their first 22 games. Their most recent defeat was 21-0 at the hands of Campbell University.

"Lack of experience may be holding the Aaggies back as they have struggled early this season," said head coach Keith Shumate.

"We've disappointed early on, without making excuses we have had a ton of injuries and we think if we can weather the storm we will be a tough customer come tournament time," said head coach Keith Shumate. The Aaggies have a lot of new faces with transfers coming in over the summer but that's the only difference. The Lady Aaggies will be a key to a championship.

Shumate feels that junior outfielder, first baseman, and pitcher Alexis Love is "a jack of all trades" and can do it all. "My role is to help in any way I can, because I play so many positions," Love said. "I just do what I am called on to do."

Smith is one sophomore who would like to make the best of this last year down memory lane: "I would love to go out in any way I can, because I play so many positions." Love said, "I just do what I am called on to do."

The Lady Aaggies are all year.

They'd have to look elsewhere for leadership this season, but she hopes to find it among her underclassmen.

"That's no excuse," said Loftin of the team's youth and inexperience. "We need to keep hitting the ball and keep our heads in the game and keep our moral up."

The Lady Aaggies look to rebound as they host Norfolk State on April 5 and host the 2002 NBA Draft Invitational April 5-6 in Greensboro.

Charles Harris/SA&T (2)

Sophomore outfielder Lluvia Margas (No. 10, at left) and junior pitcher and third baseman Adrienne Booker (No. 12, pictured above) have continued to grow despite the team's 4-18 record this year.

Who is the NBA's Most Valuable Player?

By Chris Wallace

The NBA season is winding down to its end and things are beginning to clear up as far as the playoffs and postseason accolades are concerned.

Are they really, though? The Western Conference race has been so dominating this year that they make the East look like a JV. NBA teams at 31-39, the Miami Heat still have a chance to make the playoffs. However, if you go 31-39 in the West, you may be behind for the NBA draft.

This season has provided its share of surprises (Nets, Wizards, Pistons, Celtics), disappointments (Heat, Pacers, Raptors, Nets, Bucks), mainstays (John Stockton, Karl Malone, Gary Payton), injury bug (Grant Hill, Vince Carter, Michael Jordan) and outages (Kenyon Martin). No, Rashard Wallace does not quit.

It'll be a difficult task selecting candidates for postseason awards, especially the MVP award, but here are my top candidates.

Jason Kidd, the Nets franchise 'savior, has lifted the once-unheralded Nets into a favorite to represent the East in the NBA Finals. Kidd leads the league in triple-doubles with eight, second in the NBA in assists per game (9.9) and third in the NBA in steals per game (2.2). At 45-25, the Nets are 23 games ahead of last season's pace and look to establish home court advantage throughout the Eastern Conference Playoffs.

Chris Webber has the high-flying Sacramento Kings a game ahead of the Lakers for best record in the NBA as of March 28. At 50-19, they are just ahead of the Lakers (50-20) and Spurs (49-22) and have a favorable schedule down the stretch. Webber, since returning from an early season injury, has posted averages of 24.5 points per game, 10.3 rebounds per game and 4.5 assists per game. Also, the Kings are 35-14 since Webber returned from the early-season injury.

The San Antonio Spurs just had a 13-game winning streak, but Tim Duncan threw his name into the mix for serious MVP honors. Duncan, by far the best thing is happening, averaging 25.4 points per game (NBA), 12.7 rebounds per game (1st in NBA) and 2.4 blocks per game (6th in NBA). Duncan also leads the league with 57 double-doubles and has an every power forward in this league from Kevin Garnett to Chris Webber.

Where would the Wizards be without Michael Jordan? They'd probably be getting their things together for the NBA Draft lottery and they'd tell you that Jordan has returned from a three-year absence to average 23.3 points per game (9th in NBA), 5.8 rebounds per game and 5.3 assists per game, and the Wizards, who went only 19-43 last season, are in contention for the Eastern Conference's final playoff spot. If they get in, Jordan should get high MVP consideration and teams should definitely watch out.

Last but not least, my 2001-2002 NBA MVP is none other than Kobe Bryant. Yeah, Shaq is in a class of his own, but Kobe has more than defined his skills as a player. Bryant ranks fifth in the NBA, averaging 23.5 points per game, but it's his tenacious defense that gives him the upper hand. His defining moments may have come just over a week ago in a game at the Sacramento Kings. With 1:18 remaining, Shaq fouled out but Kobe stepped up hitting two clutch baskets in a row to preserve a 92-91 victory. Kobe, who was named to the All-NBA defensive team the previous two seasons, has become even a better defender and a better leader. My 2001-2002 All-NBA teams are: First team: LAL-G- Kobe Bryant, NJ-G- Jason Kidd, SA-F- Tim Duncan, MNE-F- Kevin Garnett and LAL-C- Shaquille O'Neal. Second team: PH-G- Allen Iverson, ORL-G- Tracy McGrady, DAL-F-Dirk Nowitski, WAS-F- Michael Jordan, and SAC-C- Chris Webber. Third team: TOR-G- Vince Carter, SEA-G- Gary Payton, UTH-F- Karl Malone, BO-S-G- Paul Pierce and IND-F-C- Jermaine O'Neal.
As Senior VP of Financial Planning at a major movie studio you could:

O.K. A $93 MILLION BUDGET

HIRE 7,500 EXTRAS

RENT 273 PALM TREES
(and 1 big fan to make them sway)

How do you get a job like this?

www.StartHereGoPlaces.com/biz19
Go here and take the first step toward the career you want.

Start here. Go places.
If you know business and accounting, you can get a job anywhere. Because the skills you learn in business - strategic and analytical thinking, communication, and leadership - are always in demand. In some of the coolest industries in the world. Even in the movies.